The twin British producers-directors are readying "Fame Is The Spur," based on the Howard Spring yarn for Two Cities Films. Production is slated to start in August at the Denham studios in London. Film has been given a $1,000,000 budget with Rank supplying the coin. "Fame" is earmarked for UWP release in this country.

"Present competition between Rank, Korda and others cannot help but strengthen the British film industry," Boulting explained. "We, that is my brother and I, are committed to Rank for one other picture, upon completion of 'Fame Is The Spur.'

"We will attempt to recruit a top American star for either the feminine or male lead. Our plan is to star a British actress with a Hollywood male star or team it just the other way around. I can imagine either Greer Garson or Orson Welles doing the starring roles."

Understood that major reason for the trip was UWP's desire that the British film toppers make a first hand survey of the American distribution market and get acquainted, as much as possible, with the film tastes of the American public. The Boultings will remain here for about three weeks and will make an inspection tour of major studios.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

The scene is La Guardia Field. The time, 10:40 a.m. Just ten minutes late, the "Old Vic Clipper," a specially chartered Pan American Constellation, lands in N.Y., exactly seventeen hours after it took off from Hurn Airport, near Bournemouth, Eng., and disembarks twenty-six members of London's celebrated Old Vic Repertory Theatre. Richard Aldrich, managing director of Theatre Inc., heading the welcome committee, breathes a sigh of relief and whispers to Beatrice Straight, "Now we can cancel that $50,000 accident insurance!"

The Pan American Airways carries out their "perfect service" by avoiding the tedium of the "custom"-ary arrival procedure with an improvised and overflowing bar. The company can have their choice of scotch, bourbon, champagne, beer, orange and tomato juice. All of them pounce on the beverages they have never had on their ration coupons—tomato and orange juice, and they guzzle it with the enjoyment of a Don Birnam at P. J. Clarke's.

Of course, the focal interest of the troupe centers around Vivien Leigh and Larry Olivier. Larry looks somewhat fatigued, after his non-stop schedule of work, which only stopped the night before he left London. He is admittedly nervous about the "Henry IV" debut Monday evening. "So much advance ballyhoo is hard to live up to. I'm afraid we might be a let-down to the build-up and disappoint everyone." (Aside: I should be that disappointed at every opening night!) Vivien, fifteen pounds heavier than the weight she lost during her illness, is more beautiful than ever, although later she confided to me that she felt "drab" next to the beauty of New York. Sweet, modest Vivien! She is such an addition to our scenery that Mayor O'Dwyer ought to pay her for improving the city! Although terribly in demand for every sort of publicity tie-up (in conjunction with "Ceasar and Cleopatra"), she will do nothing, except, perhaps, pose for Harper's and Vogue. She just wants to reunion with old friends and catch up on all the new plays while Larry is busy at the Century. In August, she is re-opening "Skin of Our Teeth" in the West End.

They spent their first evening in town seeing "Pygmalion," which by a strange (?) coincidence also happens to be a Theatre Inc. production. Later, in Gertrude Lawrence's dressing room, where they foregathered with Sir Gerald Campbell, Sir and Lady Cadogan, Cecil Humphreys, Raymond Massey and Melville Cooper, it didn't require any placard to announce, "English is spoken here!" En passant, it is interesting to recall that it was as a supporting player to Gertie in "Private Lives" that Larry made his American debut here 15 years ago. Hollywood would have none of him then because he looked too much like Ronald Colman! (Voice offstage: And since when is that bad!)

NO ROSY FUTURE: Katharine Albert and Dale Eunson's 11-year-old, Joan, will play "Wendy" (opposite a male "Peter Pan") in the Blue Ribbon Stock Co.'s revival of this immortal Barrie classic. A few weeks ago, Joan opened the bill re-creating her original role in "Guest in the House" (co-authored by her Daddy), and saw her name in electric lights. Katie, telling Jed Harris about it, asked, "What is there left for a little girl whose had her name in lights at the age of 11?" "Nothing," retorted Jed, "but to get married and retire!"

SCOOPING AROUND: Well, it's all set and Alfred de Liagre's grey hairs are blond again! Alan Baxter replaces John Beal in the N.Y. company of "Voice of the Turtle" and Boyd Crawford takes over for Hugh Marlowe in the Coast company, teeing off in San Francisco, June 15 . . . Add Broadway's loss is Hollywood's gain and vice versa: Bob Alton returns here for the Nancy Walker musical and Helen Tamiris deserts Rodgers and Hammerstein to replace Jack Cole as dance supervisor at Columbia . . . Morris Ernst off to England, France and Germany for a month's survey, out of which another "The Best Is Yet" will be chronicled . . . After the opening of "Annie Get Your Gun," now skedded for the 16th, Dorothy Fields will just rest on her royalties (until she thinks up a better idea a week later!) at the 125 acre estate she and Eli Lahm have just bought in Brewster, N.Y. . . . If Susan Douglas lands the role of "Beth" in "Little Women" for which she is now testing, Mike Todd is willing to wait until Dave Selznick checks her out before putting F. Hugh Herbert's "Noblesse Oblige" into rehearsal. He's that anxious to have her play the ingenue lead . . . Joan Castle and Jerry Danzig are a new Barberry Rumor . . . If Melville Cooper can arrange his "Pygmalion" schedule, Henry Hathaway wants him to get back into picture harness for a comedy role in "Rue de Madeleine" . . . When the Gene Kellys return to the Hollywood scene again, they'll be "at home" in the new manse they've just bought on Rodeo Drive, where their neighbors will be the Bob Taylors, Jean Hersholts, Joan Fontaine, Charlotte Greenwood, Lili Damita and the Howard Harrises (my brother) . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who as a bachelor was always the envy of the stag line because he had four such beautiful cousins, Flobelle, Margaret, Letitia and Lucille (on the paternal side), now is the proud relative of another beautiful first cousin (on the maternal side). She is his uncle, Grenville Sully's, 17-year-old daughter, Patsy, and she is now in N.Y as the houseguest of his mother, Beth Whiting, while she is trying to carve a career for herself in the theatre. Doug is so excited about her that just before she left for the east, he arranged to have her screen-tested at RKO . . . Frederick Wakeman, whose "The Hucksters" (Farrar and Rinehart) will make many a face blush along Radio Row, will dramatize it for Broadway, but a lot of actors who want to continue their radio careers thrcugh Certain agencies, will steer clear of it! . . . Geraldine Stroock, who won the role of Barbara Stanwyck's younger sister in "Cry Wolf" from 32 other contestants, has advised her N.Y. pals that she has been re-christened "Geraldine Brooke" (any resemblance to "Brook's Costumes" is more than accidental!).

RKO TO SIGN PACT WITH THEATRE MGRS. UNION

New York, May 2.—RKO is expected to put its okay on contract with Motion Picture Theatre Operating Managers & Assistant Managers Guild at a meeting tomorrow. Company today inked two-year deal with cashiers, covering 41 RKO houses in Greater New York and Westchester, following prolonged negotiations. Circuit long ago agreed to majority of managers' demands with exception of clauses governing discrimination on promotions, checkoffs and maintenance of membership.

Cashiers pact is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1945, which means 125 cashiers and secretaries - cashiers in RKO houses will receive back pay totaling approximately $15,000. Apprentice cashiers will start at minimum of $25 with boost to $32 after three years. Cashiers doubling as secretaries get starting minimum of $27 and maximum of $35 after three years. If expected inking of managers pact goes through tomorrow, circuit will lay out approximately $155,000 in retroactive pay, which means managers' net average will be $1,200 and assistants $700. Among clauses already agreed to by circuit some time ago are severance pay ranging from minimum of two weeks up to maximum of 12 after 10 years' service; three-week vacations with pay after five years; sick leave based on circuit policy; 50-hour, six-day week. Managers are asking $85 weekly starting minimum for managers and $40 for assistants. It also asks two-year contract with right to re-open after first year on wages alone.

Washington, May 2.—Effort to curtail further the State Department's foreign information service was defeated in the House today. Chamber, however, tomorrow will vote on whether to end assistant secretary of state, William Benton's shortwave broacasts by Sept. 1.

Light 'n' Airy

by JACK HELLMAN

You'll soon be getting your copy of Fred Wakeman's "The Hucksters" and revel in his satirical treatment of the agency business. By now it is pretty generally known who is who in the no-so-fictional sense and it is bound to prove embarrassing to certain commission men and an oh so big whip-snapping advertiser. Fact that the author was account exec for Foot, Cone & Belding on American Tobacco doesn't leave too much to the imagination on identities. Smartly, Wakeman calls them "fictional characters of a composite nature" which takes him off the limb of libel. Now that the picture rights have been acquired by Metro there are rumblings in the trade of some sort of stoppage action planned by the thinly-disguised characters. It conjures up a parallel situation of some years ago when Orson Welles made "Citizen Kane" and it required no occult powers to know who inspired the name part.

"The Hucksters" makes enjoyable reading for the tradesmen who'll be hep to what's going on down through the long, drawn-out romance, which is skillfully done and the big factor in the picture sale. It's the kind of a book that'll be hard to lay down once you start it. A rough copy has been around and it has been devoured eagerly. Those who read it want another go at it and once the word seeps outside the trade there'll be many printings before it gets the scenarized treatment.

Chicago Film Houses Are Ordered Closed At Night

sion is still being awaited as to the exact time allocated to each industry.

The current ruling, still up for grabs as all theatres and nitery ops await hearings by the ICC, has the theatres, legit and flicker, closed after the 6 p.m. operating curfew.

CHANCE FOR NITERIES

The edict goes into effect Friday. Niteries may continue to operate if they have food licenses and don't use anything but regular house lights for their shows. This rules out all spots and special lighting effects. Bistros which serve only liquor must close.

Heads of Balaban & Katz, Esaness, Schoenstadt, Allied Theatres and other circuits huddled all Thursday afternoon in an effort to adjudicate the 24-hour week so that their houses may remain open after dark and closed, if necessary, during the afternoon. The argument was advanced that if people are in theatres they will not be burning more electricity in their homes and that the theatres would also keep the nonworkers off the streets and provide them with entertainment.

RELIEF DOUBTFUL

Theatres on the first night promised to operate on about 10 per cent of their normal electricity loads (no canopies and no lights as during the war). However, the commission pointed out there will be no exceptions after Friday, so whether theatres and other amusement spots will get relief is doubtful. Nobody has given them permission to stay open and the enforcement agency is the Commonwealth Edison Company, which has the power to shut off the electricity.

Radio nets and stations, classified as essential industry, will remain open, with special elevator service for their staffs. Audience participation shows, such as Don McNeill's "Breakfast Club" will be non-existent.

Talent agencies are in a dither, since they don't know what's going to happen to acts they have booked into closed niteries. Question of club dates is still up for grabs.

Rationing of electric power will continue until at least seven days after the strike has ended, since that is the time necessary to transport sufficient coal to the city. Current supplies will last under the limited condition until some time around June 1. After that, not a watt.

Rest of nation is watching Chicago, with national chaos in the offing if the railroad strike goes through, as threatened, on May 18.

Teitelbaum Prexy of 20th Recording

Switch in exec personnel at 20th Century Recording occurred yesterday, with election of some new officers at a board meeting. Ben Teitelbaum became prez, replacing Charley Clayton, who has left waxery to form a new company. Sylvan Covey was named secretary-treasurer in place of Al Raksin, who has ceased to be active in corp., although both he and Clayton still hold stock in 20th. Al Castillo stays as veepee in charge of production and Jules J. Covey as first veepee.

Concert Artists Drop Radio Division

Chicago, May 2.—Radio division of National Concert Artists here has been dissolved as a result of business drop-off. Lack of Chicago originations is given as reason for fold of Sam Harrington's department, which at one time billed more than $500,000 a year. Concert and lecture divisions remain but all radio bookings will be handled out of the New York office. Harrington ran the original concert booking office when it was an affiliate of NBC.

Arnold Albert Is Given Release By WB

Arnold Albert, Warner Brothers producer, yesterday asked for and received release from his contract with the studio, which had six months to run. Albert started with Warners 11 years ago as a flack under Charles Einfeld. He in turn became a writer and director of shorts, associate producer of features and then a full producer of features. He had just completed his first feature, "The Man I Love."

tion again until after "Bob" is completed.

Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, arrived at the studio yesterday from New York and was closeted with Darryl Zanuck and other execs throughout the day. He made no statement other than to say that the picture will be produced here and not in Europe—indicating that there may have been talk of turning the picture over to the newly organized 20th-Fox London production unit.

A statement by Zanuck announced that Miss Cummins will play the femme lead in "Bob, Son of Battle." Production of the picture will start July 1. The role of "Amber" will "not be filled until after the first month of production on 'Bob, Son of Battle' has been completed." The statement added that shooting on "Forever Amber" will not be resumed until "Bob" is completed The implication was that Miss Cummins' continuance in the part of Amber is contingent on her success in the dog picture.

In any case, this arrangement means that "Amber" won't go before the cameras again before September at the earliest and probability is that it won't be completed in time for release this year.

CAKE, GAGS, TEARS AS HOPE SALUTES BING BIRTHDAY

Friendship of radio's toppers, Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, was demonstrated last night on the event of Bing's birthday. Impromptu appearance of Hope on conclusion of Crosby's broadcast was at once humorous, sentimental and genuine. No scenes were stolen—only the hearts of the audience.

Immediately after Bing's show, Hope stepped onstage via airlock toting a huge cake, bedecked with an estimated 100 candles blazing like a forest fire. Bing gasped, and Hope took over, reciting gagged-up roundelay with his sponsor, Pepsodent, interpolated. Tears came to Crosby's eyes when, on Hope's order, John Scott Trotter's orchestra went into Happy Birthday. On windup, they kissed each other on the forehead.

Wash. Theatres In 'Brown-Out'

Washington, May 2. — Motion picture theatre owners here today announced a voluntary "brown-out" to meet power shortages due to the coal strike. The theatre men, headed by Julian Brylawski, of Warners, placed all houses under wartime restriction. All marquee lighting, electric signs and other display lights are being eliminated. Only lighting will be one or two lamps required for safety of patrons.

Meanwhile, J. Monroe Johnson, director of the ODT, ordered a 25 per cent cut in passenger train service, effective May 10 to conserve coal, and also a reduction of freight shipments. Government may also move to ban conventions to save train space.

SPECIAL EFFECTS BOOM TOLD BY VERN WALKER

The use of special camera effects in picture-making has expanded three-fold in the past five years, according to Vern Walker, head of RKO's process department, who yesterday predicted that its use will be further augmented in the years ahead.

"The war brought on the necessity for the expansion of this type of work," Walker stated, "but it has proved so satisfactory that it will not be abandoned.

"When the building freeze went into effect a short time ago, it halted temporarily the studio plans for a three-story building to house our expanded special camera effects department. Currently, we are dividing our work between the Gower Street studios and the RKO Ranch in the San Fernando Valley."

IA, CONFERENCE ROW MAY STOP WORK AT WB

Producers yesterday started taking steps to clear up labor situation between painters, plasterers and laborers before matter results in work stoppages. First target of unions in squabble, resulting from painters' move to resume handling of certain types of work now performed by plasterers and laborers, is Warners where work stoppage is likely unless situation is cleared by Monday.

Trouble started with signaturing of the AFL ultimatum to the Conference of Studio Unions by plasterers and laborers locals. In retaliation, Painters Local 644, served notice that it would hereafter disregard any working agreements it had with the two unions. Agreements permitted plasterers to handle wall sizing and similar work normally under painter jurisdiction, while laborers did paint pot cleaning, etc., in studio paint shops without being members of Local 644.

Warners was told yesterday by IATSE that it must continue to permit certain laborers to work in its paint shop as laborers. Paint shop laborers draw $1.20 an hour, against regular laborer scale of $1.05 an hour. Unless situation is cleared at the lot, AFL groups may refuse to work with painters, although no public statement as to steps to be taken has been made.

BALL PACT UP TO SAG TRIAL

A. & S. Lyons agency yesterday initiated arbitration proceedings against Lucille Ball before the Screen Actors Guild. Attorney Bentley Ryan, representing the agency, charges actress with "subterfuge" in violation of her agency contract.

"Late last year Miss Ball was 'dropped' by Metro," Ryan explained, "and shortly after she freelanced at 20th-Fox. Around sixty days after her agency contract with A. & S. Lyons expired on Jan. 11, 1946, Miss Ball was signed to a new contract by Metro.

"This is a unique case, as far as arbitration is concerned. We charge that Miss Ball made an oral commitment with Metro at the time she 'dropped' out there for the express purpose of defeating her agency contract. We further claim that the oral commitment, given during the life of her agency contract, is equal in fact as if she would have actually signed."

HUSH! HUSH!!

Metro yesterday started filming "Beginning or the End," atomic bomb story with almost as much secrecy as the government used in developing the atomic bomb itself. Set is closed to everyone except cast and crew actually employed on the picture and they are being special-passed on and off. Special police guard has been detailed to the stage—proving that Film Producer Sam Marx can be just as secretive as a bomb-maker.

Harry Cohn Denied Projection Room OK

Film Spots, Legiters Hit By Coal Strike

Chicago, May 6. — "Closed Until Further Notice" signs were posted in box offices of 283 of Chicago's 334 film theatres over the weekend, as power restrictions, due to coal strike, threatened a complete flicker blackout here.

Executives of Allied Theatres, operating 225 houses; Essaness Circuit with 31 filmeries; Warner Brothers 17 theatres, and RKO with Loop, Palace and Grand, decided to close completely because of inability to meet operating expenses with a four-hour-a-day schedule.

Balaban and Katz Circuit, with six Loop and 43 neighborhood theatres, had decided to try to hold out a few more days, but tonight a radio announcement was made that B & K theatres will be closed after today.

Situation will also affect touring legit and vaude companies which have large quantities of scenery and other equipment that must move in railroad freight cars.

Old Vic Unfolds Exciting Presentation Of 'Henry IV'

New York, May 6.—Old Vic's unfolding at Century tonight before distinguished audience of notables, society, film stars was a brilliant event. English repertory troupe lived up fully to advance notices with volatile presentation of "Henry IV" Part One, making Shakespeare breathe and live on stage. Ralph Richardson's grotesque, fascinating Falstaff was a virtuoso performance. Laurence Olivier's exciting Hotspur was no less brilliant. Michael Warre's Prince Hal, Nicholas Hannen's King lead exceptional supporting cast.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

NAME band leaders are becoming more and more interested in flying to make dates. Fact that generally such jumping is more expensive than other modes of travel is offset by speed of air travel. Jan Garber's crew planed in yesterday from Fort Worth, Texas, in a chartered ship to make opening tomorrow of new Avodon ballroom. Jump cost Garber $1,200, but it was made up by fact he worked a Saturday date in Fort Worth he otherwise could not have made. Sonny Dunham ork will charter a plane to do southwest one-niters when crew closes current stand at Casino Gardens. Vaughn Monroe has bought a plane for his jumps, and his brother is the licensed pilot. Gene Krupa before recently flying east after closing here at Meadowbrook, was attempting to buy a transport from the Army Air Forces.

BEL-TONE Records and Mills Music, Inc. have reached amicable understanding quietly after the publishing firm last week asked the plattery why it had released a recording of one of pub's copyrighted songs without permission. Ditty involved was "That Ain't Right," which was written rather a while back by Nat (King) Cole and Irving Mills, and which was included in "Stormy Weather," 20th-Fox musical made three years ago. The pub firm has accepted the statements of Dick Elwell and Bob Cook, prez and veepee respectively of Bel-Tone, that their waxery was unaware tune was a published item. Contract now has been drawn and royalties are being paid Mills. The disc of "Ain't Right" features Wini Beatty.

UNIQUE plan is currently being discussed between the Marine Corps and Dore Schary. The service outfit would like to have Schary lecture at Marine Corps Separation Centers along with special screenings of his "Till the End of Time," which he made at RKO. The War Department had already commended Schary for making the picture which deals with the average problems facing the typical returning veteran. Film, which deals with problems of three returning Marines, was originally filmed with the cooperation of the Marine Corps.

REPORT of the new bid from film music cutters to align with musicians Local 47 is denied by union. Cutters are reported to have made pitch more than once before but office of International Studio Representative, under whose jurisdiction studio musicians are, has never encouraged affiliation. Cutter group said to number about 100.

LIBRARY of farm noises for possible use in future pictures has been collected by Director Delmer Daves in the course of location filming of Sol Lesser's "No Trespassing" at Kenny's ranch near Sonora. One scene after another has had to be re-shot because of sound interference from mooing cows, cackling hens, bawling calves and croaking crows and bullfrogs. Daves, however, has saved the sound track of these accidentally interpolated calls of the wild and filed them for later use.

PARAMOUNT is making every effort to keep cloak of secrecy well wrapped around titles of the four Frank Loesser songs which Betty Hutton this week will record for "Perils of Pauline." None of the ditties, which are first Loesser has turned in to Par under his new contract, will be released until after the film nationally has been freed for bookings. Idea is that by keeping even titles mum the songs will be fresh when first they hit public on screens.

THERE'S little chance of musicians getting any municipal or state subsidies. That's opinion of those who have tried feelers in right places, following passing of resolution at membership meeting of Local 47 by lobbying of Union Activities Committee. Info is that city and state are too preoccupied with post war problems of housing, roads, expansion, expenses and taxes to even consider adding burden at present time.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Now the foreign ministers turn from a failure to find a means of agreement on Trieste and Venezia-Giula to trying to work out a peace treaty for Romania. But it doesn't look like they'll have any better luck there. At Moscow, the Big Three agreed that Romania should admit members of the two opposition parties, the Peasant and Liberal; that they should assure freedoms of speech, press, assembly, religion, and association, and hold free unfettered secret elections soon. They named the two party representatives, but the two claim they have not been consulted on any policy, even on the budget, that laws are passed and proclaimed without their signature or knowledge; that freedom of the press is restricted by keeping allotments to opposition papers to 30 per cent, and by the typographers union (Communist), cutting out statements, speeches and articles they do not like, including this protest, and that freedom of speech and association has been prevented by violent breakups of their party meetings, sometimes by bullets, and by imprisonments. R. H. Markham, of the Christian Science Monitor, attests to this, and says also that in Transylvania, the Government allots essential items such as iron, coal, shoe leather and so forth only to members of the Left parties. He compares the Peasant and Liberal parties to the Republican and Democratic here, in numerical strength, and says the Communist in Romania, now running the country, did not have pre-war, the numbers or influence of the Communists here.

Courage of Lassie

(Melodrama-Technicolor)

METRO RELEASE. Producer, Robert Sisk. Director, Fred M. Wilcox. Original screenplay, Lionel Houser. Photography, Leonard Smith. Technicolor direction, Natalie Kalmus, Henry Jaffa. Co-director of animal sequences, Basil Wrangel. Editor, Conrad A. Nervig. Musical score, Scott Bradley, Bronislau Kaper. Sound, Douglas Shearer. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Paul Youngblood. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis, Paul Huldschinsky. Costumes, Irene.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village Theatre, Westwood, Calif., May 1, 1946. Running time: 94 MINS.

"Courage of Lassie" is the story of a dog with many appealing moments, somewhat dated now by reason of pivotal war-in-the-Aleutians sequences but possessed, nevertheless, of genuine warmth and human interest. For animal lovers particularly, picture will strike a deep respondent chord, and it should enjoy same type of popularity and box-office grosses which characterized Metro's two previous Lassie films.

Feature is a rare experience in filming wild animal life of the forest, and for first two reels footage is confined almost entirely to camera following a Collie pup, representing Lassie, as he grows up with the denizens of the wild. In many respects, film is reminiscent of Metro's earlier "Sequoia," still recalled because of its extraordinary animal sequences.

Opening sequences of "Lassie" mark an achievement particularly for Fred M. Wilcox, the director, and Basil Wrangel, co-director on animal footage, and picture as a whole reflects creditably upon showmanship of Robert Sisk as producer. Leonard Smith's color photography throughout is outstanding, rich tints in catching the beauty of Lake Chelan region of Washington accentuating high pictorial attraction of film.

Elizabeth Taylor leads off the human players as Lassie's mistress, a child of the outdoors whose belief in her pet knows no bounds. It is enough, first, to make a fine sheep dog of him; then, later, after he has been a war dog sent to the Aleutians where in saving his troop from extermination by the Japs he develops a neurosis which makes a killer out of him, to save his life when the whole country-side is determined that he must be destroyed.

There is a courtroom scene with Frank Morgan quietly pleading for the life of the dog which must compare favorably with any plea yet witnessed on the screen. It carries pathos, and is the dramatic highlight of the film. Morgan is spendid in his role of an old sheepman, and young Miss Taylor acquits herself favorably. Tom Drake plays Lassie's GI master, Harry Davenport scores as the judge who sends Lassie home and Selena Royle enacts Elizabeth's mother.

Lionel Houser did a notable job with his original screenplay, reason story is less dramatically potent now than when it was filmed due to studio's tardy release of picture. Lassie, of course, is Lassie, a trouper always.

Strike, Holdovers Keep First Run Gross To 280G

Street car strike and holdovers are combining to keep overall first run gross picture down to approximately $280,000 on the week. Majority of downtown theatres have taken stiff matinee losses since last Friday because of the trolley tie-up. Night business is some better but still off and exhibitors expect to show a loss of 25 per cent.

Both "Gilda" and "Kitty" are registering below normal at Hillstreet and Paramount, respectively, while same films in Hollywood houses are clocking socko returns. "Gilda" looks like $42,000 on its second frame, while "Kitty" should come through with $41,000 for its second week. In contrast "The Outlaw" is noticing little letup in trade because of the strike. Film is expected to soar above $45,000 for its fifth week as record-breaking pace continues. Truth or Consequences radio show on the stage at Orpheum is another bill that hurdled street car difficulties and finished its week last night with estimated $30,000.

"Devotion," hard-hit at Warners Downtown, is finishing third and final frame with estimated $29,500. "Dragonwyck's" third week at the State, Chinese and Uptown should hit $29,000, trade being off at the State but holding its own in the other two locations. "Ziegfeld Follies" closed four-week stay at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz last night with approximately $28,000. "Postman Always Rings Twice" opens today.

"The Spiral Staircase" premiered at the Wilshire last night and opens regular run today in that house plus Guild and United Artists. "Tangier" and "The Man in Grey" closed three-week stay in the trio of day-daters last night, catching estimated $19,500. "Seventh Veil," in eighth frame at the Carthay, is also playing first week at the Vogue with $11,000 sighted between two spots.

'Tubby' Goes To Pix

For the first time screen rights to a record album were sold, when yesterday Cosmo pop-plattery peddled "Tubby the Tuba" for a George Pal Puppetoon at Paramount. "Tubby" was created for the album last winter per Cosmo order, and on wax consists of Victor Jory narrating the yarn, backed by Leon Barzin stick-swishing a symph ork.

Rodgers Says Foreign Prods Must Be Helped

New York, May 6.—William Rodgers, veepee in charge of distribution for Loews, speaking before the 59th semi-annual conference of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, accented the film's international importance. He said no other medium can carry the brotherhood-of-man message as well.

Producers abroad must be assisted in the effort to re-establish themselves, he said, and their product must be accepted here. A high standard of American films can be achieved only by world distribution, according to Rodgers.

Barriers against foreign films, he said, will only react on the quality of domestic production. Kudoing the assembled engineers, Rodgers said the days of hit and miss approach in the industry are gone, business men now depending upon scientific market analysis for product acceptance in advance.

Film Review

Night Editor

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Ted Richmond. Director, Henry Levin. Screenplay, Hal Smith. Story, Scott Littleton. Based on radio program by Hal Burdick. Photography, Burnett Guffey and Philip Tannura. Film editor, Richard Fantl. Art, Robert Peterson. Musical director, Mischa Bakaleinikoff. Sets, James Crowe. Sound, Lambert Day. Assistant director, Ivan Volkman.

REVIEWED at Pantages theatre, Hollywood, Calif., May 6, 1946. Running time: 66 MINS.

Under rather a misnomer of a title, here is strong enough entertainment to fit into any situation as an underliner on a double-bill. A galaxy of roundly good performances keeps afloat and alert a yarn that otherwise might have sagged in several sequences. It probably would have appeared a stouter story if less time had been devoted to the flashback technique used in the telling; each time it was dragged in a slice of suspense was lost.

It is a tale of a homicide-squadsman, having a bit of extra-marital activity with a callous rich witch. Trying to keep the affair mum, he won't even speak up when he and gal, having a rendezvous, witness a murder and let an innocent man get sentenced for it. Plot turns and twists are deft and credible, and the finale has punch.

William Gargan, the lead, weighs in with one of his very best performances. Playing with more restraint than he frequently exhibits, Gargan makes the character real—and hence most of the story. Another boon is Janis Carter, playing a gilded no-good of a gal with complete conviction. Jeff Donnell shows proper tremulousness as Gargan's suffering, loyal wife. Paul E. Burns, who has been turning in much sterling character work of late, scores solidly as a meek detective; the part, happily, is a novel departure from usual run of such standard roles. Charles D. Brown; as a newspaperman, and Frank Wilcox, as a suave heavy, are both definitely cast-bolsterers.

Ted Richmond's production got about all technical values possible from low budget, and nicely approximated the pre-repeal era in which yarn is laid. Director Henry Levin handled the piece so tension was constantly felt. Photographers Burnett Guffey and Philip Tannura pointed up the melodramatics with value-knowing lensing, and Mischa Bakaleinikoff's musical direction enhanced the emotional impact sought.

20TH ENDS TIEUP WITH 'STAR-TIME' OVER COLUMBIA

Exclusive tieup whereby 20th-Fox has been supplying stars and stories for the Frigidaire commercial "Hollywood Star Time" on CBS, ends on June 30. Studio will not pick up option which it held as well as agency on account, Foote, Cone & Belding.

20th-Fox has notified agency toppers that it has neither the story properties nor performers to continue exclusively servicing airshow, which has been on ether since Jan. 7.

Withdrawal is entirely amicable, and 20th-Fox will occasionally air its items for Frigidaire, which will continue program, but shop around all studios for topline performers and stories.

LEGIT OPENING

OKLAHOMA

"Oklahoma" finally bowed in Los Angeles last night at the Biltmore three years and one month after its Broadway debut. The Theatre Guild production not only lives up to every rave review but goes beyond them. The magnificent Rodgers - Hammerstein score, the glorious Agnes de Mille ballets, and the homely story by Lynn Riggs—they were all there last night, only better than expected. Without doubt "Oklahoma" is the best musical to play Los Angeles since "Song of Norway." It is a shame the show is booked for only three months. It could stay double that time and still play SRO all the way.

Just for the record, last night's topnotch cast had James Alexander and Mary Hatcher in the romantic leads. Featured were Richard H. Gordon, Dorothea MacFarlane, David Morris, Mary Marlow, Walter Donahue, Christine Karner, Ona Skever, Betsy Ross and Louise Fornaca. Orchestra was conducted by Salvatore Dell' Isola.

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Warners' Green Room lost its sedate air yesterday noon when word was received that Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, whose "Life with Father" is in production on the lot, won the Pulitzer Prize with their Broadway hit "State of the Union." Pandemonium reigned (if you like a cliche), and everyone stood up and cheered the two playwrights. They announced they would turn over the $1000 prize to the Author's League fund. Meanwhile, they must have been tossing confetti at Paramount—they have the screen rights to the Pulitzer prize-winner . . . RKO sneak-previewed "Sister Kenny" in San Francisco the other night and its ears are still ringing with raves . . . Harry Von Zell has been signed to star in a series of Columbia comedy shorts . . . Paul Wurtzel, associate producer on "Flight to Paradise," returned from his Las Vegas and San Francisco honeymoon with Shirley Cahoon . . . Harry Brand returns to his 20th-Fox desk today after vacationing in Palm Springs. Now it's his turn to hold "Amber's" hand . . . Oh, Mr. Selznick! The latest rumble from the Metro cartoon department has it that Fred Avery has conceived a new character, Victor Vulture, who will make his debut in "Drool in the Sun."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Out of the mysterious desert comes a dispatch from Denny Morrison, flacking through the sands for International's "Bella Donna." Morrison datelined his dispatch "Luxor-in-the-Mojave," and related the tribulations of Director Irving Pichel with a camel actor. Whenever Pichel yelled "action," the camel squatted in the road and merely looked mean. Finally Pichel asked Samir Rizkallah, Egyptian actor, to "talk to him in a language he'll understand." "Can't be done," said Rizkallah, "this is an Afghan camel from the Khyber Pass." Pichel ordered the doltish dromedary replaced with a horse . . . Edgar Bergen opened his Montebello airport Sunday, got down to earth yesterday and left for a two-day horseback ride with the Rancheros de los Visitadores . . . Gad, how equine can you get in one column? . . . Eddie "Tucson" Duncan is through stunting for Uncle Sam and will return to film stunts at slightly higher pay. He served in a tank destroyer unit for four years . . . Phoebe Hearst, daughter of George and granddaughter of William Randolph himself, is working on the L.A. Herald-Express, learning the repertorial trade with Aggie Underwood, who makes most of the town's male journalists look like they should have stayed in Cucamonga . . . Donna Reed must have thought the title of her current picture, Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life," had an ironic twist the other night. She showed up for scenes at night location shooting. She was told there was a mistake in the schedule and she could go home. About midnight she was called back; the schedule had been changed. By the time she arrived fog had closed in and shooting was suspended. She lives in Santa Monica, the location was in Encino.

CALL SHEET: BETTE DAVIS will return to work in "Deception" today, after suffering a bump on the forehead in a minor traffic accident over the weekend . . . BILLY CURTIS, the 39-inch film actor, will be manager of the Bevhills Rotisserie opening June 10 . . . JOAN CHANDLER'S dog was romping along the beach at Santa Monica yesterday. A big wave and the undertow carried him far out, so he had to be rescued by a lifeguard . . . BING CROSBY has a stock greeting for the unit flack on the "Welcome Stranger" set daily—"What did I buy today?" Stems from the flock of rumors which have Bing buying everything from the Boston Red Sox to a soccer team in Venezuela . . . PAUL HENREID'S mother planes from Paris to New York today. She lived in Vienna throughout the war . . . PEPE ROMERO, formerly an assistant dance director at Warners and Paramount, has returned to his native Mexico City. He's doing a daily column in English for the Mexico City Herald . . . WARREN GLASSER, who was a CBS man in Hollywood before entering the Army, married an Australian girl and settled in Melbourne. He recently sold a story to the Melbourne Sun titled "I Traded Hollywood for Melbourne."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: These Spring mornings, laced with sunshine and fog, find a 7:30 a.m. group on the Hillcrest greens—yes, 7:30 in the morning—including Charles Skouras, Charlie Einfeld, Bill Perlberg, Mike Rosenberg, Len Hammond, Lou Halper and Victor Saville . . . Personnel of Churubusco-RKO studios in Mexico City will toss a party for William Dozier and Joan Fontaine when they return from their Acapulco honeymoon . . . Bitter wine of repentance: D.D.T., which may now stand for Doleful Dunce Trembling, stated that Oliver H.P. Garrett and John Cromwell were working on their third draft of a screenplay for Humphrey Bogart, on his loanout from Warners to Columbia, the actor having turned down their two previous efforts. This was a big fib. Garrett and Cromwell are working on the third draft but they had nothing to do with the previous efforts . . . Oh, arnica, where is thy sting—Zachary Scott and Ronald Reagan are holding daily workouts in preparation for their free-for-all in "Stallion Road" . . . In one of his columns last week Walter Winchell tittered and asked "have you heard the octopus story yet?" He didn't tell it, so here's a scoop on Mr. Winchell: A suburbanite walked into a bar and found an octopus sprawled over several seats and obnoxiously drunk. The man asked him what was the matter. Octopus said he was bored, wanted a job or something to do. Man offered him a job helping his wife with the housework. It was a deal, and the octopus worked diligently and soberly. At Christmas the man and his wife pondered over what to get the octopus for a present, settled on bagpipes. Next three days the octopus was stinking drunk. The man finally went to his room and asked what was wrong. Octopus sulked, finally grumbled that was a heck of a present they gave him. "Why," said the man, "we thought you'd like a musical instrument since we've seen you playing the piano downstairs." "Musical instrument!" the octopus howled. "I thought it was a girl octopus. I've been trying to make love to her for three days!" ——D.D.T.

ANTI-TRUST SUIT AGAINST MAJORS FILED BY EXHIB

Washington, May 6.—New treble damage anti-trust suit against the eight major distributing companies was filed in Federal Court today by a Baltimore exhibitor.

Complainant in the suit, the Harford theatre, leveled its action against the distributors and 13 other defendants, including the Durkee and the Rome theatre circuits of Baltimore. Treble damages of $90,000, plus an injunction to terminate existing clearance, are asked.

Harford theatre, a 450-seat operation, plays two weeks behind Rome's Apollo theatre, and Durkee's Boulevard and Waverley theatres, about a mile away. Action was brought by Robert E. Sher, attorney for Harford, who is also representing the Linden theatre of Baltimore in another treble damage case.

Exhib Suit Resumes In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, May 6. — Suit of William Goldman against Warners and other major distributors resumed today in U.S. District Court. It was reported Goldman had been offered $1,000,000 as settlement, which he apparently had accepted. Warners, it was stated, had nixed the deal, however, indicating a willingness to fight the matter through. Goldman had sued for $1,350,000. Because the suit was first filed in 1942, Goldman is now calling for damages of $2,000,000. Current hearings will last all week in an attempt to set the damage, which Goldman claims he sustained by inability to obtain first run films at the Erlanger, which he leases.

SAXE AND LABOR TOPS MEET TODAY

Pat Casey, L. C. Helm and Herbert K. Sorrell meet with Carol Saxe at Warners this morning in an effort to iron out the squabble over laborers working in studio's paint department. Sorrell recently notified Helm's laborers union that painters are abandoning wartime practice of permitting laborers to do cleanup work, etc., in the paint department.

Move precipitated squawks from Helm, the IATSE and Screen Actors Guild. Latter two groups threatened to refuse to work with painters unless laborers were permitted to continue in the paint shop without membership in Painters Local 644. Laborers received painters scale of $1.20 an hour for work.

TWO NEW PICTURE COMPANIES IN JAPAN

Washington, May 6.—Two new film companies began production in Japan during March, the latest report of General Douglas MacArthur discloses. In addition, U.S. films are now being screened in 13 Nip cities.

Report says in part: "Newsreel coverage improved and two documentary shorts were released dealing with topics of the day. American feature pictures were being shown in 13 cities. Of 50 theatre scripts and synopsis submitted during the month, not one was of the old Kabuki type and all dealt with problems of current Japan, reflecting the general effort to turn away from the past and face the realities of the present and future."

Report adds that a union of motion picture workers was organized in March on a nationwide basis. The radio workers union, another new development, is already publishing its own trade paper.

"Chase" will have United Artists release.

Abie's Twins

The "Abie's Irish Rose" set at the Hal Roach studios looked and sounded like the baby ward in a hospital yesterday when, in response to a call by Eddie Sutherland, who is producing and directing the picture for Bing Crosby Producers Inc., for twins to be used in one sequence, nine sets of doubles showed up. They proved that none of them had weak lungs.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Zorina will retire from her domestic retirement as "Mrs. Goddard Lieberson" to appear at the Cape Playhouse in a possible revival of "Fata Morgana." Gene Raymond is also set for a guest star "in person" attraction, and Bette Davis, who is motoring east to "Butternut" in August, hopes to drive over and show her groom the "alma mater," where she started her career as an usher. And where, on the night of her re-visit, she may ask for her old job back. Bette confides that would be much easier than being on stage again, the mere thought of which frightens her into speechlessness! . . . Arlene Francis couldn't go to L.A. to join Martin Gable, so he's on his way back and they'll be "Mr. and Mrs." any moment now . . . The Drama Critic's Circle will be considerably enhanced when Brooks Atkinson, due back from Russia next month, resumes his drama criticing on the N.Y. Times this fall and Richard Watts, Jr., falls heir to the late Wilella Waldorf spot on the Post . . . Phil ("Flip Corkin") Cochran, who Mervyn Leroy thought would make as big a "kill" at the box office as he did in Japan as a Flying Colonel, has no aspirations for greasepaint, and now that he's a civvie again, he'll stick to his piloting. With Little John Allison, he is organizing a freight airways company, backed by Wall Street interests to the jingle of twenty million grand . . . Don't be surprised if one hour of Milton Berle replaces one hour of Lux during the summer months . . . Natalie Schaefer, who finally marked "finis" to her marriage to Louis Calhern, wrote a New York pal, "My lawyer was so difficult, you'd think I was divorcing Oliver Wendell Holmes!"

ADD ARRIVALS: Ingrid Bergman at the Drake . . . Howard Hughes at the Sherry-Netherland . . . Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard at the St. Regis . . . Georgie Jessel at the Warwick . . . FAIR AND WARNER FOR MASSEY: Raymond Massey leaves the cast of "Pygmalion" (18) and checks in at the Bev-Hills to report to Warners for "The Secret," and as predicted in this columnar oracle several weeks ago, John Williams will replace him for the remaining two weeks of the run. And just in case Mr. John Chapman should sound off in another attack against actors who leave a show during its Broadway run for the lure of gold in them thar Hollywood hills, let it herewith be explained that when Ray first signed to play "Mr. Higgins" in this Theatre Inc. revival, it was only for the original skedded limited engagement of eight weeks. After its unprecedented box office popularity extended it until June 1, Ray agreed to stay on, with the understanding that whenever Warners, who had prior claim on his services, sent for him, he would have to hand in his notice. It's unfortunate that the S.O.S. came just two weeks before closing, but Richard Aldrich, prepared for this emergency, whenever it came, has had John Williams standing by, and Ray is heading for Hollywood with the blessings of the entire company. He returns immediately upon completion of his scenes as menace to Joan Crawford to start rehearsals for Edwin Justin Mayer's "Sunrise in My Pocket." Haila Stoddard is producing this saga of Davy Crockett, and her "angel" is a studio of "Paramount" importance. The reason behind the interest is aimed in the direction of Margo Jones, who will direct. It seems that Paramount is trying to tag this talented femme megaphonist to an exclusive deal, and is "buying" her "Sunrise in My Pocket" as her first "toy."

Dissa and Data: Pete Jaeger and Bob Hutton are the "forgotten men" in Lana Turner's date-book, now that Howard Hughes has hit town. Hughes has swept Lana off her feet, and that's no figurative term of speech—but literal. He flew her to the Kentucky Derby, and you don't have to be an astrologer to know that his "constellation" is headed toward Venus! . . . Marjorie Gateson, who has been touring for the past 15 months with "Dear Ruth," is resting on her "verandah" at the Forest Hills Inn, trying to make up her mind whether to go to Elitches for the summer or return to Hollywood to resume the career she left when she chucked everything for a six-month USOverseas tour of "Kiss and Tell" . . . Only the casts of "Pygmalion" and the "Old Vic" were invited to Theatre Inc.'s reception at the Coffee House, following the brilliant premiere of "Henry the IV." Incidentally, Larry Olivier and Vivien Leigh are causing more excitement in this town than any other visitors—including Winston Churchill and all the U.N.O. delegates! . . . Cedric Hardwicke sent Lenore Harris enough flowers to fill her Hotel Fairfax suite, and if the gossips want to make anything of it here's the reason: she was able to get him three pairs of nylons to take back to England with him for "Pixie"! . . . Now that the "Goldwyn Girls" have distributed their beauty to very receptive eyes here in the east, they're off to decorate Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago.

RAISING "CAIN": "This Too Shall Pass" is fast becoming a slogan for every new play that has opened at the Belasco this season, but Richard Krakeur is determined that, in spite of the critical thumb-down, he is going to try and break the jinx, and keep this Don Appel drama alive as long as possible. The subject of religious intolerance is a squeamish one in the theatre, but Appel has handled it delicately and sensitively, and it's a shame that with all the "tripe" that gets a hearing, plays like "Home of the Brave" and "This Too Shall Pass," written by two promising young playwrights who should be encouraged, are not given a chance to survive. Krakeur has been besieged with letters from paying customers, begging him to give audiences a chance to judge for themselves, and one rooter, Courtney Flinn, is so anxious to keep it going that she has volunteered to raise additional backing. For the sake of the producer, author and fine cast headed by Ralph Morgan, Sam Wanamaker and Jan Sterling, here's hoping she succeeds!

UTAH BIDDING FOR RETURN OF H'W'D LOCATION CREWS

Utah is putting in strong bid with Hollywood for studios to use state extensively for location purposes, as they did prior to the war. Extent to which Arizona is being used as location site currently is cutting into financial take of both merchants and others connected with location trips, and Utah state government wants to woo producers back.

Andre DeToth, just returned from there, reports that state will build several mile road to a location where Harry Sherman's Enterprise "Ramrod" troupe will spend at least seven weeks, near Zion National Park. State has instructed its publicity department to work in close affiliation with company's stay.

Following extensive search for locations in Pacific Northwest, for "Bob, Son of Battle," 20th-Fox, too, will send company to Utah for six to eight-week sojourn in region around Kanab. Troupe leaves here in July, Director DeToth taking his outfit to Zion Park Lodge on June 1.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 2.—Huge crowds gathered at airport to welcome Argentina's top motion picture star and tango queen Libertad Lamarque, a few days ago. Libertad was delighted but breathless as mob closed in. Her countryman, Che Reyes, of the Mexican cinema, fell before the onrush of fans. He got up, brushed his suit carefully, and murmured:

"I suppose the thing to do now is write a tango."

Argentinians are supposed to, at the slightest provocation.

Libertad Lamarque's voice is being heard over XEQ waves, program sponsored by the National Lottery. Lots of rumors about her signing contract with local motion picture producers, but nothing certain as yet. We already have Hugo del Carril, Luis Sandrini, Che Reyes and Ana Maria Lynch from the South American republic.

Every once in a while we hear that Jose Mojica, tired of peaceful life in Francescan convent of Lima, Peru, is ready to resume his career in open spaces of the world. But it wasn't long ago that Mojica, for the past four years known as Father Jose Francisco de Guadalupe to the people of the Peruvian capital, said to newspaperman Roberto Cantu:

"I feel certain of persevering until death, and beyond, serving God and humanity here. With this certainty and deep happiness, I think that the greatest punishment God could inflict upon me would be to send me out again into that world of falsehood which I left behind."

When the S.T.P.C. union of cinematographers, headed by Cantinflas decided they wanted a representative of the cinema industry in Congress, quite a number of members mentioned producer Alfonso Sanchez Tello for the role. He didn't seem much enthused. As Jorge Negrete's political ambitions are well known, there was also talk of nominating the star. However, it was Victor Herrera, one of our best cameramen—under a three-year contract to Grovas—who was finally chosen.

Though cameraman Herrera is an intelligent citizen, popular and of a definitely strong personality, I asked:

"Just why Herrera?"

"Well, he looks like a congressman of this revolutionary era, and besides, he already carries a gun," was the answer.

With the industry backing him, Victor Herrera will undoubtedly defeat his five opponents and win seat in Congress, representing the Tenth District of the Federal territory, where majority of motion picture studios are located.

Black and White Tele To Rule, Sez Sarnoff

Chicago Plans Weekend Shows As All But Three Theatres Are Closed By Coal Brown Out

Chicago, May 7.—While the Illinois Commerce Commission was studying a plan for week-end operation of Chicago's film theatres, all but three of a total of 334 filmeries were closed waiting for their fate to be decided.

The plan, submitted by representatives of Chicago theatre circuits, calls for houses to operate on Friday, Saturday and Sunday night for a total of 24 hours instead of the present 2 to 6 p.m. six-day a week schedule.

The ICC decision, expected to be announced tomorrow or Thursday, if approved, would allow filmeries to run five hours on Friday, nine on Saturday and 10 on Sunday.

Theater executives contend that adoption of the plan would be a boost to the low public morale due to

$6 MILLION FOR PHILLY RADIO

Washington, May 7. — Philadelphia's WCAU, one of the country's powerful clear-channel outlets, has been bought by the Philadelphia Record, newspaper published by J. David Stern. Purchase price for station and its assets reported to be $6,000,000, making it radio's second greatest sale, topped only by the old Blue network deal of few years back.

The 50,000-watter is a CBS affiliate and has been owned and operat edby Dr. Leon Levy and brother, Isaac Levy. William Paley, CBS prez, long has been a stockholder in WCAU. Sale still is subject to approval of Federal Communications Commission.

MUTUAL GOES TO NAB FOLD

Washington, May 7. — Mutual Broadcasting System was yesterday accepted into fold of National Association of Broadcasters. It was among 101 new members okayed by the board. Only net remaining out of NAB now is American Broadcasting Co.

Other action of NAB directors recommended establishment of 48 independent state associations of broadcasters to handle local level problems.

Old Vic Slows Down For Second Part of 'Henry IV'

New York, May 7.—Part Two of "Henry IV" presented at the Century tonight by the Old Vic company is a weak paraphrase of Part One. It's slow and a little heavy. Ralph Richardson, however, repeats his richly comic role of Falstaff. Laurence Olivier's dash in Part One is missed but he shows amazing versatility in the brief comic role of Justice Shallow. Another treat of the evening is Joyce Redman's trollop Doll Tearsheet. Michael Wane as Prince Hal and Nicholas Hannen as the King are also fine. This portion of Shakespeare hadn't been seen on Broadway since 1867—and it belongs on the back shelf.

POT O' GOLD BEATS ALL RECORDS

New York, May 7.—Check on pictures currently in release shows a golden dozen out in front at the boxoffices with gross returns expectancy approximately $63,000,000—an average of $5,200,000 per picture. Figures are unprecedented in the history of the industry.

RKO's "The Bells of St. Mary's" is tops with expectancy of $7,500,000 or more. The runner-up in terrific money is "Saratoga Trunk" for which Warners sees a gross of $7,000,000. Show money is virtual certainty for Selznick's "Spellbound,"

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

IN reaching for "first" credits in release of May 6 National Broadcasting Co. overreached to point of actually mentioning rival net, American Broadcasting Co. In addition, NBC put itself on slight limb by stating it beat even news services in its coverage of the attempted jailbreak at Alcatraz. In taking bows NBC pointed up, in two or three instances, how it scooped heretofore unmentionable rival nets. It also took credit for beating news services—but failed to mention fact that United Press yarn was carried in papers being peddled on dock when previously silenced scribes and spielers, who had not been permitted to telephone, landed back in 'Frisco. Apparently someone had a nickel.

AN unnamed British actress, now in England, will play title role in "Forever Amber," according to an unconfirmed report yesterday at 20th-Fox. Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, is understood to have seen actress and been favorably impressed with her, on his recent trip to England, so much so that he suggested studio bringing her to Hollywood for Amber role. Last-minute discussions were held yesterday by Skouras, Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck, on eve of former's departure this morning for New York, but future of "Amber" was not further touched upon, Skouras said.

BRITISH film makers are reported launching a publicity campaign to sell American theatre audiences on fact that you no longer can cut English accents on screen with a bowie knife. This was brought out during confabs attendant upon J. Arthur Rank's world conference in London recently. English producers hereafter will minimize accents which previously only Britishers understood, and which stood in way of general acceptance of English pictures by American audiences.

TRANSPORTATION ban on theatrical troupes is causing only a minor worry on the Coast, inasmuch as there is but one eastern troupe slated for local playing in the next three months. "Bloomer Girl," which is to open at the Philharmonic in June, is now playing in Boston. There are seven weeks, however, before the show is due to open and Civic Light Opera spokesmen believe their difficulties will be gotten around by that time.

He succeeds James Sheffield. Paul Hull, who served as Eastern Washington salesman for United during the absence of Mitchell, was transferred to Denver, but will now return to Seattle.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Churchill and Eden attacked the Attlee proposal to remove British troops from Egypt as threatening the maintenance of the British empire and especially endangering the link of empire, the Suez Canal. Others will attack the British Labor government because, although the troops will be withdrawn from Egypt, they will be removed to Gaza in Palestine, and there are other British garrisons in Transjordan and Iraq. British troops, these persons will say, should be removed from all countries that are not part of the empire. It would be wonderful if the situation were such that all these troops could be removed. But there are, at present, threats in the Near East, as recently in Iran, and coming in Turkey, to British oil and British empire links that we may decry, but which are the means of the British being able to continue. Without the empire this little isle, this England, would be no more. It's to be hoped the time will come when foreign troops can be withdrawn not only from Iraq, Palestine and Transjordan, but from Bulgaria, Romania, Austria, Italy, Hungary, Iceland, China, and many another place, but as long as we remain militaristic minded and suspicious, that time is in the future.

All's quiet on the Culver City front.
The crews and thesps are ominously calm
As they prepare a devastating stunt—
The detonation of an atom bomb.
They speak in guarded whispers on the set
And walk around on tiptoe all the day.
In silent secrecy they toil, and yet
The picture gets publicity that way.

With all its hush-hush preparations for a colossal blast, it is doubtful if "The Beginning or the End" will cause as much devastation as "Forever Amber" did.

WB WILL DO NEW LEAD AND INSERTS TO 'ALCATRAZ'

Warners is getting the jump on Hollywood in cashing in on last week's Alcatraz battle. Company yesterday announced it will add new opening and film three new sequences for its "Alcatraz Island," made in 1937, and rush picture into release.

Film stars Ann Sheridan, John Litel and Mary Maguire. It will hit theatres long before any other production company can complete a picture based on debacle which resulted in five deaths and the wounding of 15 men. Studio reports part of action closely parallels actual events of last week. Newsreel footage taken on spot is expected to be used in part.

War Dept. Will Show 'Let There Be Light'

New York, May 7.—The War Department, spurred by various pressure groups, has agreed to release for public showing "Let There Be Light." Film, dealing with psychiatric treatment of G.I.s, was made by the Signal Corps. No distributor has been named for the film, prints of which already have been circulated among the major and minor companies.

Seattle Drive-In

Spokane, May 7.—Walter Seale and Lowell Thompson will build a drive-in theatre just outside this city, near the aluminum plant, and another drive-in here is planned by R. L. Strawick, former RCA service engineer in this district.

Play Review

ROBERTA

San Francisco, May 7.—A sellout audience welcomed the Jerome Kern musical "Roberta" to the Curran theatre last night and was rewarded by, in the main, sprightly entertainment. Luba Malina carried off top honors, getting several encores for her top work, especially in the second act. Tom Ewell, Beverly Whitney and George Britton also turned in fine performances.

New choral arrangements were made by Dudley Chambers and special orchestrations and dance arrangements by Edward Ward for the Civic Light Opera Association offering. Stewart Chaney highlighted the excellent production with his designing and fashions. Costumes by Robert Kalloch and Walter J. Israel were well done.

Operetta is assured of a prosperous three weeks run with advanced sales highly satisfactory. Opening night betrayed some dated comedy. Sterling Holloway's direction asked for some speedup but the audience reaction was hearty. Next few performances should see lagging moments in the production tightened up. The 45 girls and boys in the singing and dancing ensembles turned in spirited if not completely smooth performances.

TRADESHOWN at Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, Cal., May 6, 1946. Running time: 105 MINS.

"Without Reservations" is a blend of comedy and love making that will get box office response wherever the customers are interested in love and laughter. The laughs range from belly elevation on up and the love passages between Claudette Colbert and John Wayne scale from medium temperature to torrid.

Colbert appears as a femme author whose novel is being filmed—a situation which is used to poke a bit of fun at Hollywood production frenzies. The gal starts out from New York as an intellectual with more knowledge of books than of the world. But she learns fast under the tutelage of Wayne and Don De Fore, Marine fliers she meets on the train. Their disparaging remarks about her best-seller book lead her to conceal her identity under the prosaic name of "Kitty Klotch," with the usual farce complications resulting. Added to the complications is her discovery that Wayne is exactly the man to play the hero of her novel.

Adventures of the trio get increasingly hectic as the journey from coast to coast progresses. Colbert, with a ticket calling for passage on one train out of Chicago deliberately takes another for which she has no ticket in order to continue with her newly met pals. They return the courtesy by sticking with her when she is ousted from the train at an obscure mountain station. Then there is the purchase of a temperamental Isotto in which they continue the journey, a bright bit of love, guitar playing and philosophy during a stop at a Mexican ranchero, a bad check episode in New Mexico and final disclosure of Colbert to her companions as a celebrity.

Wayne and De Fore do a convincing job as the two Marines, and Dona Drake is notable as sultry, singing Mexican gal of the ranchero. Anne Triola gets laughs from a femme comedy role. Balance of cast is excellent.

Script at times is overcrowded with gags, almost to point of confusion, but Mervyn LeRoy's direction manages to keep the story moving at farce pace despite the heavy load of incident.

Production by Jesse L. Lasky is lavish and handled with consistently good showmanship. Milton Krasner's photography displays skill in keying camera effects to the rapidly shifting moods of the story.

Basehart in 'Wolf'

Richard Basehart, Broadway stage star, was set yesterday for role in "Cry Wolf," Errol Flynn-Barbara Stanwyck starrer at Warners.

CAST—Signe Hasso, Preston Foster, Anabel Shaw, John Shepperd, Roy Roberts, Emory Parnell, Nancy Evans, Gladys Blake, Frank Pershing, Robert Malcolm.

TRADESHOWN at 20th-Fox Studios, Westwood, Cal., May 6, 1946. Running time: 65 MINS.

The well-known long arm of coincidence is freely employed in the plot-mixing for "Strange Triangle," but otherwise tricky scripting, clever direction and convincing acting nevertheless keep the yarn plausible and interesting. Combination of what is described as a "triangle shooting," a two-timing mystery woman, some assorted bank embezzlement and a hard-bitten sleuth with strong femme appeal make the show sure-fire entertainment for both crime and sex fans. The film stacks up as extra grade double-bill material and can produce a few box office flurries on its own.

Signe Hasso, as the woman of the piece, gives a vivid portrayal of devious feminine skullduggery, putting out what it takes to hold an audience in spite of unsympathetic role. Preston Foster as the bank sleuth whom she involves in an embarrassing sextangle gives a top performance. Others earning special mention are Anabel Shaw as the good girl of the story, John Shepperd, Roy Roberts, Emory Parnell and Nancy Evans.

Picture opens with Foster in jail about to plead guilty to the killing of Hasso and cuts back from there to what started it all. The trite cut-back and narration is handled skilfully enough so that the yarn runs smoothly from Foster's chance meeting with Hasso in a cocktail bar, through a session of love making and on to the sudden disclosure later that she is wife of the brother of the bank president who is Foster's boss. Latter denouement is effected with high melodrama when Foster, as traveling supervisor for the bank chain, is taken home as a guest by the brother (John Shepperd). Action paces rapidly to a thrill finish in which Foster, steeling himself against the lady's charms, balks her attempt to abscond with bank funds she has influenced her husband to embezzle.

Aubrey Schenck has given the picture good production values and Ray McCarey's direction works the script to the limit for suspense and drama. Harry Jackson's camera work is generally good and the David Buttolph score enhances picture's melodramatic qualities.

The Undercover Woman

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Rudolph E. Abel. Director, Thomas Carr. Screenplay, Jerry Sackheim and Sherman L. Lowe. Adaptation, Robert Metzler. Based on a play script by Sylvia G. L. Dawnett. Photography, Bud Thackery. Film editor, Fred Allen. Musical director, Richard Cherwin. Sound, Bill Clark. Art director, Hilyard Brown. Costume supervision, Adele Palmer. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr., and Charles Thompson. Special effects, Howard and Theodore Lydecker. Makeup supervision, Bob Mark.

REVIEWED at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, May 7, 1946. Running time: 57 MINS.

At best, "The Undercover Woman" is dull filler material. It's short-budgeted film fare that proves to be a rather tired comedy mystery with little of either in its makeup. It stumbles along an obvious course for 57 minutes, distinguished by inept dialoging and faltering direction. Most of its chuckles weren't planned in the writing and there's little mystery about the whodunit elements.

Stephanie Bachelor is "The Undercover Woman," enroute to a dude ranch to aid a rich society dame collect evidence to divorce her husband. After a mistaken-identity mixup with the sheriff, the femme sleuth and her sidekick, Isabel Withers, get to work. When the husband is bumped off, the oddly-assorted group of dude ranchers proves to be the most obvious suspects ever collected together in one film. Only one is guilty, and the audience knows it long before the nimble detecting brains get wise. All try their darndest to put a noose around their individual necks. They are such a disagreeable bunch of characters it's too bad they couldn't have all been guilty.

Miss Bachelor, Robert Livingston as the sheriff, Richard Fraser, and sundry others in the cast are hardly adequate to the light demands of the Jerry Sackheim-Sherman L. Lowe script. Thomas Carr's direction adds nothing, nor does Rudolph E. Abel's production. Other credits are in keeping.

PASCAL SLATED TO DO ONE MORE FOR RANK

London, May 7.—Gabriel Pascal, producer-director of "Caesar and Cleopatra," and target for current censure for spending $5,000,000 on the film, will make one more picture for J. Arthur Rank, probably Paul Gallico's "Snow Goose."

Meanwhile, Pascal, now in Capri, replied to the vote of censure against him by the Association of Cine-Technicians—

"Remind the association that I was the only man who had the guts to carry on at Denham during the blitz. There was plenty of stage space in the studios then; nobody else seemed to want it."

Stage space reference is retort to statement made at the annual conference of the association by Sidney Cole, associate producer at Ealing Studios that—

"We must produce about 200 feature films a year in Britain if we are to build up a really sound industry. We can't do it while Mr. Pascal takes up studio space for months on end making a film costing over a million pounds, which won't be recovered at the box offices in this country."

Supporters of Pascal at the conference declared that he is "just being used as a scapegoat and the real purpose—is to get the British film industry nationalized."

Va. Theatres Hit By Coal Shortage

Washington, May 7. — Electric power available for all northern Virginia amusement places, including film houses, will be sharply curtailed, effective Friday, under an order today by the Virginia Corporation Commission. Order was made because of the extreme coal shortage. The amusement spots are to receive only four hours service, six days a week, or a total of 24 hours a week of electric service. Order will make a sharp dent in the box office of the affected theatres.

Labor Council to Try Sorrell Monday

Central Labor Council trial of Herbert K. Sorrell on charges of activities against the interests of the American Federation of Labor will be continued Monday night at Council's next meeting. Opening of trial last Monday night was given over to introduction of evidence against the Conference of Studio Unions' prexy aimed at showing his asserted connection with Communist party.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: L.A. Examiner's charity preem of "The Spiral Staircase" Monday night featured the very brief appearance of Van Johnson. About 8 p.m. a chauffeur-driven sedan drew up to the curb. Johnson stepped out, posed for the photographers, waved a cheery greeting at the stargazers in front of the house, waved goodbye, and drove off . . . Reopening of the Clover Club has been canceled. Out-of-towners dropped the project when it seemed it would take 40 to 50 grand to open the night club and install the equipment for an ice show . . . Dana Andrews has been under contract to Samuel Goldwyn for seven years, Teresa Wright for five, but they never worked in a picture together until the current "Best Years of Our Lives" . . . Civilian Production Administration reversed itself, and Harry Cohn received approval for his plans to build a $24,000 projection room attached to his home . . . Leonard Levinson leaves for New York soon to discuss a legit musical he's been writing with George Abbott . . . Metro execs are hoping Lana Turner's romantic life will be less newsworthy, because it isn't helping her at the boxoffice . . . Arnold Moss completed his role in "Bella Donna" and takes off any day to fulfill commitments in New York . . . It's probably a coincidence, but since Warners has been paying off on the stock exchange, the Toluca Lake bank across the street from the studio has started building an addition.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Joseph Bernhard, co-producer, and Gary Cooper, star, of "Cloak and Dagger," celebrated their birthdays yesterday on the Warners' set. Bernhard gave Cooper a set of gold cuff-links and a 16m print of "Saratoga Trunk." With the latter was a note explaining "this is a trailer for 'Cloak and Dagger'" . . . H. B. Warner, who has been playing dignified gentlemen for years, is playing a dishevelled old drunk in Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life" . . . Smiley Burnette, the comic cowboy, will have completed 87 one-night stands in 121 days when he winds up his current p.a. tour at the Hippodrome in Baltimore . . . Sol Wurtzel's crew on his third picture, "Flight to Paradise," is the same he started out with on "Rendezvous 24," and one of the reasons may be an air-freshener called Airkem, some kind of chlorophyll compound, which eliminates the smells of tobacco, paint and oxidation odors from sound stages and lessens fatigue . . . Mary Hatcher, who scored a success in one of the leads in "Oklahoma" at the Biltmore, is on leave from a Paramount contract . . . On the social circuit: Dancing to Garwood Van's music at Ciro's, Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone. At Billingsley's, Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan, Wynn Rocamora and Pat Morison. At the Biltmore Bowl, David Street and Jane Nigh . . . His ability to handle bubble-gum won Grady Sutton a role in Comet's "Miss Television." Or so an earnest young publicist, Sam X. Abarbanel, hoarsely insists.

ROD LA ROCQUE and VILMA BANKY are now starring in Bevhills real estate circles . . . MITCHELL KOWAL claims his little red schoolhouse was as rugged as any the oldtimers talk about. ON THE SOUNDTRACK: David May was playing gin rummy at Samuel Goldwyn's the other night. As often happens with Mr. Goldwyn, he was losing points and temper. Eddie Troy, emcee at Tom Breneman's, tells of the Hollywood character who went to Las Vegas to outsmart the gambling joints. He did fine until one of his "reserve" dice slipped out of his sleeve as he made a pass with the house cubes. An ominous silence fell as three sixes came up on the table. The Hollywoodite calmly picked up the dice and remarked, "Eighteen's my point." And, adds Troy, "he made it the hard way."——D.D.T.

'OUTLAW' OPENS TOMORROW IN FIVE CITIES

New York, May 7. — Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," is slated to open in five cities tomorrow. More openings are slated for next week after a booking lull occasioned by producer's battle with the Motion Picture Association of America. Hearing on Hughes' injunction request to prevent the MPAA from interfering with screening of the film has been set for May 16 in the U.S. District Court. MPAA, in the meantime, is under a restraining order not to take action. Film opens this week at Kansas City, Louisville, Rochester, St. Louis and Wilmington and next week at Nashville and Houston. There is no decision on the house for the New York opening.

COLLEGE SHOW HAS BRIGHT TALENT

Seattle, May 7.—"They Can't Do This," by Joe Klaas, prize winner in an all-university contest for the best musical show written by a student at the University of Washington wound up a three night run at Meany Hall here Saturday. The show, in two acts and fourteen scenes, was marked by some good music and showcased some engaging talents in the large cast.

Klaas, ex-G.I., wrote the play while a prisoner of war in Germany, and many in the cast, as well as composers, musicians and production crew are also veterans.

John Rustad directed and also wrote the words and music for one of the show's top tunes, "Why Is It?" which was given sharp rendition by Freda Wing. Two other songs were hummable: "Columns in the Moonlight" and "City in the Night," but "Why" is the only one that has chance for widespread popularity. It is an appealing torcher. The other two have chiefly local appeal.

Lawyers requested Judge Knight to examine the plan and if he considers it sufficiently meritorious, it will then be filed and made public. The judge announced postponement of the matter until tomorrow, giving the court and government opportunity to consider it overnight.

Chicago Plans Weekend Shows As All But Three Theatres Close

Two of the three theatres remaining open are small neighborhood houses operating on the 2 to 6 p.m. schedule. Both filmeries plan to close after Tuesday night's show if take is poor. Other house is 1,900 seater on the south side, which is operating on a full time 1:00 p.m. to midnight basis, having installed generators capable of carrying a full power load and reports a heavy boxoffice.

Although classed as an essential public service, Chicago's television studios will be operating on a curtailed daily schedule for the duration of the power emergency. Station WKBK (W9XBK) will run 4 to 5 p.m. daily and have a camera standing by to record events of outstanding importance that might occur. The television curtailment is voluntary and was not required by the ICC order.

William Parillo, ICC member, said that "unless relief is obtained by the end of the week a complete blackout of Chicago will take place." Such a blackout would restrict the use of electricity to vital public health and safety services and force a shutdown of Chicago night clubs which have been operating to good houses because they have food licenses and have thus escaped the power-cut order.

EMANUEL IN RACE TO GRAB GERMAN COLOR FILM

Custodian, which controls the German Agfa color film process and other film patents.

Emanuel is a director and member of the executive committee of General Aniline and Film and, according to some important government sources, is going to bid for the property when it is put on the auction block by James E. Markham, the custodian of the property.

RIVAL OF TECHNICOLOR

If Emanuel and Avco should get General Aniline intact, they would control a color film patent which would make them important factors in the motion picture industry. Hollywood is known to be definitely interested in the Agfa process as a competitor for Technicolor. This, it is claimed here, is one of the real reasons for an underground battle now going on over whether to throw General Aniline's patents open to all comers.

Emanuel and his friend, George E. Allen, close pal of President Harry Truman, and now a director of Reconstruction Finance Corp., are reported opposed to opening up the firm's patents. One spokesman says they want to keep the bundle intact for such time as the company is offered to American bidders.

Significant is the fact that at recent meeting of government officials to consider whether to put General Aniline patents up for public sale and licensing, Markham was the sole dissenter. He made a strong argument that the corporation should not be weakened by loss of its patent properties.

It may also be significant that Alien Property Custodian employes regard General Aniline as dynamite and stay as far away from it as they can. They call this one the APC property that M a r k h a m "carries around in his vest pocket."

As recently as a few months ago, it was generally expected that General Aniline would be put on the auction block late this spring. Now it is not expected to for at least another year.

Parade of loan-outs is headed by director Sylvan Simon, actor Keenan Wynn, assistant director Earl McEvoy, dance director Gene Loring, assistant dance director Margaret Westberg, Jean Nims, secretary to director Simon and Wilkie Mahoney, gag man on the script. Jo Nicholson, a Columbia assistant director on the picture, pointed out that about "everyone from Metro is here excepting Busher."

'GUIDING LIGHT' TREK TO COAST IS HALTED BY COURT

Chicago, May 7.—A decree on behalf of Emmons Carlson has been handed down in Circuit Court here, restraining Irna Phillips from moving "Guiding Light," NBC airer for General Mills, to Hollywood without Carlson's permission. Program is one of the four the flour firm plans to start originating from Coast sometime during summer, under direction of Miss Phillips and Carl Wester.

Carlson was awarded half interest in program, which has been airing for decade, last January. After months of litigation amount of money owed Carlson since 1936 is estimated at upwards of $250,000 and currently is being decided in Chancery here.

BIG FILM BOWS DESPITE STRIKE

Opening day of "The Spiral Staircase" set new first day records at the Guild and Wilshire theatres and made a substantial showing at the United Artists, despite street car strike which is nicking theatre trade, particularly in the downtown and Wilshire sectors. Combined total on the day went above $6,100.

Debut of "The Postman Always Rings Twice," on the same day was held to approximately $11,500 which is very hefty for opening at the Los Angeles, Ritz and Egyptian theatres. Here again trolley tie-up was felt at the downtown and Wilshire boulevard houses, which lie in areas served mostly by the Los Angeles Railway.

Last Of Season's Tolerance Cycle Has Dubious Future

New York, May 8.—"On Whitman Avenue" opened at the Cort theatre tonight and although an earnest plea for tolerance, chances look doubtful. Play is final one in cycle of season's legits of similar theme, only one of which to make the grade being "Deep Are the Roots." Play is exceptionally well cast and direction by Margo Jones is above par.

Locale is suburb of Detroit where race riots last year may have inspired play's author, Maxine Wood. Story has to do with white landlord leasing upper floor of house to a Negro family. Neighbors threaten to take measures in resentment to the "invasion" of colored people. Wife of white family on downstairs floor can't withstand insinuations of the neighbors but

ACTORS TO GET OWN PROTOCOL

Washington, May 8.—Hollywood's film actors may have their special treaty with Great Britain, believe it or not. And if they achieve this, they will have ended their beef over the double taxation which they are subject to under the proposed treaty between the United States and our English Allies.

"The Outlaw" barely faltered in its record-breaking strides at the four Music Halls, despite the streetcar strike. Film finished its fifth week with big $43,200, or only $2,300 under original estimate for the week. Fifth frame total gives "Outlaw" a smash $293,200 take for the run so far.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

WILLIAM Esty agency and NBC are trying to keep a quietus on the fact that Lou Costello is going east on May 17 primarily to spend some time stumping New Jersey on behalf of gubernatorial candidate Harold Hoffman. Both agency and network are keenly aware that sponsor of Abbott & Costello airshow, Camel cigarets, slightly frowns on political tinge it fears program may be given, merely because one of the comics soap-boxes for his longtime friend and former Garden State governor. Story of Costello's campaigning was originally printed in Daily Variety several months ago. Esty and NBC have been soft-pedaling the matter and publicizing fact that while he is in New Jersey Costello will be honored at hometown gathering in Paterson for his Youth Foundation charity work. Entire airshow goes east with Costello and programs of May 23 and 30 will be aired from NY. Group then bounces back here.

FIRST state theatre in United States is Abbingdon Barter theatre, in Abbingdon, Va., which Robert Porterfield, former Broadway actor, started 11 years ago as an experiment. State of Virginia has granted Porterfield $10,000, with expectation this will be continued hereafter as annual donation, to be used as he sees fit in developing talent and building up a dramatic company. A non-profit organization, company launched on careers such present Hollywood actors as Charles Korvin, Gregory Peck, Hume Cronyn and William Prince. Season opens June 1 under new deal whereby company will be state-owned, with state asking for no control in management or policy of group. Plan now is to present 13 weekly shows through the summer, then send company around to various normal schools and colleges throughout Virginia, for purpose of creating interest in dramatics.

UNIQUE camera technique is being used by Metro in one of the horse-racing sequences in "My Brother Who Talks to Horses." A second unit of the company, under the direction of Ralph Cedar at Northridge, is filming a horse race from start to finish in one, uninterrupted "take." Camera, handled by Les White, is mounted on a truck which follows the horses at 40-mile-an-hour speed through the infield. Later, this shot will be intercut with close-ups and scenes of the grandstand for the finished print. Painstaking work by trainer Curley Eagles is credited with perfecting performances of the horses, who never once shied at the roaring camera car. In this manner, rehearsals and shooting of three complete races were finished in five days.

CURRENT shortage of stage space is a headache but isn't causing any loss of sleep for William Flannery, art director, and Del Clouse, construction head, of "Abie's Irish Rose." Faced with access to only one stage at Hal Roach studio, where company has been shooting, eight sets were designed, erected and maneuvered on Stage 5, without sacrafice of any production values or violating any fire ordinances. Sets include spacious home of Solomon Levy, with several rooms, apartment for Abie and Rosemary, department store office, hotel corridor and room, London telegraph office, building lobby and elevators and ticket offices of two airports. Sufficient space was left over for eight dressing rooms on stage.

THE expression "they do it with mirrors" is no gag as regards the Pine-Thomas pic, "Fear in the Night," currently filming at Paramount. Suspense sequence in the film calls for scenes in an octagonal room, constructed entirely of mirrored doors. Only person who can see what is going on in the room is the camera operator and he gets his gander through a small opening just the size of the front of the camera. Maxwell Shane directs the film by watching the reflection of the actors in a large mirror adjusted above the small set.

LOU Levy, after dropping $20,000 into his legit production of "Over 21," decided to fold the show. He posted notice, but the cast asked him to let them continue with the show on a cooperative basis. Levy turned over the entire production and wrote east, getting a royalty slash for the thesps from author Ruth Gordon. Despite his efforts, however, the streetcar strike put a clamp on the show and it was forced to shutter. Nevertheless, legit circles are talking about the producer's unprecedented and kindly gesture.

Likely, however, that he may have considerable say in person or organization that would replace his services.

One time in the northern days of yore
The tree was known as the sycamore
It spread its limbs in a gentle way
To shield a child on a summer day
When Old Man Sun in the hot July
Looked down on us with a feverish eye
We sat in the good old days of yore
Beneath the shade of a sycamore.
But now the tree is an alamo
Where galloping cowboys come and go.

Seymour Nebenzal is chasing around to grab Francis Lederer for "The Chase," and you know instinctively that it isn't going to be one of those chases through yonder canyon. Francis wouldn't look good galloping into a flock of gunplay in the Seven-Eleven joint on the main street in Paradise Valley. It is not that kind of a chase. Drama is made up of all sorts of chases, some in boudoirs, some on fire escapes and some in the great open spaces where men are men but don't dare to kiss a gal during working hours.

That, at least, was the general impression until "The Outlaw" came along, showing that the great state of Texas developed something more than steers, oil wells and Rogers Hornsby, the greatest of all right-handed hitters. Getting back to the subject, here is a quatrain sent in by a gentleman who asks no writer credit:

"We used to learn life's secret facts
From flowers, bees and from their acts,
And then 'The Outlaw' came along
And showed that all that dope was wrong."

ARBITRATION PLAN CONSIDERED FOR UNION PACTS

Inclusion of arbitration clauses in all new contracts with studio unions is reported under consideration by producers. Success or failure of the present 30-day trial arbitration plan for settlement of jurisdictional disputes will be a major factor in decision on such clauses by producers and unions.

Proponents believe many situations leading to work stoppages can be prevented if machinery to handle jurisdictional fights is actually a part of union agreements. Settlement of jurisdictional disputes since 30-day trial period was adopted has been going forward rapidly and it is felt effective method, agreeable to all, will be devised from the trial.

Current jurisdictional dispute, between Painters and Laborers over paint shop work at Warners, is expected to be settled today. Pat Casey, producers labor contact who is key figure in the 30-day arbitration setup, is expected to rule on question today. He warned both Herbert K. Sorrell of Conference of Studio Unions and L. C. Helm of Laborers Local 724 yesterday that he would make no decision until situation had been returned to status quo as of the time dispute arose. A number of laborers formerly cleaning paint pots and doing similar work has been replaced by the studio with members of the Painters. Sorrell told Casey status quo was agreeable, paving way for an early decision by Casey as to whom the work belongs.

Sorrell, 7 Others Sentenced Today

Herbert K. Sorrell and seven other defendants appear in Burbank Police Court today for sentencing following conviction on charges of failing to disperse during the Warners studio strike last October. Attorneys for defendants will move for a new trial at today's hearing and if turned down will appeal conviction. All of the defendants were found not guilty of rioting.

Prexy Thomas Breathes New Life Into PRC

Neither PRC Pictures nor PRC Productions, distributing and producing subsidiaries of Pathe Industries, are going to do an el foldo because of the creation of the new Pathe Eagle-Lion Company, Harry H. Thomas, PRC Pictures prexy, flatly declared last night.

"All statements to the contrary are based upon an unfounded rumor," Thomas declared. "PRC Pictures is very much alive. The company has made great progress and will continue to do so. Pathe Eagle-Lion will handle the sales of its own product but PRC Pictures will definitely continue to handle the physical distribution of that newly organized company's films.

"PRC Productions will continue to make pictures along the lines it has operated in the past and PRC Pictures also will handle this setup's distribution, as we are doing currently. Reeves Espy is still president of PRC Productions and indications point to his remaining in that capacity.

"I would like to make it clear that Pathe Eagle-Lion was formed by Pathe Industries in conjunction with J. Arthur Rank interests. This company will make 8 to 10 pictures here annually under the executive producership of Bryan Foy. New company also will handle the sales in the United States of an equal number of Rank films made in England. Foy will produce on the PRC lot, which will shortly be re-named Pathe Eagle-Lion studios.

"PRC Productions will continue to operate on the same premises. When necessary, however, it will utilize other available studio space. The producing company also may farm out some of its independent productions to other lots. I am currently here to set up the PRC program for 1946-47 releases."

FITZPATRICK SIGNS WERNER JANSSEN

Producer also has arranged with Republic for use of its new music stage for recordings. First three in series currently are being prepped by FitzPatrick and Janssen.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Anytime now the Government will have to take over the coal mines. But it's a question whether even that will get coal out of the mines, since there has been one statement so far from a miner's representative saying they will not mine the coal even for the Government, that they will stand back of John L. Lewis. During the war, it was possible to plead of the emergency, which President Roosevelt did like no one else could. There is an emergency now, of people starving in Europe and Asia, and who will die in numbers as the coal strike affects transportation and production; of a dislocated industrial machine in this country that is slowly grinding to a stop, and that, affecting the railroads here, will gradually affect not only jobs and earnings but food here too. Further, our system is on trial before the world. Despite all this, it takes a man of persuasive force to put the story over. Anyone who has seen the miserable living conditions of miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia can sympathize with their need of health and welfare aid, but it is another question as to whether a Lewis-run fund, raised by royalties, is the answer. It becomes more and more a question, too, about strikes by producers of public necessities.

SCHINE OFFERS TO DIVIDE LOOP LIKE GAUL

Buffalo, May 8.—Broad outlines of the realignment plans for the Schine chain of theatres were revealed yesterday by lawyers for the firm, although they were unwilling to give details. Plan submitted to Federal Judge John Knight calls for formation of three separate corporations with Schine retaining stock interest but control of each resting in trustees under voting trust agreements.

Business triumvirate would consist of one corporation for the Schine New York State theatres, another for Schine Ohio theatres and a third for the Maryland, Kentucky and Delaware theatres.

Schine lawyers contended this would accomplish what the court desired but emphasized that the defendants are not waiving any rights to appeal from the court's order directing reorganization.

Judge Knight pointed out that the objection of retaining common control at the head by stock ownership might remain, although practical separation would be effected by the plan. But Schine representatives argued that the beneficial owners, namely Schine, would have right to profits only and no control. They stated that the Schine plan would mean each corporation would control only a comparatively small unit, which would be separately and independently booked and that each would be smaller than many other independent units now existing.

Justice Department lawyers, in the brief hearing in the judge's chambers, stated that the Schine plan did not materially alter the present situation. Proceedings were postponed until May 28 with right granted the government to interpose formal objections to the plan in the meantime.

CBS Licenses Federal To Make Tele Tools

Columbia Broadcasting System yesterday announced licensing of Federal Telecommunication Labs, Inc., to manufacture video transmitter equipment employing CBS' ultra-high frequency color television inventions. Buttner, Federal prexy, states plans are completed for manufacture and delivery of high definition, color and black-and-white transmitting stations.

GILBERT KICKS ON $212 ROYALTY FOR HIS 'BABY' DISC

L. Wolfe Gilbert, vet songwriter, yesterday bluntly challenged a financial statement tendered him by Pan-American Records. Statement included a royalty check of $212 as payment on use of Gilbert ditty "Rather Do Without You, Baby," and was for first quarter of this year, ending March 31. Gilbert charges that Pan-American deducted from payment records returned to plattery by dealers throughout month of April.

Franz Green, veepee of Pan-Am, claims statement is accurate to best of his knowledge. He also flatly denies charge of Gilbert that waxery promised to publish "Rather" as a sheet-music item. Gilbert's contention is that he accepted Pan-Am as a recorder of tune he wrote with Emory Heym because he was given impression the discery would exploit it widely via sheet copies. Meanwhile Pan-Am is keeping the one-cent per record royalty which normally would accrue to publisher of any song waxed; Gilbert and Heym split the same royalty.

Last night Gilbert phoned and then sent lengthy letter to Harry Fox, trustee of Music Publishers' Protective Association, at his NY headquarters, asking aid of MPPA in the tussle with the recorder.

Gilbert, in his letter, asserts if he had know that Pan-Am would not publish his tune he would have done so himself, through Magnetic Music Co., in which he is partnered with George Jessel and Ben Oakland. Gilbert also demanded of Green that a new statement prepared by a certified accountant, be drawn.

SPRIGGENS, COOLEY ROW GOES TO AFM BOARD

Deuce Spriggens - Spade Cooley shuffle has been referred to board of directors of Local 47, following Spriggens' failure to get satisfaction from trial board on charges of "solicitation" against Cooley. Fracas between two cactus maestri has also resulted in tiff between Walter Newcomb, realtor and owner of Western Palisades ballroom, who has ousted both Spriggens and Miss Bennett, dancery lessee. Newcomb has assumed operation of ballroom with Cooley as attraction.

Directors will notify Spriggens some time this week when they will re-hear the case that has already been tried twice before trial board. It was originlly dismissed for lack of evidence. On second try charge against Cooley of soliciting job was reportedly not upheld. Board, however, upheld allegation that he had solicited the lease formerly held by Miss Bennett, Spriggens' manager, and one-time manager of Cooley.

Spriggens band and Miss Bennett were virtually evicted last week-end when Newcomb took over. Miss Bennett is reportedly preparing suit on grounds that she was unjustly ousted while holding five year lease. She had been operating Saturday nights only. Newcomb plans operating full week-end, he states, and may run full week in summer. When queried he would not divulge reasons for evicting Bennett-Spriggens combine. Cooley, it's stated, will stay very much in background of entire rustle he is said to have instigated, and will only answer any further summons of musicians union.

LIGHT AND AIRY

BY SIDNEY N. STROTZ,
Vice President, NBC

(Hitch-hiking for Jack Hellman)

The honeymoon is over!

Now we've got to get down to work!

Radio—including sponsors, agencies, talent and writers, networks, stations, and all affiliated personnel—might as well look into the big, bad mirror and face the fact that, like any other industry, we are now emerging from a period of war-time prosperity, and while peace-time, of course, is sweeter, it's going to be tougher.

From now on sponsors are not going to buy a lot of time and pay for a lot of expensive talent just because it seems the thing to do. When all the American manufacturing and distribution kinks are ironed out the advertisers are going to expect something they haven't always demanded in recent years —a show that will sell their product.

It means every talent agency and its artists must deliver something salable. Also every advertising agency must put together a piece of property that will move the sponsor's product off the retailers' shelves. And advertisers must return to old-fashioned merchandising and promotion that will not only supplement but will complement the well-thought-out radio advertising campaign.

This means that every network and station sales department can stow away the long transom stick with which most of the war-time business was brought into the house.

Competitive selling, believe me, is coming back.

While it is generally true the spirit of competition is more likely than not to cause a salesman to raise his voice I think we are facing a new trend in public acceptance. It's my prediction and conviction that the slam-bang type of commercial hoopla will gradually be replaced by "the lighter, the milder" type of selling, if I may borrow a well known descriptive commercial phrase to say so.

What's more, I think it will be more effective.

LET'S face another fact. Since the war's end America's national thinking is changing. People haven't the war, the boys overseas, rationing and a hundred and one other worries to occupy their minds. A large percentage of the population is thinking about the home and juvenile and crime problems, and some of the articulate and organized groups are looking around for likely targets. Right now there is more talk about censorship—in radio, press and films—than ever before. Anyone who produces or exhibits a motion picture, publishes a newspaper or magazine, or runs a radio station is acutely aware of that. I'm sure that no thinking man in any of these three fields is deliberately going to foist questionable material upon the public, and also I'm sure today's material is of no different quality than that used before or during the war. But the current attitude of the public is different. So it behooves every writer, every performer, and everyone of us poor benighted souls charged with keeping it clean, to fulfill our responsibilities.

Radio has just faced the first big test of its quarter-century history, and we now enjoy the greatest prestige ever. I don't think I'm being crass when I say that this is the time to cash in on it. But we won't cash in on it by forgetting everything that we learned during the war. Sponsors and stars should remember that they got back millions of dollars worth of good will for the time they gave to allocations, special shows and programs from camps. Networks and stations should remember that they gained millions of listeners by forgetting about the fast buck they might have made; those war bond broadcasts not only put a lot of money in Uncle Sam's coffers, they paid back many times their cost in prestige for radio. The same goes for the up-to-the-minute news programs, which may have forced an occasional commercial off the air, but which will be paying dividends for years to come.

THE war-built prestige will be a powerful ally in the competitive days to come, but we'll have to handle it with care. Already a few wartime reputations are starting to be kicked around, and the feet waiting to go to work on radio are legion, from the dainty, pointed pump of the embattled woman's club member to the blunt toe of a Congress gaiter.

Of course, we're not going to get anywhere by sitting back on our big, fat prestige. Radio got where it is by getting a jump ahead of the competition and staying there. We have the prestige, we have the audience—the greatest potential market in the world's history. Now we've got to sell the stuff!

The handwriting first appeared on the wall a few months ago when a sponsor dropped a program with a good Hooper, not because he didn't like the show and not because it wasn't delivering a high rating, but because it wasn't selling the product. A few more similar cases are coming up. Here at NBC we're picking our replacements carefully. Some of the advertisers don't like it, and they haven't minded telling us so. Some of them have told us that some day OUR honeymoon will be over. But I think the honeymoon will last a lot longer for all of us if we continue to set our sights high and put on the programs with pulling power—power to pull the listeners to the dials and to pull the customers into the streets.

Brush Work

Song, "Poor Pauline," oldie used by Paramount in its "Perils of Pauline," Betty Hutton starrer, will be done to accompaniment of slapping paste brushes. Cast yesterday as singing bill posters for the show were Fredric Santley, Sam Ash, George Royce and Jimmy Clemmons.

Petri Will Pour Mystery Series

New mystery drama series, "The Bookcase of Gregory Hood," yesterday was bought by Petri Wines as summer replacement for its "Sherlock Holmes" program on Mutual web. Anthony Boucher and Dennis Green, writers on "Sherlock" show of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, will scribble "Hood," for which star and cast have not been set as yet. Replacer will take over on June 3.

Street Asks Release

David Street has asked for his release from the Sealtest radio show. Other offers conflict with the time of the Sealtest program. The release has not yet been granted, but negotiations are going on.

Dick Haymes Moves

Dick Haymes' CBS airshow for Auto-Lite on June 6 will be shuttled from present Saturday night niche to Thursday slot, where it will oppose Kraft Music Hall summer-show on NBC.

STRAVINSKY FILES SUIT AGAINST LEEDS MUSIC

Igor Stravinsky, composer, has filed suit in Superior Court against Leeds Music for declaratory relief. Action stems from complaint that Leeds refused him share in $1,700 returns from his revised composition "Firebird Ballet Suite," which they published. Leeds contends that composer's share of $850 was attended in $2,000 advance on royalties.

Contract called for 50-50 split on proceeds, according to Stravinsky, who further contends he never takes advance royalties, according to attorney Aaron Sapiro. "It was a down payment, in addition to which he was to get 50-50 split," states attorney. Leeds states $2,000 was standard advance, a procedure always followed in music biz and which sums are applicable to totals as advance.

Composition, especially revised, was written in 1910. Deal between pair was consummated in June, 1945. Leeds must enter reply by May 14.

JOAN DAVIS MAY ASK RELEASE FROM SOAPER

It is understood Joan Davis, with still another year to run on her contract with Lever Bros.' Swan Soap show on NBC, may ask release from pact in event she is offered a long-term inducement elsewhere. Due to current scarcity of oils and fats and with full supply of soap not expected to fill retail sales' shelves until 1949, the sponsor reportedly is willing to grant Miss Davis the release if she is offered an extremely advantageous deal.

Conference yesterday was attended by Miss Davis, Tom Lewis, veepee and radio-ruler of Young & Rubicam; George Gruskin, actress' rep from William Morris agency, and Sid Strotz, NBC veepee in charge of western division. The situation was discussed, but no definite decision forthcoming.

Lever Bros. account is said to plan a realignment of its Swan ad budget, with bulk of funds earmarked for the ether in the future. It is said that this shift in allocations would cover cost of the Davis program, which, incidentally, fades off the ozone for summer on May 27.

The comedienne's Crossley and Hooper batting averages have been excellent all season. She constantly was listed among the first 15 programs in the Crossley log and currently in the Hooperatings she stands 15th with a 15.3.

Lollier Will Attend Variety Club Sesh

W. H. (Bud) Lollier, real estate head for Fox West Coast, and Al Galston, independent theatre operator, leave for New York Sunday to attend annual convention of the Variety Clubs of America as delegates from Southern California Tent 25. Convention takes place at the Astor hotel, May 16 through 19. They will be gone 10 days.

New Troc Show

Trocadero opens a new show tonight with Eddie Oliver's orchestra, the Mordenaires, Dick and Gene Wesson, Betty Bradley and Marvin and Christina. Mordenaires also appear in the Cub Room.

UNION OF B'CASTER SETUPS FADES

Likelihood of Southern California Broadcasters organization combining with local branch of National Association of Broadcasters has faded. Recommendation of NAB that state association of broadcasters be formed ends possibility of that move. However, it revives once proposed plan to combine segments of 15th and 16th districts of NAB into one state unit.

Plan to combine 15th and 16th was abandoned over two months ago. Decision was then made by heads of two groups to retain separate identities. Reversal of position is now expected to follow meetings being held by both next week.

Bill Smullen, head of 15th, which also embraces Nevada, holds conclave in Reno, May 13-14. Bill Ryan, manager of KFI and 16th chieftain, gets back this week, and will attend SCB's planned meeting for some day during same week.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 8.—Spring Fiestas in Mexico. Ann Sheridan, Yvonne de Carlo and Walter Pidgeon. Magnificent sunny mornings. Afternoon showers. Distinguished visitors at the Hotel Reforma: Generals J. H. Wainwright and Carl Spatz; Lieutenant Generals Simpson and Vandenberg. At Acapulco, the Chinese fleet. Captain Lian Hsu Chao. Uniforms. Tons of flowers. Parties.

Spring fiestas coincide with May fifth, national holiday. May 5, 1862, the soldiers of Mexico routed the French invading army of Napoleon Third.

Mayor Rojo Gomez offered dinner party in honor of Ann Sheridan, Yvonne de Carlo and Walter Pidgeon.

The collaboration of these Hollywood stars is the best proof of the friendship between our two countries, a friendship much more lasting than the "official" one, said the Mayor.

The three guests from Hollywood appeared with Jorge Negrete and Gloria Marin at Atayde Circucus in Red Cross benefit performance, were cheered at bullfight starring Cantinflas, and admired at Ciro's. It was THE ball. Entire film colony was present. Maria Felix, Queen of the Spring Fiestas, more beautiful than usual. White gown and a huge emerald at her throat. Cantinflas introduced the foreign guests, calling Miss Sheridan "Anita," and Walter Pidgeon Mr. Pichon (which means young pigeon) the Argentinian stars Libertad Lamarque and Luis Sandrini, and finally and unexpectedly, the Spanish dancer, Miguel de Molina. It took a few seconds for Molina to find his voice. It was only a few weeks ago, during feud between unions, that Cantinflas had publicly and loudly called the dancer a traitor. Molina grasped the olive branch, practically falling into Cantinflas' arms.

Production of "La Mujer de Todos" starring Maria Felix, was suspended so Maria could attend ball at Ciro's. If the star was to stay up late, she insisted upon adequate rest, so producer Wallerstein held up film two days.

I walked into the wrong projection room at Clasa Studios and saw "The Desert Prince," "The Son of the Sheik" or whatever it is that the Abel Salazar-Malu Gatica film will be finally called, and wondered if I had also somehow stepped into the wrong year, say . . . 1930. Surely the Salazar starrer couldn't have been made in 1946! Then I had to sneak out before the lights went on, for fear other spectators would think I was crying over deaths of the Prince, his horse, the girl he didn't love, the father of the girl he didn't love, etc. It was all so sadly funny. I did feel sorry for Malu Gatica. Such a charming girl!

There is an MGM picture now at the Magerit, with Ginger Rogers, Lana Turner, Walter Pidgeon and Van Johnson. It's probably a good picture, in English. We had to take it dubbed. Rather distressing. And MGM insists on the dubbing. Of course, when you count all the small towns throughout the Spanish speaking countries where the motion picture public doesn't care a hoot how Ginger Rogers or any one else on the screen speaks, you can't much blame Metro. So the public of Mexico City, Guadalajara, Monterrey, as well as Lima, Buenos Aires, etc., will have to accept dubbing or stay away from MGM films.

Dear Helen—

Hold onto your hat, baby, I've gone and fallen in love!! James Alexander is his name and when you look at him, automatically you ask yourself: "How handsome can a guy be?"

Jimmy, in the role of Curly, opened in "Oklahoma!" at the Biltmore the other night and his performance killed the people! His acting was sensational, his singing divine. I could rave on and on about his beautiful blonde hair, his blue eyes, etc., but to prove that I'm not the only one who's gone overboard on this 6'2" chunk of man, here's what some of the critics had to say: Harrison Carroll in the Herald-Express wrote: "James Alexander is handsome, sings well and has definite personality." The Hollywood Reporter raved: "Alexander's hit here is really something to write home about. He is in full and splendid voice." Virginia Wright in the News added: "Alexander is a first rate Curly with fine voice and pleasing presence." The Examiner said: "James Alexander is a handsome Curly with a gift for song."

SHOW BIZ FACES TOTAL DIMOUT IN MIDWEST

24 hours began operating under dimout conditions similar to Chicago's. Situation is becoming worse by the hour. An ICC decision to allow film houses to opearte on a 24-hour week-end basis instead of a 4-hour daily stint hinges in the balance. From all indications the verdict will not be favorable when rendered.

MATINEE PLAN FLOPS

Original ICC ruling for filmeries to operate on a daily 2 to 6 p.m. basis (Sunday excepted) has proven to be a 100 per cent failure due to the fact that no house can hope to operate profitably on that basis.

Many Chicago theatres are trying to buy generators and other electrical gadgets that will give them sufficient power to stay in business. Two neighborhood houses are operating full time with their own power while the Loop film theatres are hastily installing equipment to be ready for a week-end opening.

The Palace Theatre, Chillicothe, Illinois was cut off from all electricity for alleged violation of the dimout order.

No actual count is available as to the number of theatres closed in Illinois but the trend has been toward a gradual shutdown, in the past few days, due to the power shortage.

NITERIES FACE BAN

Chicago night clubs which have been operating during the emergency because they have food licenses also are faced with a complete shutdown if the total blackout is put into effect.

All legit shows in Chicago, with the exception of the Erlanger and Studebaker, are operating to good houses using their own power. "Day Before Spring" closed at the Studebaker Saturday and "Late George Apley" folded at the Erlanger two weeks ahead of time when trouble was encountered installing a generator.

Four Gottlieb Pix In 1946 Release

Alex Gottlieb will have four films he produced for Warners released during 1946. Producer has "Her Kind of Man" slated for national release Saturday and other pictures due for outlet are "Janie Gets Married," "The Time, the Place and the Girl" and "Two Guys from Milwaukee."

ROACH SLOWS DEAL FOR HIS RELEASES

Hal Roach will complete the first three of his current year's slate of 12 features before making any decision on a distribution deal, it was learned yesterday. Understood Roach believes he can get a better percentage deal after releasing organizations view some of his finished product.

"Curley," produced by Bob McGowan and directed by Bernard Carr, is currently before the cameras. "Here Comes Trouble," with Fred Guiol producing-directing, is slated to roll May 21. The Bebe Daniels production, "The Fabulous Joe" goes before the cameras latter part of June with Harve Foster directing. Roach is expected to announce his distributing setup early in July.

Not Enough Calvados For 350 Page 'Triumph' Script

Script for "Arch of Triumph" was headache at Enterprise yesterday with producer, director and writer sweating with trimming trouble.

Screenplay turned over by Erwin Shaw to Producer David Lewis and Director Lewis Milestone ran to 350 pages—which is enough script for a serial with a short feature left over. Lewis and Milestone retired to the desert to ponder over cuts and Shaw took his copy to beach. Trio will get together later for final decision on the trims.

The best Lewis and Milestone hoped for, they said, was to reduce the screenplay to material for a 150 minute show. At present they are debating possibility of putting out a show at least that long and said they may finally decide to screen the pic in two sections with an intermission.

Company is understood to be considering putting picture out as a road-show, instead of general release.

VIRGINIA THEATRES ALSO CLOSING

Washington, May 8. — Virginia theatres shut down at midnight tomorrow until after the end of the current coal crisis, the Virginia Public Utilities Commission made clear today. An order issued yesterday indicated that the theatres would be permitted electricity four hours a day, the same as other "non-essential" business. However, this was clarified by today's announcement that they will receive no electricity at all.

Meantime the Washington Motion Picture Theatre Owners, in session today, voted to halt the use of air conditioning equipment until the electric power situation improves. Theatres here are expecting to be ordered on a four-hour-a-day rate for electric current. The MPTO session voted to recommend that the houses be open from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m., instead of a proposed period from 2 to 6 p.m. However, the association made clear that it will obey any restrictions suggested temporarily, at least.

Washington mid-city theatres expect to benefit at the box office by closing of the Northern Virginia film houses. They believe that residents of the heavily populated area just across the Potomac will motor here evenings for entertainment.

Garfield Rushed Into Raft Radio Role

John Garfield last night was set as last minute replacement for George Raft in the guest-spot on Eddie Cantor's NBC show for Bristol-Meyers. Young & Rubicam grabbed Garfield on few hours' notice after Raft notified agency suddenly scheduled shooting of sequences in "Nocturne," RKO piece now in production, precluded his appearance on airshow.

Col Prod Chores

Columbia parceled out three films to two new producers yesterday. John Haggott drew "Reported Dead" and "I Don't Like to Die," while William Bloom was handed "The Creaking Gate."

Metro Signs Trio

Metro yesterday signed three featured players for "The Beginning or the End." Leon Ames, Moroni Olsen and Richard Hayden drew parts in the atom bomb film.

Merritt as Pastor

Bruce Merritt, former New York stage actor, has been cast for the role of the Protestant clergyman in "Abie's Irish Rose."

DON LEE ASKS LOW POWER TELE

Washington, May 8.—Mutual-Don Lee net has asked Federal Communications Commission permission to operate its video station, W6XAO here with lower cost five kilowatt transmitter. Outfit originally asked for a 50 kw commercial outlet.

In same application Mutual told commission it would later also bid for an ultra-high color outlet, along with others who have dropped straight black and white pending color's arrival.

H'D SONGWRITERS WILL GET LOOK AT NEW PACT

New York, May 8. — New contract being formulated by Songwriters' Protective Association to replace current agreement between cleffers and music publishers won't be acted upon by both factions for some time. John Schulman, SPA attorney, and Fred Ahlert head for Coast next Monday with draft of proposed pact to show the Hollywood songwriting colony.

It is believed here that SPA is making very special effort to draw local songwriters into talks, out of which new contract will emerge to replace current ten-year-old one, because of recent criticism leveled by Coast writers that they have been left out in cold by the association. No Coaster has been an officer in SPA since L. Wolfe Gilbert quit the veepee post in a huff several years ago. Last local member of national board was Walter Kent, dropped two months ago reportedly because he couldn't be present at NY sit-ins. Coast members haven't even been holding meetings of late.

CLEAR CHANNELS PROBE LAID TO SEN. WHEELER

channel group, after Paul Spearman, regional station attorney, declined to put witnesses on stand. He said he would stand on record of hearings thus far.

Caldwell demanded that either spokesman for regionals or Spearman himself take stand, declaring 15 clear channel witnesses had been consistently "persecuted" under cross-examination by Spearman. Caldwell said he'd like to do some examining, too, and pointing out load had been carried by others. Then he made accusation about Wheeler. Spearman indignantly denied Wheeler has part in pressuring FCC to break down channels, adding, "I haven't seen Wheeler since start of this hearing."

To this Caldwell snapped, "That isn't necessary since you do see Ed Carney." Latter is regional broadcaster from Montana who has been battling for breakdown since 1937. He is Wheeler's radio advisor.

FCC commish Rosel Hyde stated matter of regionals testifying would go before full commission in July when the final stanza of clear channel hearings gets under way. Present sessions fold tomorrow.

J. Frank Burke, of KFVD here, appeared before FCC yesterday to show reason why breakdown should be effected. He charged clear broadcasting stations, by their own acts, removed all reason for protection in accepting network programs heard from coast to coast. Position of broadcasting their own programs has been sacrificed to acceptance of net shows, not under control of individual station ownership. By this they lose claim to protection on exclusive night time coverage over wide areas, which they possess on basis of being independent, powerful, unique and exclusive program stations.

failed to amend the double-taxation treaty with Britain as requested by Hollywood's glamor boys and gals. BUT—and that is a BUT worthy of the capital letters—it was decided to put through a special protocol at a later date giving the actors the same rights as other citizens.

Such a protocol has been under consideration for some time, it is understood, by the State Department and the British Foreign Office.

The reason for giving the actors the special treatment is a matter of time pure and simple. The senators want to do the right thing by Hollywood's thesps, but to amend the treaty would cause a delay of several months. The treaty has been held up ever since last July, when it was reported favorably, because of the actors' complaint that under its terms they were treated worse than all other American citizens.

The special agreement was decided upon as the solution of the tangle today. If the players beef was handled as an amendment, the treaty would have to go back to the British Parliament for ratification. The belief here is that the protocol will be approved speedily by the State Department and Britain.

SQUAWKS and raves from both exhibs and fans are rolling into Benedict Bogeaus flackery over the title of the Ernest Hemingway yarn being co-produced by Bogeaus and Casey Robinson. Some exhibs complain that they'll never get much preliminary public interest stirred up in a pic titled "The Short and Happy Life of Francis Macomber," let alone fit the label into marquee lights. Others, however, figure that the title has selling power, especially with Hemingway readers and should be retained. Studio has finally written Hemingway for his reaction, but hasn't received a reply yet.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The President's supposition that the Wagner Act forbids the payment of a royalty to Lewis' union is subject to argument. The Act forbids financial payments by an employer to a union, but the intention there was to prevent influence upon a union against the interests of the workers. That is not the case in this situation. It can hardly be contended that this payment is made to influence John L. Lewis to favor the operators. The delay in the President's taking over the mines is understandable since it's not too certain the miners will go back to work even under the government. The railway brotherhoods also are not inclined to be so responsive to government order as workers during the war. The spokesman of the trainman says they will not work without the rule changes no matter who operates the roads.

PARAMOUNT RELEASE of a Pine-Thomas production. Associate producer, L. B. Merman. Director, William Pine. Original screenplay, Geoffrey Homes. Photography, Fred Jackman, Jr. Editing, Howard Smith, Henry Adams. Art direction, F. Paul Sylos. Set decorations, Louis Diege. Assistant director, Harold Knox. Sound, Max Hutchinson. Music score, Rudy Schrager.

TRADESHOWN at Paramount studios, Hollywood, Calif., May 2, 1946. Running time: 68 MINS.

Latest of the Pine-Thomas films for Paramount release deals with Mississippi bar pilots, on lower reaches where river meets the sea. Picture doesn't offer much in freshness, but it qualifies as strong program fare and names of Johnny Weissmuller and Buster Crabbe should draw satisfactorily. P-T have accorded film their customary careful production values.

Weissmuller is pictured returning to his old home on the delta, his confidence in himself as a pilot, one of those few able to guide ships through narrow channels of delta, almost completely destroyed due to a tragic accident in the war in which boat he commanded as member of Coast Guard went down. Plot is rambling affair, never too concise and often confused, which deals with his finding himself. Against this pattern, there is interpolated a series of meoldramatic events which lead to giant swamp fire, set by Crabbe, portraying a Cajun heavy.

Star, playing one of first outside his Tarzan repertoire, tries hard but isn't always up to demands of role. In contrast, Crabbe makes the most of a part which sometimes calls for him to lean bit hard on villainous side. Carol Thurston is Weissmuller's French-descent sweetheart, a fiery little thing who turns in clever performance, and Virginia Grey is smoothly enticing as the other woman. Pedro de Cordoba and Marcelle Corday enact Miss Thurston's grandparents atmospherically, William Edmunds makes a colorful tavern-keeper, and Edwin Maxwell and Pierre Watkin also have brief roles.

Original screenplay by Geoffrey Homes was directed by Pine, one of the producers, and L. B. Merman acted as associate producer. Fred Jackman, Jr.'s photography is interesting. Art direction by F. Paul Sylos and set decorations by Louis Diege lend colorful background, and Rudy Schrager contributed excellent musical score.

Proceeds will be used to buy new equipment at Amarillo's Boys' Ranch, story of which is basis of picture.

The Searching Wind

(Drama)

PARAMOUNT RELEASE of a Hal Wallis production. Director, William Dieterle. Screenplay, based on her play, Lillian Hellman. Originally produced and directed on stage by Herman Shumlin. Photography, Lee Garmes. Music score, Victor Young. Art direction, Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. Set decorations, Sam Comer, John McNeil. Process photography, Farciot Edouart. Wardrobe, Michael Woulfe, Dorothy O'Hara. Editor, Warren Low. Sound, Hugo Grenzbach, Walter Oberst.

CAST—Stars Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney, Ann Richards. Features Dudley Digges, Douglas Dick. Supporting players, Albert Basserman, Dan Seymour, Ian Wolfe, Marietta Canty.

TRADESHOWN at Paramount studio, Hollywood, Calif., May 2, 1946. Running time: 108 MINS.

"The Searching Wind" is Hal Wallis' most ambitious picture to date, a strongly-compelling dramatic piece assured of high grosses. Picture is a notable example of bringing a stage play to the screen, and has been accorded top production values throughout. Name cast headed by Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney and Ann Richards has been directed for best dramatic effect by William Dieterle, and film throughout measures up to high standard.

Lillian Hellman, in the script of her own play, early sets a fast pace of interest which never wavers. Part of film is told in flashback form, but action is several reels along before the past is pictorially recalled, for the benefit of Douglas Dick, a promising newcomer whose popularity and future are bound to accrue from his splendidly-enacted role as son of Young and Miss Richards.

There is a powerful thought embodied in "Wind," that of dalliance of American diplomats when the world needed a strong hand of guidance. Young, as a young diplomat who becomes an ambassador, typifies this group, too trusting of the world in general and hesitant about reporting true facts to Washington for the simple reason he does not fully recognize the peril at hand. The human element enters in form of Misses Sidney and Richards, one whom he loves, the other whom he marries.

Young contributes a carefully-thought-out performance as the ambassador and he finds able assistance in both actresses. Miss Sidney has never been better, and Miss Richards offers a finely-drawn characterization of a woman whose whole world is inconsequential people and the diplomatic life in which she loves to dwell.

Dudley Digges, as latter's father, a former great publisher who now lives very much in the present with his drinking, gives a grand portrayal, tempering a dramatic role with frequent excursions into comedy. Albert Basserman makes the most of a brief part, in which he interprets a German count who comes to Young, as ambassador, with a proposition from German tops, and Ian Wolfe is Young's secretary. Balance of cast uniformly is good.

Wallis has endowed film with true showmanship values which are reflected in Dieterle's flawless direction. Photography by Lee Garmes is of high standard, and musical score by Victor Young contributes to general dramatic effect. Hans Dreier and Franz Bachelin's art direction has been lavishly executed, and as suitably decorated by Sam Comer and John McNeil. Other technical departments match up.

Comedy-drama is first stage show Gleason has authored since the '20s, when he wrote such plays as "Is Zat So?" "The Shannons of Broadway" and "The Fall Guy."

West of the Alamo

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producer and director, Oliver Drake. Associate producer, Glenn Cook. Production manager, Charles Kerr. Dialog director, Ande Lamb. Original screenplay by Louise Rousseau. Photography, Harry Neumann. Sound technician, Frank McWhorter. Film editor, William Austin. Set dresser, Vin Taylor. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Assistant director, Eddie Davis.

CAST—Jimmy Wakely, Lee "Lasses" White, Iris Clive, Jack Igram, Red Holton, Budd Buster, Eddie Majors, Ray Whitley, Early Cantrell, Lou Head, Billy Dix, Ted French, Bill Hamilton and Ezra Jones.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post theatre, Hollywood, Cal., May 9, 1946. Running time: 58 MINS.

Cedar Rock was full of skullduggery until Jimmy Wakely and his old pal, Lee "Lasses" White, galloped into town to revamp law and order and to restore Iris Clive to her rightful place in the community, although Iris was in the hoosegow on a murder rap.

The way it starts out, Jimmy and Lee mosey into town as Rangers but nobody knows it except the audience. The Cedar Rock Bank is run by a no-good-so-and-so named Jack Ingram who frames Iris to hide his own chicanery.

It seems that Iris and her equally virtuous sister, Helen, run a saloon and gambling joint but everything is on the up-and-up until they discover that their faro dealer, Ray Whitley, is a baddie. He is a good faro dealer but he has nasty ideas when he is not dealing the cards.

One of his ideas is a hold-up of the stage coach, which is foiled for the time being by Jimmy and Lee, but along comes a $75,000 holdup, with complications. Iris dresses up like a he-bandit and grabs 75 grand off of Ingram, but it is an honest robbery on account of Ingram has swiped that much money off of Iris' old man, and the dough is rightfully hers.

There is a lot of masquerading in the picture, with Iris masquerading as a stagecoach robber and Red Holton masquerading as Iris, but it all comes out harmoniously with Jimmy and Lee pulling their guns at the psychological moment. Iris is pardoned by the governor for stealing back her old man's bankroll, and all's well again in Cedar Rock, with music by Jimmy Wakely.

The singing is pretty good.

Grayson, Durante Inked

Kathryn Grayson and Jimmy Durante were signed yesterday for Metro's "It Happened in Brooklyn," with Miss Grayson set for the femme lead.

JOHN DALL GIVEN RELEASE BY WB

John Dall yesterday asked and received release from his Warner Bros. contract. In the more than a year he had been away from the screen, Dall had starred in two Broadway legits, "The Hasty Heart" and "Dear Ruth." The William Morris agency is currently negotiating two starring free lance deals for actor with two major studios.

THE GRAPEVINE: The whisper is that Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has laid $50,000 on the line for screen rights to "Terry and the Pirates" . . . Brian Aherne is wondering aloud whether Joan Fontaine, his ex-wife, will sell him her Beverly Hills home now that she is married to William Dozier. Aherne gave her the house shortly after he married her . . . Bette Davis and Joan Crawford lunched together in the Green Room at Warners yesterday just to prove those reports that they have been feuding are all nasty canards . . . Hollywoodites are looking over the resort business, and the billions of tourists who will be coming in increasing droves, and consulting their business managers. For instance, a new hostelry is projected for Ojai and financed by film money. And a group of Hollywood citizens, headed by Harry Sugarman and Emil Coleman, has bought 100 acres of property at Big Bear. They plan to build a swank resort hotel when building restrictions are lifted . . . Watch for fireworks when Vince Flaherty returns to his Examiner cubicle from Mexico City. Paul Zimmerman of the Times sports page has been throwing curves about Flaherty's succumbing to Pasquel's offer to publicize the Mexican baseball league—and the curves may turn into boomerangs . . . Billy Wilder has signed his tennis pro, Elinor Tennant at the Bevhills Tennis Club, for a role in "The Emperor Waltz" . . . Sign in a shop opening soon on Hollywood Boulevard reads, "Watch for our Hollywood Peasant Wear." We would like to know what a Hollywood peasant is. A simple soul tilling his marijuana patch while the world passes by?

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: After much thought, National Broadcasting Co. has issued an ultimatum—no more press or magazine pictures of Bing Crosby unless he's wearing a hat . . . Going up in the world: Martin Strader, stand-in for Richard Norris in "Abie's Irish Rose," who is being "built up" with five-inch wooden soles for his chores . . . Errol Flynn, Faith Dorn and Ted Stauffer, the Alan Mowbrays and Alan Hale, at Kings. Anne Baxter celebrated her birthday with a dinner for John Hodiak, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wendling, Mr. and Mrs. Keogh Gleason . . . Cully Richards cracked, "I'm tired of listening to those old fashioned dames. Especially after the fourth or fifth oldfashioned" . . . Barrie O'Daniels was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon for "outstanding accomplishment" in producing GI shows in Europe . . . Six more Goldwyn Girls, Lorraine de Rome, Georgia Lange, Irene Vernon, Shirley Pickering, Lynne Walker, Mary Ellen Gleason, will tour the country in connection with openings of "The Kid from Brooklyn" . . . A sharp-eyed observer at RKO reports another signpost to inflation: Studio insured a mess of costume jewelry for $1500 during the shooting of "Gunga Din" ten years ago. Today, the same heap of gew-gaws is insured for $25,000 during shooting on "Sinbad the Sailor."

CALL SHEET: HARRY VON ZELL will play a disc jockey with Bob Hope in "Where There's Life," portraying him as a comical fellow handy with practical jokes . . . JANIS CARTER will venture out of Columbia's walls to Douglas, Ariz., where she will appear as a queen of the rodeo over the weekend . . . DON CASTLE tells about the incurable horse player who climbed into a taxi and asked, "What's the fare for eight furlongs, bud?" . . . BOB CASE has been engaged by Freddy Martin to manage the latter's new record shop . . . GENE DE PAUL, just about to leave the Army, wrote his songwriting partner Don Raye and asked him to send along two of his suits of civvies, which had been resting in Raye's trunk. Raye opened the trunk, found all of the 12 suits moth-eaten to the point they were dripping from the hangers. He wired De Paul: "Sending your suits . . . in a jar."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Discussing the 20th anniversary of sound, Mike Curtiz was ruminating on the Days of Terror when the films learned to talk. He recalled, "Sound equipment was so scarce it was kept in operation 24 hours a day—one company shooting during the day, another at night. I was making 'The Madonna of Avenue A' with Dolores Costello, which was scheduled for quick release. I had to put myself on a 24-hour schedule, using two different crews and shooting around part of the cast in the day and using the others at night. After shooting for three straight days and nights, I had to go home to bed for a week" . . . Official document from Selznick Studios reports that "Alfred Hitchcock may return to America with an unknown French girl to play one of the feminine leads in 'The Paradine Case.'" Our insolent thought was "and then again he may not" . . . Flagstaff, Ariz., looks like a little bit of Hollywood these days. RED CROSS PAYS FILM INDUSTRY HIGH TRIBUTE

paign, or 16 per cent above the quota, and declared that the trade press was largely responsible for the industry showing, not only in this but in its wartime growth of importance.

Plaques, in appreciation of their efforts during the Red Cross campaign were presented to Daily Variety, New York's weekly Variety and other motion picture trade publications. In the absence of Arthur Ungar, Daily Variety's plaque was accepted by its Washington correspondent. Abel Green, of Weekly Variety, accepted that publication's plaque.

PLAQUE FOR DAILY VARIETY

Here is the citation of Daily Variety as delivered by Skouras:

"Fearless, outspoken defender of our business, the pungent offspring of the Bible of Show Business — known as Daily Variety—under the sturdy and progressive editorship of Arthur Ungar is another of our Coast publications which has always opened its columns for the good of the trade. Always a leader, in the motion picture industry's charitable endeavors, Daily Variety has been an unfailing friend and supporter of every important human welfare movement in which we have been concerned. This paper and its distinguished editor have served with distinction in all worthy undertakings and I am happy to present this award with thanks and gratitude."

At a luncheon given by the Red Cross to the industry men who came to town to celebrate the success of filmdom's efforts in the drive, Basil O'Connor, national Red Cross chairman, presented Skouras with a certificate of honor signed by himself, and President Truman. Before the luncheon, the President received the industry people at the White House and, after lunch, they were given a trip down the Potomac to Mt. Vernon, George Washington's home, aboard a new Navy destroyer. O'Conner said at the lunch that there was "no way of placing a dollar mark on the contribution of the industry to the Red Cross fund drive."

"The efforts which enabled the drive to bring in $113,000,000," he said, "would never have been reached without the aid of the industry's promotion. Unbelievable results have been achieved."

TRADE PRESS PRAISED

Kudoing the trade press, Skouras said: "To you leaders of our trade opinion, and who have been such bulwarks of strength to our industry in all of these undertakings, we look for continued support. Without you it is hardly possible to achieve that unity of purpose and eventual good for which we must ever strive. You are the voice of filmdom—our main artery of communication. You have been the torchbearers of unity in our industry. The awe inspiring results which we attained this year of a total of $4,279,120, I say with all confidence could not have been accomplished without your endeavors and collective cooperation. Has any division of our country's tremendous fourth estate exceeded this record? I doubt it."

Other speakers at the dinner included Harold J. Fitzgerald, national campaign director for the industry; and William J. Kupper, national distributors chairman.

IBEW TURNS DOWN BROADCASTERS' WAGE OFFER

Another possibility of a strike looms for indie stations here with flat rejection of broadcasters' counter-offer in wage negotiations between 12 stations and International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Yesterday, according to Roy Tindall, union rep, 150-odd technicians concerned unanimously refused managements' proposal for 18½ cents per hour increase. Union had asked hike ranging from 22 to 45 per cent.

When informed of rejection, Dean Johnson, attorney for Southern California Broadcasters, stated broadcasters had made what he presumed to be their well-considered offer. "They cannot afford any more," he added. Union, on other hand, states it will stand pat on original demands, and will probably officially inform Johnson of same today. Unless another meeting of opposing sides produces unforeseen retreat by either side, it's likely that union will lose no time in threatening strike. Engineers are regarded as virtually irreplaceable, unlike actors and announcers.

For the latter stand, Young & Rubicam has effected a tie-up stunt with Loew-Lewin Productions. Next Monday Mary Dublin, recently dubbed Queen of the Cleveland Sesqui, arrives here for a screen test tendered by L-L. Footage will be shipped back to the Ohio town and be shown at Telenews theatre there the week Linkletter program is on tap.

OPERATING HOURS MINIMUM IS LIFTED BY FCC

Washington, May 9.—In first nationwide action of its kind, the Federal Communications Commission today adopted an order permitting standard, FM and television stations to operate less than the minimum number of hours required by FCC rules and regulations.

So long as the power crisis endures, the commish ruled, "two or more stations in the same area" may adopt a plan to arranging their airtime so that insofar as is possible one continuous radio service is available at all times. This means that stations may stagger their hours voluntarily where the power situation may hobble radio facilities.

The FCC ruled, however, that all stations, whether on or off the ozone, must keep lighted their antennae and supporting structures, as normally required by commish regulations.

Dance Team Released From MCA Contract

Don and Beverly, dance team, granted release from contract with Music Corp. of America yesterday. Terpers had year to go on three-year pact with agency. Release was granted on act's complaint they had not been properly represented. Dissatisfaction with bookings obtained by MCA, said to have unvaried in two years, was given as cause. Act thought bookings should have been more evenly spread instead of concentrated so they were re-playing old dates.

Chicago Theatres Open For 24-Hour Weekend

Chicago, May 9.—Filmeries that have been closed for the past week due to the coal strike are reopening under permission given today from the Illinois Commerce Commission to operate on a 24-hour weekend basis. ◇

The ICC reversed its earlier order by which houses were allowed to operate on a daily two to six p.m. basis (Sunday excepted) and granted exhibitors 24 optional hours during the week in which to stay open. The weekend schedule was chosen because of the heavy business on those days. Theatres could not meet expenses under the two to six p.m. order.

Theatres will be open on Friday from six to 11 p.m., Saturday from two to 12 p.m., and Sunday from two to 11 p.m. All Chicago circuits, including Balaban & Katz, Essaness, Warners, Allied Theatres and RKO, as well as independent houses will run at the above times.

This is the first bit of good news that has struck Chicago film theatres in the past week. All but five of Chicago's 334 picture theatres were closed and an estimated $1,000,000 weekly loss was faced. Film theatres throughout Illinois, which have been closed for more than a week, were expected to follow the lead of the Chicago film theatres and file with the ICC to operate on the weekend schedule.

HOPPER WILL QUIT ARMOUR, SEEKS NEW SPONSOR

Hedda Hopper concludes her ether pact with Armour on June 3 and will negotiate for a new sponsor for fall. When Miss Hopper originally made deal with Foote, Cone & Belding agency, her program was aired over CBS. She was not informed that the time was preempted for her, with result that last October when winter shows resumed she was shunted over to ABC.

During her ride on CBS her Hooperatings had hovered between 7 and 11, in a quarter-hour niche which had her reaching eastern ears at 7:15 p.m. Her ABC time has been Mondays at 8:15 p.m. with result her rating has curled down to around 4. Miss Hopper will fly to England on June 10 for her first visit to the Isles in ten years. After six weeks there she will plane back to Hollywood.

Butler, Kern Head Lensers' Anni Show

David Butler and James Kern will be a committee of two to handle the entertainment features of the 25th anniversary banquet of the American Society of Cinematographers, to be held at the Cocoanut Grove in the Ambassador hotel, Monday evening, June 17. BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Gregory Peck will return to the Cape Playhouse for the week of June 8. Behind this exclusive announcement is a story of Greg's wonderful loyalty to director Arthur Sircom, who four years ago, when he was just playing small, supporting roles at this same straw-hat theatre, gave him an encouragement and bolster to his ego at a time when he needed it the most. And because Greg is one of those rare persons who has reached the top and has never forgotten the people who helped get him there, he has arranged his picture schedule so that he can go back to Dennis and work with Sircom again—not, I hasten to add, at his original $75 but at a salary commensurate with his Hollywood stardom. And son, that ain't hay—in the straw! . . . The backstage fracas between Mary Martin and McKay Morris is "on account of" Mary doesn't think that McKay is giving the same performance in which John Houseman directed him, and McKay does. So Equity will decide . . . Eddie Foy's medicos are advising him to go into a hospital and rest his wrenched back, or he may be out of the cast of "The Red Mill" indefinitely . . . Larry Olivier, who is skedded to do four plays of his Old Vic repertory for the Columbia Workshop, will divide whatever recompense he gets equally with every member of the troupe—because he's that kind of a right guy! . . . Bob Stephens, back in N.Y. after checking out of Warners as dialog director, hopes to branch out as a producer with a revival of "The Great Gatsby" . . . Overheard in the lobby of the Century: "But what did Henry IV ever do to have a play written about him?"

ADD ARRIVALS: Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz at the Madison . . . Fred Astaire at the Ritz-Carlton . . . Gail Page at the Blackstone . . . Susan Hayward at the Sherry-Netherland . . . Robert Nathan at the Plaza . . . Melchoir Lengyel at 23 West 73rd St . . . Marjorie Gateson at the Forest Hills Inn.

BULLETIN BOARD: To the privileged intimates of Katharine Cornell and Guthrie McClintic, who have been entertained at 23 Beekman Place, the news that their charming home, overlooking the East River, is now "for sale" will come as a personal blow. The asking price is said to be $150,000, with Billy Rose, a neighbor in the same sector, rumored to be interested. The reason for this surprise move is Kit's growing desire to live in the country all year round, alternating her summers at Martha's Vineyard with winters at Sneeding's Landing, where instead of leasing a home as she and Guthrie always have in the past, they will now buy one, just maintaining a small apartment in town for convenience.

Rodgers and Hammerstein, who lost Jan Clayton to Metro—and added a few grey hairs trying to replace her—were panicky at the thought that they'd have to go through the same routine with Charles Fredericks, who was supposed to check back to Metro June 1. But all is well now—at least until September. Fredericks will continue as "Gaylord Ravenel" until then, absorbing his 12-week lay-off period, which suits him as much as it does Oscar and Dick.

SIGNS OF THE TIME: A 42nd Street movie emporium is reviving "Stage Door" and gives the only marquee billing to an actress playing a small, supporting role—Lucille Ball. Wonder what ever happened to Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers?

ONCE OVER NIGHTLY: Vivien Leigh, all rumors to the contrary, will not visit Hollywood this trip . . . Now it's the Gene Kelly's, who are occupying Constance Collier's popular apartment on West 57th St., until Gene's civilian holiday is over and he reports back to the Metro workshop . . . Jimmy (Donahue & Coe) Washer will become a benedict again when he takes Mary Berkeley as his bride, June 8, with his brother, Ben, hosting a small wedding reception afterwards in Jerry Dale's new diggings at 530 Park Avenue . . . Sylvia Fine, en route back to the Coast, after a physical check-up with her obstetrician here, says that the Hollywood squib about Danny doing a musical for Vinton Freedley this fall is slightly premature. So far, it's just in the "will you, if you're available at any time stage, and you approve the book" —which isn't even on paper yet . . . Sammy Lange checks into Town House (11) . . . Ingrid Bergman, more nervous at meeting the press collectively, at RKO's huge cocktail shindig in the Terrace Room of the Plaza than facing any camera . . . All those confabs between Ina Claire (who, incidentally, never looked more radiant) and Gilbert Miller are because Mr. M. is trying to persuade Miss C. to return to his management in "La Parisienne" . . . With the Elliott Roosevelts, the Tex McCrarys, the Ed Fitzgeralds and the Richard Kollmars making domesticity a commercial asset, the latest entry into this husband and wife ether combo, are Jeanne Cagney and Kim Spalding, only instead of indulging in the usual breakfast chit-chat, they will enact a ficticious couple, "Candy and Bill," created by Elizabeth Dunne, in a series currently appearing in The Ladies Home Journal . . . Leonard Sillman, who has already found three choice apartments in N.Y. (when no one else seems to be able to find even a hall closet!) celebrated the housewarming of his newest "find" at 930 Fifth Ave. with a bon voyage party for June and Sidney Carroll, who had to return to Cal., because their Southgate sublet is now sublet to the Paul Whitemans . . . From no less an authority than Grace Moore herself comes word that she had the greatest triumph of her career in Rome. Now in Paris, she will be joined by Larry and Jane Tibbett, who arrive via Constellation (16).

shares of common outstanding March 30, comparing with $1.07 per share for same quarter last year. Quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share, payable June 28 to stockholders of record June 7, was voted by board.

9,000,000 SHARES

Two for one plan will give company 9,000,000 shares of $1 par value common, instead of authorized stock of 4,455,800 shares which will remain after elimination of the treasury stock. Board voted to submit to stockholders plan to eliminate all authorized but unissued first and second preferred and 1,349 shares of common held in the treasury.

Paramount will complete a 10-year program of debt retirement June 15, date board voted to make prepayment of $2,500,000 of the company's notes due 1949-51. After this final payment, neither the company nor any of its worldwide consolidated subsidiaries, theatre and otherwise, will have any outstanding mortgage or funded debt of any kind other than $2,000,000 parent company notes due 1951, which are convertible into common stock.

Estimated net earnings for the first quarter include $3,086,000 as Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsids. Estimated net earnings for same quarter last year included $839,000 share in undistributed earnings from subsids.

Daily Variety forecast both the stock dividend and the tremendous earnings. The melon was predicted in the issue of April 25. Three months earlier the earnings for the current year were put at $35,000,000.

Anticipating the action of the board, traders on the New York Exchange pushed Paramount up 3½ points to 85 today. It closed one quarter lower. The board announcement came some time after the close of trading.

'District Attorney' In Hooper May Day Lead

In the Hooperatings there were some sharp ups and downs, according to report for May 1 broadcasts. Figures on the Wednesday shows always are intriguing and the listings which last night became available are no exception.

"District Attorney" topped the field with a comfortable lead, weighing in with chest-puffy 18.7. Eddie Cantor was an easy second with 16.8, up .7. Kay Kyser pulled the day's biggest surprise with tremendous upsurges. On his 10-10:30 broadcast, he was clocked at 16.3, a powerful up of 5.4; from 10:30-11 Kyser wangled 15.7, up 4.2; "Dr. Christian," which never seems to fluctuate more than an eye-lash length, didn't on May-Day, either. Drama's 12.0 was off just .6.

Hildegarde's 8.1 was a nose-dive of 3.5, while Jack Smith dropped down 4.0 to land at 5.4. It might be said the fans weren't cupping ears to singers, except that "Supper Club" climbed 2.0 to level off at 10.2. Others didn't vary much. Bob Crosby, 9.5, off 0.3; "Fishing and Hunting Club," 1.9, off 0.3; Sinatra, 9.6, up .6; Gabriel Heatter, 6.0, up .1; "Great Moments in Music," 6.1, off .9; "Holiday for Music," 6.2, identical with week previous.

Jack Carson gained .2 for 7.3. Lone Ranger upped .5 for 7.1; Lum and Abner upped .1 for a 3.9. "Mr. & Mrs. North" dropped 2.2 to 9.7. "News of the World" nudged up .5 for a 6.2. "Real Stories" slumped 1.3 with a 3.4. "Spotlight Bands" was off .4 at 3.3.

CBS PLANS BIG FM NET

FM net. Construction of 200 stations, adequate to serve almost 90 per cent of U.S. population, would cost over $8,000,000, according to Lodge.

Another $3,300,000 would be spent in operation, he claimed. But such net would give rural listeners service superior to that possible on similar chain of standard outlets. Earlier CBS prexy, Frank Stanton, told FCC such a net would not be economically feasible" for another five to ten years.

To reach 10 per cent not covered by FM, CBS proposed building of three 50 kilowatt outlets, plus two all-powerful megawatt stations beamed at sparsely settled areas. Pair of 1,000 dc outlets would cost $1,760,000, while three kw's would set net back another $780,000. These standard stations would be unprofitable, says CBS, but would, nevertheless, be constructed if given FCC approval.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

THERE'S no beef between manager Joe Glaser and Horace Heidt over the week Lionel Hampton band owes Heidt's Trianon ballroom. Story was Glaser was adverse to band going in there for $4,000 for owed week. Straight, according to Glaser, is that he is willing that band play what's owed at same price ($4,000) as when there last year. However, Heidt is asking for additional three or five weeks and band will not play added time at that weekly wage. Currently regarded a commercially hottest Negro aggregation, band's due here in mid-August for about ten weeks and must be back in New York by November. About six weeks are already booked in this territory, leaving four open. Glaser is holding off all bidders seeking top price in auction-like bidding being practiced by buyers here. Big dough is here, says Glaser, and he's going to get it or fill in with one-nighters, etc.

CREDIT for rat race of the year goes to KFI and National Broadcasting Co. for muffing Preakness coverage Saturday. Station was prepped to carry tradition-laden horse race at 2 p.m. and heavily advertised event. But someone got his wires crossed and all listeners got at 2 p.m. was a Bromo-Seltzer blurb that made for a headache. Seems network carried entire race—but it started at 1:45. By time FKI cut in as scheduled at 2 p.m. the race was over. Failure was really complete when un-alert in attendance on pickup failed to give even a result of race. Listeners only heard Bromo spot announcement, following station's sustainer "Camera Clinic," plus description of field and usual race aftermath.

During war, new backings were out due to restrictions on photographing panoramas and shortage of paper on which to print any that could be legitimately filmed. Panamoric pictures are blown up to giant size, and put on backgrounds which are used in scenes.

The songwriter-character who has been bold-lined into Abner strip lately is plainly Sammy Stept, who wrote "Don't Marry." PALLADIUM ballroom has upped its prices ten cents and is now getting $1.02, tax included. Former price was .75, plus tax that upped it to 90 cents. Band will get new high of $7,500 weekly for the date, and it's possible that operators may try to recoup via the customers.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

It's going to be difficult enough to settle the current strikes without tossing in more hindering factors, but I've been wondering whether we might not work out labor contracts that run for longer than a year. You say, of course, the idea may be good, but not at this time; conditions are too unsettled. But maybe labor contracts that run for several years would help restore stability. Maybe thus Management would be more willing to agree to demanded increases in the hourly wage. We would make it less likely we have another series of strikes in another year, and we could go ahead longer in this business of getting back to normal . . . Over in India, it seems we're back to normal. The war has not made enough change to find a means of granting freedom to India. Don't blame that too much on the British, for the Indians themselves can't agree on the form of their freedom.

INDIES JOINING MAJORS IN WORLD FILM SURVEY

New York, May 12. — Foreign heads of film companies have voted to let the Motion Picture Association make a broad scale and continuing survey of world film markets. It will be the first comprehensive definitive research on an international scale and will be made by MPA's new research department.

Participating non-MPA members are United Artists, Republic, PRC and Monogram. They will be asked to contribute a share of the cost of the survey but it will be financed by the seven member companies if the others won't share.

Existing facilities such as American company offices will be used as far as possible for conducting the survey. Details will be worked out early this week by a special subcommittee of foreign managers.

Survey will make a worldwide census of theatres, seating capacity, admission charges, operating policies and ad expenditures. Also to be covered are native film production, studio facilities and limiting legislature.

TRADESHOWN at studio, May 6, 1946. Running time: 106 MINS.

"O. S. S." is a natural for profitable exploitation, and as such it should click solidly at turnstiles. Film is first of incoming tide of features based on exploits during war of that hush-hush group, Office of Strategic Services, which did so much to prepare the way to pinpoint bombing and ultimate victory, and it stars Alan Ladd, Geraldine Fitzgerald sharing top honors with him.

Ladd and Miss Fitzgerald are part of a team sent by O. S. S. into France prior to the Normandy invasion to contact the French underground and sabotage railroad system, particularly that which runs through a certain key tunnel. Romantic angle is played for a minimum, which has pair up until last at swordpoints, footage concentrating on exciting action as pair are hunted by the Gestapo. Plot carries no particularly new angles insofar as straight action is concerned, being at best a mediocre spy story, but because of its tie-in with Strategic Services and what that stood for in public mind picture should get by admirably.

Ladd delivers his customary virile characterization, under-playing more suspenseful moments for greater effect, and he has an excellent running mate in Miss Fitzgerald. Pair work well together and are responsible for much of high degree of interest film carries. Pat Knowles plays Navy commander in charge of French O. S. S. teams, John Hoyt plays Nazi colonel with proper menace and in role of a Gestapo agent who strikes up bargain with Ladd, Harold Vermilyea is immense. Onslow Stevens is in for interesting bit, Gloria Saunders leaves a nice impression with her wireless operator portrayal and Richard Webb, Richard Benedict and Don Beddoe likewise score.

Irving Pichel in his direction put punch into his scenes and film is credit to his craftsmanship. Richard Maibaum both produced and wrote original screenplay, he, too, rating hand. Photography by Lionel Lindon is first-rate throughout. Hans Dreier and Haldane Douglas did nice job with their art direction and Sam Comer and Stanley J. Sawley decorated sets suitably. Technical credits generally are high grade.

CAST—Stars Bob Hope, Joan Caulfield. Features Patric Knowles, Marjorie Reynolds, Cecil Kellaway, Joseph Schildkraut, Reginald Owen, Constance Collier, Hillary Brooke, Fortunio Bonanova, Douglas Dumbrille, Mary Nash, Leonid Kinskey, Howard Freeman.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village theatre, Westwood, Calif., May 3, 1946. Running time: 92 MINS.

This is scarcely Bob Hope's masterpiece, but by and large his multiple following will lap it up for strong box office returns. The old Booth Tarkington yarn gets a broad, slapstick treatment which probably will make Rudolph Valentino twirl in his tomb. Hope plays the hapless barber out of court of an indistinguishable King Louis of France and in doing so runs the whole comedy gamut of criss-crossed diplomacy and mocked inter-kingdom politics. There is plenty of color in the costume piece, but more punch might have been injected had some of Hope's humor been pointed with a rapier, rather than applied with slapstick. Many of the more hilarious sequences would have been benefitted by appropriate cutting, such as the climatic dueling scene.

Joan Caulfield plays a rather spirited maid, opposite Hope, and properly foils for him. Rest of cast, an especially strong array, lends a lot of weight in support. Joseph Schildkraut gives a fine performance as a Spanish general who happens to be the menace. Patric Knowles gives bounce to the Duc role and Reginald Owen milks all possibilities out of broadly farcical part of the French King. Marjorie Reynolds, Cecil Kellaway and Constance Collier give good touches to rather minor roles.

Producer Paul Jones really let go of the financial reins in investing piece with trappings properly lavish to fit period and locale. George Marshall, at direction helm, gave Hope his head, but should have tightened film by lopping off ten minutes or more. Lionel Lindon's camera explored about all the angles and Hans Dreier's art was responsible for some eye-enlarging sets. Three songs by Jay Livingston and Ray Evans may not make a dent off screen but they fit buoyantly where inserted.

(Melodrama-Technicolor)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Michel Kraike. Director, George Sherman. Screenplay, Melvin Levy, Francis Edwards Faragoh. Story, Harold Shumate. Photography, William Snyder. Technicolor direction, Natalie Kalmus, Francisco Cugat. Editor, Charles Nelson. Art direction, Stephen Goosson, Walter Holscher, Perry Smith. Set decorations, Albert Richerd. Sound, Lambert Day. Assistant director, Wilbur McGaugh. Gowns, Jean Louis. Musical score, Paul Sawtell. Musical director, M. W. Stoloff.

CAST—Features Evelyn Keyes, Willard Parker, Larry Parks, Edgar Buchanan. Supporting players, Jim Bannon, Forrest Tucker, Ludwig Donath, Fank Sully, Willard Robertson, Paul E. Burns, Eddy Waller, Vernon Dent, Francis Ford, Hermine Sterler, Eilene Janssen, Virginia Brissac, Addison Richards.

PREVIEWED at studio, May 9, 1946. Running time: 87 MINS.

"Renegades" catches the spirit of the Old West insofar as public's conception of it is concerned, a beautifully-photographed tinter which should enjoy heavy popular response. George Sherman keeps pace moving at fast clip, in his direction, and Michel Kraike as producer added showmanship touches to script by Melvin Levy and Francis Edwards Faragoh. Film generally is in class category for a western.

Plot centers around Evelyn Keyes, betrothed to Willard Parker, a fast-shooting doctor marrying Larry Parks, an outlaw. Character of Parker is made bit on the noble side, but otherwise is a strong portrayal and one which has audience shouting for him. Into this story set-up is brought number of posse chases, considerable gunplay and enough interest to keep spectators pleasantly attracted.

Miss Keyes is lovely in her role, color photography enhancing her natural beauty, and Parker contributes ruggedly to the action which usually has him dispensing pills with one hand a gun blazing in the other. Parks is convincing as an outlaw, who tries to go straight in first part of film but later, after being arrested because he bears name of Dembrow, that of his bandit-father and two brothers, joins them in their raids.

Edgar Buchanan, as the father, is a standout in feature's most memorable role, Bible-reading badman who figures the world owes him a living. He tempers his characterization with humor. Jim Bannon and Forrest Tucker enact his other two sons, Willard Robertson is Miss Keyes' father who disowns her when she weds Parks, and Eddy Waller, Frank Sully and Francis Ford are in for comedy character parts.

Technical credits uniformly are first-rate, particularly color photography of William Snyder. Harold Shumate wrote original story which Levy and Faragoh scripted with plenty of excitement accruing, and M. W. Stoloff's direction of Paul Sawtell's musical score builds scenes to proper pitch. Jean Louis' gowns for femme star are tasterully designed.

American Legion Will Honor Cantor

Eddie Cantor tomorrow night will be awarded a special citation by the American Legion. Citation was voted the actor for his two-year "Gifts to Yanks Who Gave" campaign, which resulted in 2,500,000 Christmas gifts being distributed to hospitalized G.I.s and for his services in establishing the "Purple Heart" circuit.

ROACH BOOSTING 'CURLEY' SCHEDULE TO FIFTY DAYS

Hal Roach has boosted shooting schedule of 29 days, originally set for "Curley," Roach's first film under his new production setup, to 50, following look at hastily-assembled footage already shot.

Producer stated Saturday that material, directed by Bernard Carr and produced by Robert McGowan, showed far greater promise for a top comedy than script had indicated, and that, if need be, 50-day schedule now assigned film would be upped further.

Roach is reported to have been approached by money group for purpose of taking over production of a package deal, but producer, due to fact property isn't a comedy, turned down proposition. Roach's activities during next year will be devoted exclusively to turning out comedies.

Gross Will Produce Whodunit on B'way

Ed Gross, New York producer of "St. Louis Woman," has closed deal to produce Fred Methot's "The Comic Strip Murder" on Broadway. Agent Johnny Maschio negotiated. Play was cited as the best radio whodunit of 1945. Understood that Laraine Day will star in the legit version. Several studios are currently dickering for the property, but Gross has the rights to first produce it on Broadway.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: Metro's stately halls are echoing with the cries of Billy Rose, who is objecting strenuously to the script of "Jumbo." Says it's got to be revised before it goes into production. So the studio has sent a diplomat to New York to try to cool off the bantam Barnum. Ironic postscript is that "Jumbo" wasn't exactly a hit when Rose produced at the Hippodrome! . . . The often-ignored wife of a playboy star thought she had him tied down over the weekend. She was wrong. He showed up at Palm Springs with an auburn-haired starlet who recently figured on front pages . . . Talent scouts are eyeing Sandra Barrett, who has one of the leads in "Roberta," after San Francisco critics knocked themselves out praising her . . . And on the other side of the show business map, Boston reviewers pounded palms for the Ritz Brothers, who opened at the Bradford Roof last week with an assortment of songs, dances and funny stories . . . Warners is weeping into its demi-tasses. Arnold Albert left the lot just a few days before it was discovered that his last production, "The Man I Love," is in the hit class . . . New York Times is beefing up its Coast coverage, with Tom Brady taking over Fred Stanley's Hollywood beat; Gladwin Hill, ex-war correspondent, handling non-Hollywood news, and Bosley Crowther, head hatchet man in the film-reviewing department, coming out for a personal tour of inspection. Who's going to cover New York? . . . The flack who left 20th on apparently amiable terms returned on a visit to the praisery a few days ago. And was informed that, though he has a lot pass, he is off-limits in the publicity dept. . . . Take-to-the-hills warning: Bill Blowitz is delivering an address on "The Atomic Bomb and the World Today" at his young son's nursery school.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Joan Crawford would almost give her Oscar to play the American girl in "Arch of Triumph. Picture will start shooting June 24 in order that Ingrid Bergman can finish it in time for legit date . . . The Hitching Post has extended its ban on guns to children. They have to park their cap pistols now, along with the adults' shooting irons, due to the fact there's been more gunfire in the audience than on the screen during the unreeling of the horse operas . . . Monday Review of Litrature: James M. Cain's "Past All Dishonor," despite the ballyhoo, doesn't live up to the best of his previous works. It's the story of a Confederate spy who falls in love with a typical Cain heroine—the type you'd love to strangle—abandons the cause, and tries his fortunes in Virginia City's silver mining boom. Some of the background stuff is expertly handled, but somehow Cain's amoral characters seem more appropriate in modern dress. The hero, for instance, carries his heater in a shoulder holster, Chicago style . . . Mildred Gordon, wife of 20th publicist Gordon Gordon, has a whodunit "The Little Man Who Wasn't There" on the stands . . . Steve Fisher's "Winter Kill," already set for Broadway and Hollywood production, is an odd sort of crime melodrama, all of the action taking place in one small office. Characters are interesting, in a Clifford Odets style, but it's mostly a conversation piece . . . Now, removing our pale scholarly nose from the literary scene, this happened at Lucey's the other noon: Everett Crosby looked up from his lunch and lamped Charlie Goodman, one of the restaurant's partners. He called Goodman over, offered him a role in "Abie's Irish Rose." Goodman said he had promised his daughter in New York to stick to the eatery business and not "fool around in pictures." But Charlie said he'd call her and try to get permission. By the time Everett had finished his dessert he had his answer. Charlie's daughter said, "No."

CALL SHEET: DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., is his own standin this week on "Sinbad the Sailor." His regular standin Russell Brinston was injured when he fell down an elevator shaft . . . WALTER WANGER visited his wife Joan Bennett over the weekend on location at Rosaritas Beach, below the border, where "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber" is working . . . KATHARINE HEPBURN will undergo five facial makeup changes for Metro's "Sea of Grass." She ages from young bride to the mother of Tom Drake and Beverly Tyler . . . SOL LESSER'S "No Trespassing" company, on location at Sonora, went on a picnic yesterday to Big Trees National Park. Cast and crew had a band, sports events, prizes and a show . . . WALLY WESTMORE did a reverse angle on his makeup job on Paulette Goddard in "Kitty"—in which he converted her into a dirty-faced street gamin—for ABC's "What's Doing Ladies?" Contestant was taken from the audience, dirtied up and then rewarded with a Westmore face . . . ELIZABETH TAYLOR gets a two-page spread in Publisher's Weekly on her forthcoming book about her pet chipmunk, titled "Nibbles and Me" . . . LIONEL HAMPTON'S short for Metro will be titled "Jam's My Bread and Butter."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Harry Rapf, who goes his quiet way at Metro, making pictures with little ballyhoo but healthy grosses, has turned out a sleeper with "Lucky Star," according to the latest rumble. Report is that the picture is one of the best of its type ever made, principal ingredients being a boy named Marshall Thompson and a horse named Silvernip . . . You might call this an obituary in reverse. Paul Wallach would like it known he is NOT dead. Once reported killed in action in the Pacific, Wallach had all the trimmings, including letters of condolence to his parents, memorial services and obits—all of them most premature. Now he's started a theatrical and model agency and would not like to be thought of as defunct . . . Byron Roberts, second assistant on "Cheyenne" on location, is Flagstaff's town crier. With the company scattered over the town in hotels and auto camps, Roberts sets out at 5:30 a.m. to bang on doors and rout out the cast and crew . . . Disc jockey Bill Anson, the Chicago import, was four hours late in arriving by plane, so Jack Lawson, KFWB press agent, kept such celebs as Andy Russell, Connie Haines, Jan Garber, Anita Boyer happy by organizing gin rummy games and buying lunch. And thereby kept his reception committee from taking a powder.——D.D.T.

COSLOW TO SHARE STURGES BLDG. ON 20TH LOT

Sam Coslow has subleased from Preston Sturges first floor of Administration Bldg. on 20th-Fox Western Avenue lot. He will move into new quarters today with his Beacon Pictures company, and start prepping "Copacabana," which he will co-produce with Dave Hersh for United Artists release.

Sturges recently made deal with 20th-Fox for the two-story building, with privilege of renting out lower floor. Following extensive alterations of upper floor, Sturges' California company takes over there today, having occupied lower floor for past few weeks during alteration period.

Coslow's deal has no bearing on stage space, studio facilities being unavailable for him to shoot "Copacabana" on 20th-Fox lot. When picture is ready for filming, other stage space will be used. Monte Prosser, who is interested in production, will come west when film goes to cameras.

Art Jarrett Here Forming New Ork

Art Jarrett, who exited Navy last February, is in town re-forming ork. He disbanded last crew in 1942 when he entered the service. New outfit will be handled by Music Corp. of America and first location stand will be three-weeker at Plantation, Houston, starting May 30. Jarrett will attempt to pattern style of new crew after that of late Hal Kemp's combo. First man signed by Jarrett was Porky Banker, lead sax under Kemp, who will perform same function in the newly budding band.

KING'S MEN DISH SWEET MUSIC FOR SWEETS

In their new quarter-hour, designed for the radio-fireside sweets munchers, the King's Men once again proffer a very listenable choruscale. Program idea is as harmonious with audience it seeks as the very professional singing group. Class confectionist, Almond Roca, has hit upon a very happy media to airsell its product.

Combination of nostalgia and warmth permeates brief singing session. Songs such as "Silvery Moon," "Home On Range," "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes," etc., are rendered in undisturbing albeit plenty entertaining manner that blends with coziness and serenity important to homebodies.

And even the younger element, given more to the streamlined bar form of candy, may find attraction in the unadorned pleasantness and charm of this form of air entertainment. It's a Friday night after dinner relaxer that still leaves time for indulging other more hectic and demanding escapes.

Announcer Don Stanley seemingly tries a little too hard with his oval tones and oozing into mike in narrating the story behind the song, one of which is given with each show. There are two commercials where one would sell as effectively, but those are refined and acceptable. Only jarring note is the locomotive singing commercial that closes. It spoils show's effect.

Small Signs Hayward

Louis Hayward signed over the weekend to star in "The Return of Monte Cristo," which Edward Small will produce at Columbia. Film rolls June 10 with Max Nosseck handling the directorial chore. Grant Whytock is the associate producer.

screening without disruption of scheduled filmings, was another problem he pointed out.

Dr. Albert Rose, of the RCA Laboratories, Inc., told the conclave that the solution of current problems related to television, photography and human vision could be aided by a unified approach and considerations of the limitations and possibilities of these devices in common terms.

The engineer explained that the three picture pick-up devices—photographic film, the television pick-up tube, and the human eye—are all subject ultimately to the same limitations in performance, imposed by the discrete nature of light flux.

A panel of speakers at the weekend sessions revealed an improved technique for using negative motion picture films as source material for television. Also disclosed was the development of a new film for use in photographing the images of television picture tubes.

Foreign visitors attending the conclave include: Sir Gordon Craig, general manager, British Movietone, London; H. Grattan Guiness, Movietone News, Australia; David Searll, managing director, Peace Distributors, Johannesburg, South Africa; Igor Tornovski, RCA, Shanghai; and A. J. Patel, indie film producer, Bombay, India.

BY DON QUINN

Take the recent case of a dunderhead mayor of a midwestern city who arbitrarily banned a picture without seeing it. He didn't like the title. (High offices are full of low foreheads).

Take the case of a radio comedian who got himself a hunk of litigation because he jokingly referred to one of his old schoolma'ams as "Piano-legs." (The Steinway people, who really had a case, didn't bother.)

Take the incident of a radio star who got himself banned by our northern neighbors on the basis of allegedly indigo material. (All of a sudden, after 25 or 30 years in the entertainment business!)

Take the present "Outlaw" malarkey; a western picture with a buxom heroine gets chivvied about because its 24-sheeting is perhaps one-tenth of one per cent (if any) more decollete than that of a dozen other current releases.

Then there is the item of a round robin letter received by a top program, with 25 signatures, written in vitriol and protesting hysterically about an "insult" to the Italian people. (A minute examination of a year's scripts revealed not a single mention of the Italians.)

ADD these items to a thousand other examples of official and individual prudery, snoopery, meddling, fingerpointing and thin-skinned cry-babyism and what have we got?

Personally, I think we've got an epidemic of war-born touchiness; a mass yearning to regulate and restrict. It is my private opinion (if anyone cares), that the self- and government-imposed restraints of the past few years have been released to form a flash flood of admonitory nosiness. Everybody wants to be a censor. It's easy work, requiring a minimum of intelligence and a maximum of arrogance. All you have to do is creep out of your ivory sewer at intervals and whittle a book, play, picture or program down to the mental level of the village cretin. It won't hurt your mind or morals to see, read or hear anything, but your strength is as the strength of ten because your heart is pure. Unquote.

This is not the moan of a radio writer who has seen a few pale blue gags deleted from a "dynamite" script. I have been treated with comparative kindness. This is the alarmed view of a script writer who has been identified with one group for some sixteen years and who has seen public reaction to various kinds of entertainment grow churlish and sensitive in direct proportion to the increasing wholesomeness and responsibility of writing and performing.

It is safe, I think, to say that both radio and motion picture material, by and large, is infinitely cleaner and more thoughtful of minorities, afflictions, politics and group sensibilities than at any time since DeForest discovered that tube, or theatre owners discovered the popcorn machine. I also think I am on terra firma when I claim that radio listeners are becoming more irascible and inflammatory month by month.

MAYBE it's just that a few people are getting louder. Obviously, there are axes to be ground and publicity to be had. But it's getting difficult to ignore these noisy ones in favor of the contented millions who enjoy your offerings, buy your product and come back next week. It is a rare program, I believe, that, after carefully scanning its script for objectionable lines, unfair trade references and tossing out everything which might arouse the dementia praecox in the half-listener, does not get, the following week, an ugly note of denunciation from the Marihuana Growers of Lower California, the Valley Goat Society, the Mushroom Raisers of America or a guy named Elmer. Perhaps the sporting ability to take a joke has become frayed during the war years.

Anyway, radio seems to be achieving the status of one big audience-participation package, with a dirty letter or the threat of legal proceedings as first prize. It is a simple fact that the gags of yesteryear which "stopped the show" and merited not a single rebuke from the happy listeners are now on the index expurgatorium or restricted to "warm-ups." I believe that network and station censors, sponsors and stars are becoming almost pathologically timid, and that a single abusive letter, no matter how imbecilic or illiterate, causes more panic and apprehension than a hundred of the same ilk a few years ago.

I have suggested to my own sponsor (Johnson's Wax. Adv.) that he let me answer all the pan mail. For some reason, probably inter-office politics, the idea was turned down. As far as radio is concerned, there is only one other solution that I can see.

Let's start all over again, with crystal sets.

Last Outside Pix At Enterprise Shooting

With two pictures currently in production and three in the hopper, more than 300 workers are checking into Enterprise daily, getting the lot into shape for the heavy production slate. Currently before the cameras are Loew-Lewin's "Bel Ami" and Wurtzel's "Flight to Paradise," last two outside productions to be able to use the Enterprise facilities. First on the Enterprise slate will be Harry Sherman's "Ramrod," which goes on location June 1.

Cannon Named Aide To Tinkham At KIEV

Kenneth Tinkham, new manager of KIEV, has named Cal Cannon as his assistant. He is also instituting departmental and physical changes in station. New music, programming and publicity departments are being created, and renovations permitting additional studios are planned. Station will also alter its present policy with introduction of more live and public interest shows. Pickup of remote broadcasts will be stressed, replacing recordings.

TOMMY RIGGS SET FOR BORDEN SHOW THIS SUMMER

After skinning out of Navy uniform several months ago, Tommy Riggs has returned to radio following his three-year absence. Last on for Swan soap, he is now starting a series for Borden over CBS which certainly can stack up with summer-show competition and probably make its weight felt next winter against the big-league broadcasts.

Riggs' ventriloquistic humor, wrapped around the "Betty Lou" dodge, wasn't too forte on opening broadcast Friday night, but there should be a perk of interest if writers Jack Douglas and Bill Danch fashion meatier situations. Definite asset is Peggy Lee, who at long last finally has emerged as solid singing single. And she works well when angled into Riggs' dual patter. Young & Rubicam agency might tone down those commercials, especially the attempted comedy touch which sounded rather tortured. Frank DeVol's music fits pleasantly and happily is properly unobtrusive.

Schenley Calls 'Doctor' For Radio Series

"The Doctor Fights" again will air for Schenley Penicillin this summer, starting under Biow agency direction on June 4 in the niche now occupied by "This Is My Best," Cresta Blanca commercial. Bill Lawrence will produce "Doctor" from Jean Halloway scripts and Leith Stevens will stick-swish the music. Only departure from last year's format will be that program will etherize radiozations of past screenplays built around doctors' experiences. Last season series dealt with was experiences of front-line medics.

Hayes to Copacabana

New York, May 12.—Peter Lind Hayes is slated for eight-week appearance at Copacabana at stipend of $2000 per, opening around first of June. He and Beatrice Kay also will radio show together, starting first week in June.

O'Brien, Raft Sub

Pat O'Brien and George Raft each will pinch-hit one week for Bill Stern on his NBC gabber for Colgate when sports commentator vacations in July.

Russell, Blair Set

Rosalind Russell and Janet Blair set to play in radio adaptation of Columbia's "My Sister Eileen," Saturday over CBS.

LESSER PROMOTES RA RA CONTEST

Sol Lesser is sponsoring first USC Annual Screen Play Contest, open to any registered USC student. Contest offers cash prizes amounting to $175.00 for best synopsis of a screenplay, with Lesser retaining right to purchase any story submitted, regardless of whether it is a prize winner or not. Contest closes June 1.

Trio of judges will make awards, these to include Jean Hersholt, Clara Beranger, lecturer in screen writing at USC, and Harris Moore, acting head of USC Department of Cinema.

PAR SALES TALK SENT ABROAD IN 5-REEL FILM

Paramount, at instigation of George Weltner, Paramount International prexy, has started production of five-reel subject for showing to sales personnel throughout countries abroad. Lou Harris is producer and William Russell directing.

Film is result of Weltner's visit here last February, to attend convention. Idea of taking convention to men in the field, as it were, to those who could not come to Hollywood, was hit upon at that time, following confabs between Weltner and Henry Ginsberg.

Feature will cover studio personnel, pictures in work and various phases of production. Film will open with Ginsberg addressing personnel for whom it is intended. Producers will speak about their pictures, with scenes from picture then shown; camera will catch such personalities as Hal Wallis introducing his different players, then going to set of his latest picture; Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder at work on set. Complete picture of studio at work will be shown for benefit of salesmen, for purpose of enthusing them in same manner as though they had visited studio.

Studio will wind up picture within next 30 days, and immediately rush it through for dispatch to foreign parts where exchange managers will show it to their salesmen. Present intention is to add continuously to this footage, with further material as it comes up.

regarding yarn, shortly after his arrival.

Negotiations with number of agencies already have been opened by attorney, for handling of property which already is said to have brought an $85,000 bid from one studio which managed an advance glimpse at it. Attorney refuses to confirm fact he is representing Viscount, stating that he cannot divulge identity of the principal. He states, however, that purchaser need not necessarily be the highest bidder; his client is interested more in who shall produce story than amount of money property draws.

KING VIDOR GETS CREDIT FOR 'DUEL IN SUN'

King Vidor will receive director credit for David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun," Screen Directors Guild announced yesterday. Question of whether Vidor or William Dieterle should get nod was put up to Guild directly by Selznick, after picture was completed, both having had hand in its direction.

SDG appointed special committee to consider case. Committee looked at completed picture, and after huddling advised producer of its decision, that Vidor was entitled to the credit.

Trio of other directors also handled picture for number of sequences. These included late Otto Brower, Chester Franklin and Breezy Eason, who concentrated on various outdoor stuff.

NETS, INDIES GIRD FOR FCC HEARING ON L.A. TELEVISION

SEVEN OPERATING

Meetings will be attended by host of Eastern industry execs, coming West specifically for the hearings, in addition to local prospective owners and their reps. Contestants all believe they have a Sunday punch that will cinch granting of one of tele bands, numbered two, four, five, seven, nine, 11 and 13. Latter is a community or local band only. Megacycle locations are, respectively, 54 to 60, 66 to 72, 76 to 82, 174 to 180, 186 to 192, 198 to 204 and 210 to 216. All but number 13, on 210 to 216 megacycle band, are network or rural-embracing bands.

With seven channels in operation, Los Angeles area will rank with New York and is regarded as third in national sales position.

Hearings are expected to last until May 31. After grants are made there will be no more experimental stations. Those granted channels will, thereafter, operate on 28-hour per week schedule, and may or may not go commercial. July 1 is set as deadline for those already equipped and operating (Paramount and Don Lee) to start regular programming. Others will go as soon after licensing as they can be equipped. Par and Mutual are the only two that already maintain operating investments, and have a programming edge with their respective W6XYZ and W6XAO stations. Paramount and NBC, latter through Radio Corp. of America, and Par through Dumont Labs, are only two with receiver manufacturing affiliates. Mutual has been active in television for 16 years, while Paramount has been actve for 10 years.

ONE FOR PRESS

Commish is said to favor grant of at least one channel to a newspaper ownership in each locale. Here it would be Times. Those with established investments and operating also stand in favor, it's reported, namely Mutual and Paramount. Situation finds NBC competing with its own affiliated station, KFI. Par is believed to have a handicap in its Scophony affliate being currently embroiled in anti-trust charges.

Unlike radio, television calls for million dollar planning, eliminatng any chance of running shoestrings into bankrolls. This accounts for the rapidly diminished field. Initial high costs, plus uncertainty of future with prospect of operating in red for next six years, has whittled the roster. Bugaboo of color, has, in most cases, been given as reason for withdrawals. However, spectre of fabulous losses contributed heavily now that it's stay, play and pay.

URGENT
Will share housework and expenses of rooms, apt. or house for 2 grown daughters (both working) and self.

SHOW BIZ LIGHTS UP AS MINERS GO TO WORK for the miners to return to work for two weeks while efforts are being made at a final settlement, District of Columbia commissioners have shelved their order which would have blacked out all theatres in Washington effective next Tuesday. Nevertheless, the brownout will continue here indefinitely.

TRAVELING SHOWS SAVED

Yesterday's action by Office of Defense Transportation, canceling the freight priority order, saves the situation for traveling legit companies and vaude acts which must ship scenery and props by rail.

Order does not automatically lift the ban against circuses traveling via coal-powered railroads. However, if rail line is obeying the order for a 25 per cent reduction in coal consumption and can still handle the load, ODT will grant special permits for circuses and carnivals to move to the next points on their schedules.

ODT has okayed the move of Ringling Bros. to go from New York to Boston, and has given a green light to Cole Bros. Circus to go into Cincinnati. In addition, the States Carnival Show was given permission to travel from Trenton to Plainfield, N.J.

CHI BIZ NORMAL

Chicago, May 12. — Recovering from an estimated $2,000,000 loss, Chicago show business returned to normal operation yesterday, after 10 days of confusion resulting from the nation-wide coal strike.

Film theatres, hardest hit of all, wasted no time in resuming normal activities, entertainment-hungry Chicagoans flocking to filmeries to see shows "at any time." Yesterday's take was heavy.

Legits, meanwhile, which have been running throughout the dimout with hastily-installed generators, are reverting to city power. Niteries, which operated full blast during the emergency, now can use spotlights and special lighting effects for their shows, the sole restriction imposed upon them by the ICC curtailment order.

Bistros and taverns discarded candles and lanterns, and once again Chicago returned to a full entertainment schedule.

A REPORT TO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Because of the misrepresentation in certain quarters, and the general misinformation elsewhere, the plan for the re-employment of QUALIFIED screen writers returned veterans submitted to the Producers on MAY 8, 1945 is printed below.

Text of SWG Proposal to Producers:

These proposals are the result of careful study. We believe the plan presented will provide a solution to a problem with which you, as well as ourselves, have for so long been concerned. The plan will give each returning serviceman, who was a free lance writer in the Motion Picture Industry before his entrance into the service, an opportunity to become an integral part of the industry again. The plan is fair and workable and will create a minimum of dislocation and expense.

1. The purpose of this agreement is to provide a minimum of twelve weeks employment for each returning serviceman-writer*, this employment period to start within ninety days after the serviceman returns and registers with the Screen Writers' Guild, signifying his availability for a writing assignment.

2. Each studio agrees to provide to returning servicemen-writers an aggregate number of weeks of employment based on the following standards:

(a) The base period shall be November 1, 1943 to October 31, 1944.

(b) Each studio's percentage of the total number of writers employed by the producers signatory to this agreement during the base period will be established, and an equal percentage of the returning servicemen-writers who have registered with the Guild as above stated, will be guaranteed a minimum of twelve weeks of employment by the studio.

(c) Each employment offered to such a writer shall be for a period of not less than six consecutive weeks.

Perhaps the best way to explain will be by the use of a hypothetical example. Studio A, for example, employed during that year 18 per cent of all the writers employed by all of the producers signatory to the Minimum Basic Agreement during the same period. Studio A will then be obligated to employ 18 per cent of the returning servicemen-writers, who have registered with the SWG, for a minimum of 12 weeks of employment during the term of this agreement, which is from the date of its execution until two years after the official termination of all hostilities. The studio may employ such a writer for not less than six consecutive weeks.

Approximately 200 servicemen-writers will return to the Motion Picture Industry. The hypothetical Studio A will then be required to employ 36 writers for a total period of 12 weeks. The average studio, it has been found, would be required to include among its writers approximately 5 per cent of returning servicemen.

3. This agreement shall cover all returning servicemen-writers who, when they entered the service, were not on term contracts still effective at the time of their return to work in the Motion Picture Industry.

4. Employment shall be at a weekly rate of pay at least equal to that paid the writer on his last assignment prior to his entering the service.

5. The Screen Writers' Guild will establish a list of returning servicemen-writers and each week will send a copy of said list to the Producers signatory to this agreement. If a returning serviceman-writer has been on said list for sixty days and has not been given an offer of employment, the Screen Writers' Guild shall call this fact to the attention of all the Producers signatory to this agreement, whose responsibility it shall be to establish machinery through which employment will be made available to said writer by one of their group before the expiration of the ninety day period.

6. This agreement shall continue for two years from the official proclamation terminating all hostilities.

7. Returning servicemen-writers may turn down an offer of employment, but in such case the Producers are not obligated to make another offer until ninety days from the date the offer is turned down.

8. Both parties to this agreement will use their influence to get agents to agree that they will waive their commissions on the first twelve weeks of employment of returning servicemen-writers. The Screen Writers' Guild agrees that it will waive its assessments for this twelve weeks.

It was proposed that a qualified screen writer be defined as one who had earned at least one screen credit or been employed as a writer at a studio for a period of thirteen weeks within the two years preceding his entrance into the Armed Forces. Actually, the vast majority of veterans still awaiting re-employment have far more than these minimum qualifications.

The above proposal simply meant that the Guild requested a period of twelve weeks — not necessarily consecutive — of re-employment for returning QUALIFIED screen writers not covered by contract who left the industry to go to war. The Producers Association rejected this plan and to date has offered no substitute. Despite the efforts of certain individual executives of good will, today, a full year after the above plan was submitted, the Screen Writers' Guild is still waiting for the Producers Association to take some action to fulfill the industry's responsibility toward the returning writer-veterans.

VETERANS' COMMITTEE,
SCREEN WRITERS' GUILD.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

USING much of the technique developed during the war by army air corps photogs, director William Wellman has completed plans for filming spectacular aerial scenes in Columbia's "Gallant Journey." Director will employ a two-way radio communication system between ground crews and aerial technicians. He also will use walkie-talkie equipment so that widely separated ground units can keep in contact. First use of the newly-invented hydraulic camera mount will be made by lenser Elmer Dyer from a camera plane piloted by Paul Mantz. Plans call for a total of eight cameras, all grinding simultaneously, to film a climactic sequence showing a tandem-wing glider cutting loose from a balloon at 4,000 feet elevation. In order to give the crews at least 48 hours advance notice of the best time for filming the scenes, a meterological station has been established at the Lasky Mesa location site.

NEW technique employed by Edmund Goulding in filming "The Razor's Edge" for 20th-Fox is expected to set new record for minimal cuts. According to cameraman Artie Miller, there will be only about 40 major cuts in entire film, comparing with more than 100 for average picture. This is accomplished by fact that, although feature has been shooting more than a month, Goulding thus far has used crane-and-dolly for all but two shots, thereby gobbling up entire sequences of the script with a single take. This system poses nice problem for lighting, but is overcome by Goulding and Miller rehearsing day's scenes completely in the morning, then folding them up in the afternoon. Effect of continuous action is achieved under this procedure of unorthodox camera work.

PROVISIONS of new contracts to be presented networks in fall by American Federation of Radio Actors will be considered at Union's August convention here. Once again union would like to have national pattern extend to this area. But it is certain broadcasters are just as eager to retain existing situation of having Coast contracts separate from rest, and will insist on retention of that system. Situation weakens union's picture and strengthens broadcasters. Despite AFRA's attempts to alter situation that puts three quarters of country under one deal and Coast under another, broadcasters have been adamant and have indicated they will continue to be this time.

ELI Oberstein, RCA-Victor's chief of pop recordings, prior to planing back to NY, declared that plattery would not release Duke Ellington from contract, although it is known that orkman is tugging to get away and sign up with Musicraft. Ellington's big beef with Victor is that waxery will not let him play on platters precisely what he wants but insists he stay "too commercial" and dodge those augmented ninths and subtracted elevenths which primarily appeal to jazz hounds, not the wide commercial market. Ellington still has 20 sides to go before concluding contract.

LOS Angeles Times is making check of coverage and circulation of local net and indie stations. Sheet's public relations department is handling the investigation. When queried on reasons, Ed Brandt stated figures were being compiled for "our own information," and denied there was any guarded motive behind it. Paper seemed particularly eager for comparisons between KFI and KMPC, respectively powered at 50,000 and 10,000 watts. Latter, however, associated with Times in news programming, has applied for 50,000 with Federal Communications Commission.

METRO'S "The Green Years" is being cited as example of what a picture can do at the b.o. just by being a good picture. Studio describes the film as "just a good, solid picture without any special big names." It was put in the Music Hall in New York without any unusually extravagant fanfare. In 39 days in that house it has grossed 15 per cent better than any previous Metro picture that has played there. In addition, Metro execs point out, it has topped records of previous pix on a day-by-day basis from the start and is still grossing consistently.

PRACTICALLY every major record company in country is after Dmitri Tiomkin's musical score for David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun." Understood, though, that producer is holding out and will release score only to a recording outfit which will guarantee a performance by a top symphonic orchestra and pressings of gilt edge quality. Sales figures revealed by those companies which released Selznick's "Spellbound" music indicate time is ripe for such a demand.

WHEN the cattle king of the 1880's portrayed by Spencer Tracy in "Sea of Grass" says that influx of farmers will destroy the huge ranges of grass, he calls the turn exactly. Studio right now has annoying proof of it, for after a month's search they're still looking for location sites that will serve for the "sea of grass" of Conrad Richter's story. Currently they're looking for open cinema range in Arizona, Utah and Montana.

THE Two Bills—Pine and Thomas—start their 40th picture and their sixth year as independent producers next Tuesday. Picture is titled "I Cover Big Town," and is the second of the "Big Town" series, based on the radio program by that name. Top roles have been assigned to Philip Reed, Hilary Brooke and Robert Lowery. Release is through Paramount, as usual.

CAST—Stars Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Alexis Smith, Jane Wyman. Supporting players, Reginald Gardiner, John Loder, Marjorie Gateson, Thurston Hall, John Abbott, Marjorie Hoshelle, Sig Arno.

TRADESHOWN at Warners Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills, Calif., May 8, 1946. Running time: 89 MINS.

"One More Tomorrow" may be classified as a woman's picture, carrying strong appeal due to triangle theme and assured heavy grosses because of big name cast. Remake of Philip Barry's play, "The Animal Kingdom," action unfolds somewhat artificially and cast never quite overcomes impressing that it is "acting." Nevertheless, femme audiences will follow characters with interest, and lines are generally lively enough to sustain this element.

Dennis Morgan is pivotal character, whom Alexis Smith sets out to marry and accomplishes her goal after Morgan, a playboy, is refused by Ann Sheridan, a serious-minded photographer for a weekly news mag. Ann goes off to Mexico, after having rejected Morgan, returning day following his marriage, and actual plot takes up from here, latter finding he's still in love with Ann and unhappy in type of life he's expected to follow as Alexis' husband. Mixed up in this story theme is Morgan backing a liberal mag which prints the truth whoever it might hit or damage, with his wealthy friends involved in a governmental scandal.

Morgan gives a forceful portrayal and Miss Sheridan endows her character with her customary warmness. Miss Smith is properly unpleasant as Morgan's conniving spouse, lending conviction to part. Jack Carson plays Morgan's frank-spoken and familiar butler, his characterization probably being the most honest in entire picture and a grand comedy performance, as well. Jane Wyman, fifth in film's quintet of stars, is in for more brief appearance but scores roundly for her work.

Supporting cast is small but beneficial to quality of picture. Reginald Gardiner adds a comic note as editor of Morgan's mag, who takes life from a reclining position on any davenport he can find, and Thurston Hall is an ebullient figure as Morgan's father, ever trying to get his son to go to work. Sig Arno, Marjorie Gateson, John Abbott and Marjorie Hoshelle add colorful bits.

Peter Godfrey handled direction and Benjamin Glazer produced, Charles Hoffman and Catherine Turney writing screenplay and Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein contributing additional dialog. Result of their comprehensive efforts could not quite hurdle the unreal aspects of plot, however. Bert Glennon's photography is up to par.

Schenck Delayed

Nicholas Schenck, scheduled to arrive here from New York yesterday, was held up by business in the east and will not get here till Thursday.

'Staircase' and 'Postman' Ring Up Big Grosses

"The Spiral Staircase" and "The Postman Always Rings Twice" took the street car strike in stride on their respective first weeks. "Staircase" finished its first frame at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire theatres with a new record of estimated $47,000. "Postman," while striking no records, clocked off very solid estimate of $75,000 on the week closed last night at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz.

In addition to its overall record, "Staircase" also set new house highs at the Guild and United Artists, but was held to big $19,000 estimate at the UA because of the strike.

Among the holdovers, "The Outlaw" and "Gilda" held their own, even though feeling the trolley tie-up. Sixth frame for "Outlaw" in the four Music Halls is coming through with fancy $38,000, while "Gilda" looks like a smart $36,000 at the Pantages and Hillstreet. Latter house has been hurt by strike but is still managing to pull.

"Her Kind of Man" in the three Warner first runs looks like okay $42,000, strike hurting somewhat. "Dark Corner" is hitting a dismal pace at Loew's State, Grauman's Chinese and the Uptown. Latter house is near average but other two spots are well under normal takes, not entirely due to lack of public transportation. "Corner" stays only one week and looks like only $37,000 for the frame.

King Cole Trio, Johnnie Otis orch and Eddie Green gave the Orpheum estimated $32,000 for week ended last night. Gross would have been near the $40,000 mark with this bill under normal circumstances but seven days were still way above average. "Kitty" finishes three-week stay at the two Paramounts with approximately $28,500, making way Thursday for "The Virginian." "Madonna of the Seven Moons," soloing at the Carthay Circle, is shaping up to good but not potent $8,000 on its first week.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The passage of the Housing Bill should do much to aid in establishing conditions of stability in this country. One phase of our uncertainty is now ended; we have determined on one policy, and we shall be stimulating an all pervasive and extensive industry. One of the less tangible, but nevertheless more important effects, will be in the getting of homes for more people, and in making it possible for more millions to own their own homes. The present doubling up provokes domestic squabbles because of uncomfortable, crowded conditions; it affects health and morale. Once our veterans are able to have their own homes, family life will be promoted, health conditions and morale will be better, and we shall have better citizenship, and more stable economic conditions. The importance of family life, as basic in our form of civilization, and the prohibitive cost of building your own home for so many millions, has led some persons to believe a permanent program of government aid in housing is advisable. The other bill in the Congress, the Wagner-Taft-Ellender measure, would aid in that objective. This one is to meet the needs of the veteran now.

Larceny In Her Heart

PRC RELEASE of a Sigmund Neufeld production. Director, Sam Newfield. Screenplay, Raymond L. Schrock. Based on original characters and story by Brett Halliday. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh. Assistant director, Stanley Neufeld. Musical director, Leo Erdody. Sound, Earl Sitar. Editor, Holbrook N. Todd. Art direction, Edward C. Jewell. Set decoration, Elias H. Reif.

PREVIEWED at studio, May 13, 1946. Running time: 68 MINS.

"Larceny In Her Heart," second in PRC's "Michael Shayne, Detective" series, is a whodunit with sufficient suspense to carry it satisfactorily for film's intended market. Hugh Beaumont and Cheryl Walker again portray two top roles, those of Shayne and Phyllis, and appear to solve case which often has audience guessing, even after it's ostensibly cleared up.

Shayne, on point of leaving for a vacation with his secretary—at her aunt's—is retained by Gordon Richards to find his stepdaughter, Marie Harmon, missing for two days. Gal, for unexplained reason, turns up at detective's office half-hour later, passing out, and when Shayne returns still later, after leaving her on davenport, he finds her strangled to death.

Film thereafter follows detective's exploits in solving girl's murder, attempted murder of another and Shayne getting himself committed to a sanitarium for alcoholics to prevent a third. In his hunting down the killer he uses services of a newspaper reporter, Paul Bryar, in for some comedy relief, and has to contend with interference of a city detective, Ralph Dunn, who continually is trying to pin murder on him.

Beaumont does well enough with his role, although there's no clear delineation of character. Miss Walker makes a pretty foil, Charles Wilson portrays Chief Gentry convincingly and Julia McMillan lends an attractive presence as girl nearly murdered. Balance of cast stacks up well.

Sam Newfield, in his direction, keeps action moving, generally, although there are certain pauses which might have been deleted for speedier effect. Film reflects creditably upon Sigmund Neufeld as producer, but screenplay by Raymond L. Schrock should have been better edited. Technical credits are average.

'Bella Donna' Halts

Merle Oberon's continued illness has resulted in halting production today on International's "Bella Donna." Actress has been confined to her home with a virus infection.

NY LEGIT OPENING

New York, May 13. — Old Vic company, reviving Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" at the Century tonight, invested the slow, dawdling play about a group of maladjusted Russian gentry with great fascination. The inertia of the play itself, however, defeats the company despite its skill. Laurence Olivier as the doctor, Ralph Richardson as Vanya, again were excellent. Supporting cast was also tops.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: For one night, June 5, the old Silver Slipper will come back into existence. The old New York night club where Jimmy Durante became famous 20 years ago, now a dance hall, will be taken over from 11 p.m. to dawn for a celebration of Jimmy's 30th year in show business—and a flashback to the dear dead days of Prohibition and the roaring Twenties. Silver Slipper Revisited will bring back Jimmy and his former partners, Lou Clayton, now his agent, and Eddie Jackson, and his stooge Mlle. Fifi for a reprise of the old favorites. Jimmy will also commit a piano accompaniment for Lauritz Melchior. Durante's rise to fame began in a Coney Island dive where he pounded the piano and tried to drown out the noise of the bouncers at work. After ten years in Coney Island and Harlem, he invaded the Broadway precincts with his lunatic aides and took over the Club Dover. The latter spot was soon found to be too small for Jimmy's talents and the crowds they attracted. And the Silver Slipper became a second home to those who hated to go to bed before the sun blushed over Times Square. Joe Pasternak, producer of Jimmy's latest, "Two Sisters from Boston," at Metro, initiated plans for the Silver Slipper celebration and may sponsor a similar event in Hollywood later . . . Know how Jules Stein gets away from it all? He goes to lunch at the Farmers Market—no phones, no clients . . . Bette Davis works all but two days through the lengthy production schedule on "Deception" . . . Jed Harris wants Peggy Knudsen, Warners starlet, for a lead in his forthcoming Broadway production, "Loco."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Sometimes Producers Billy Wilder and Charles Brackett must cuss out their writers, who happen to be a couple of characters name of Billy Wilder and Charles Brackett—like yesterday for instance. As writers, they inserted in the script of "The Emperor Waltz" a terrier who chews gum in imitation of his master, to be played by Bing Crosby. As producers, they dutifully found a terrier who chews gum. But he only chews pepsin gum—and that's scarcer right now than terriers who chew gum . . . How'd you like to shuffle off to Auckland? Pan American Airways is beginning service to New Zealand again the end of this month, with a one-way tap of $590 . . . Cully Richards says he's got to lose some weight if he wants to keep his health—about 118 pounds of blonde . . . Nitery notes: John Harris tossed a beefsteak dinner for the "Ice Capades" cast at the House of Murphy. June Haver and Robert Stack at Ciro's and the Beverly Tropics. Diana Lynn and Wynn Rocamora, Tony Martin and Marguerite Chapman, Pat Kirkwood and Ben Bogeaus, at Billingsley's. At the Troc Rudy Vallee took over Eddie Oliver's baton when the bandleader had to rush his wife to the maternity ward . . . Red Carpet was rolled out by the "Abie's Irish Rose" company for Wallace Ford when he visited the set. He played Abie in the NY company 24 years ago . . . Anita Ellis has purchased a walkie-talkie set to keep in touch with home—says her press agent. What's she expecting to happen?

CALL SHEET: MAURY MAVERICK, ex-mayor of San Antonio and ex-congressman, will be the United Nations Committee's principal speaker at its luncheon tomorrow in honor of Jack L. Warner. Latter is being honored for his production, "Hitler Lives?" Maverick will speak on the United States' relations with Russia and Japan . . . RANDY STUART of Jack Carson's radio show will be given a luncheon by U.S.C. sororities Friday on the campus . . . YVONNE DE CARLO will plane to Brady, Tex., May 23 for the opening of a film theatre. Operator of the new house is Bob Shanks, first veteran to take advantage of Universal's plan to put vets in the exhibition field in the southwest. "Frontier Gal," in which Yvonne stars, will be the first picture shown . . . ROBERTA JONAY, Paramount dance director, will be used in acting and dancing sequences in "The Emperor Waltz" . . . JACK NORTON, whose picture career has been one long "Lost Weekend," will play a sober role for the first time in three years in "Down to Earth" . . . HENRI CHARPENTIER, former chef to Diamond Jim Brady and Theodore Roosevelt, will be featured in a two-reeler on foods and cooking to be produced by Embro Pictures . . . BOB SIMONS, Republic's legal dept. head, won a couple of second places in the Rancheros' rodeo . . . BUDDY DE SYLVA, looking very fit after his long illness, visited the "Perils of Pauline" set at Paramount yesterday.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: The rebellious attitude of the animal world around these parts must receive another footnote. Newest dodge is blackmail. They were using a number of burros for scenes in "Bella Donna" yesterday. But every time Merle Oberon and Charles Korvin went into a clinch for one of the film's big love scenes, there came the unlovely bel canto of one of the burros, a raucous and derisive "Hee-haw, hee-haw!" The cast became very uneasy at the presence of the four-footed critics. Take after take was ruined. Director Irving Pichel began to wonder if burro-actors weren't harder to handle—and more laden with professional jealousy—than human actors. But Pichel came through—he tied an oat-bag on every burro, and the "he-haw" chorus was quiet . . . Joseph Calleia, usually a villain in pictures, looks enough like the atomic scientist, Enrico Fermi, to play the role in Metro's "The Beginning or the End" without makeup and without his usual mustache . . . Here's some of the loot collected by five Goldwyn Girls on their p.a. tour: five new hats, a fur jacket, a radio, traveling case, 17 pairs of nylons, three dresses, one suit, one watch, two compacts, and, in blacked-out Chicago, an electric lantern for use in hunting out their press agent . . . While in New York recently, Nunnally Johnson was advised by an agent to look up a Viennese actress in Hollywood, by the name of Gisella Werbiscek Piffle. On his return, Johnson gave her a ring. "Nunnally Johnson?" she asked. "I'm sure I don't know you. You must have the wrong party." Johnson replied: "Can it be that I have the wrong Miss Gisella Werbiscek Piffle?"——D.D.T.

EXTRAS REFUSE WORK WITH A PERMIT MAN

Beefs of established screen extras over widespread admittance of newcomers to the field during past two years reached the near-walkout stage yesterday when Screen Extras Guild members refused to work on a "Down to Earth" set at Columbia with Milton Frieburg, temporary work permit holder.

To avert trouble, Frieburg was removed by studio and temporary permit lifted pending investigation of his case. SEG reports Frieburg had twice been turned down for membership by its board, and its veterans and admittance committees, because his qualifications for extra work are no different from those of members of long standing.

Intercession of Howard Philbrick of Central Casting had made it possible for Frieburg to obtain temporary permit despite the two previous nixes on membership admittance by SEG. Extras guild takes the stand that many on its membership rolls are not kept busy by the studios and that when new members are admitted they must either come from among war veterans or possess some particular qualification fitting them for extra work.

THEATRES ASK LIFT INTO ESSENTIAL CLASSIFICATION

New York, May 13. — John D. Small, Civilian Production Administrator, has been asked by the American Theatres Assn., to consider theatres as more than non-essential in the current fuel crisis. In a letter, the ATA said houses are ready to serve in explaining the public emergency and are important in raising morale.

Curtailment of theatre operation, in some circumstances, effects a saving of resources that is apparent rather than real, letter declared. Curtailment is not necessary because it can be shown, according to letter, that per capita use of electricity in the home exceeds by far, for a like period, the per attendant consumption in theatres.

ATA also wired President Harry Truman offering theatre facilities in imparting information for guidance to the public in the present crisis.

Anti-Petrillo Law Gets First Test by Chi's WIND

Chicago, May 13.—First known test of the effectiveness of the recently enacted Anti-Petrillo bill by Congress, is in the hopper here, with two members of the Radio Broadcasting Engineers Local 1229, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL) discharged by station WIND's Director Ralph Atlas today. Since WIND is classified as a "B" station, and therefore not required to hire standbys, as insisted on by the union, Atlas' position is that he would be operating in violation of the Lea bill should he comply with the demands of the union.

The electricians went off the payroll when they did not show up to throw the switch when the station was due to go on the air at six this morning. The engineer at the transmitter, however, stayed on the job, and announced that he was pulling out of the union because he believed the management is right at that and the union is taking the wrong attitude in the dispute.

As a result WIND was off the air from six to nine this morning, and station executives were at the studio control board when it went back on.

The difficulties began Sunday night when the Unionists insisted that WIND hire CBS engineers as standbys for their own engineers in broadcast of Northwestern University's "Playshop" from CBS-WBBM studios. Atlas, with insufficient studio space at WIND had made arrangements with his brother, Les, head of WBBM, to use the latter's facilities for the broadcast, inasmuch as "A" station contracts with the Unionists call for standbys, while "B" stations pacts do not. Ralph Atlas insisted that standbys were not required under the pact, even though broadcasting was actually being made from an "A" station.

However, the union heads advised its members not to show up for work this morning when their demands were refused by Atlas. This followed handing notices to union members.

Studio switches, in the meanwhile, are being operated by WIND executives, with the transmitter engineers staying at their posts in defiance of the Union officials, who informed Daily Variety, the men are classified as strike breakers.

HOPE HAS BROAD LEAD IN COAST HOOPERATINGS

Bob Hope was an easy topper in popularity along the Pacific slope during April, according to newly released Hooperatings. His 33.1 was a comfortable lead over Jack Benny's 27.8. Others holding spots among coveted positions of the first fifteen include:

Red Skelton, 26.8; Walter Winchell, 25.2; Fibber McGee and Molly, 21.2; Fred Allen, 20.9; Screen Guild, 18.8; Edgar Bergen, 18.7; Truth or Consequences, 17.2; Judy Canova, 17.1; Fannie Brice, 16.7; Lux Radio Theatre, 16.6; The Whistler, 16.4: Take It or Leave It, 16.1; Rudy Vallee, 16.1.

Hooperatings nationally for May 2 reveal that Jack Haley on that night topped all the rest, gaining 0.4 to grab off a lusty 18.2 and better Bing Crosby on what was his next-to-last broadcast with Kraft. The Groaner skidded 2.7 to wind up with a 17.4.

Rudy Vallee gained 2.5 to weigh in with a strong 13.3, and Abbott & Costello upped 1.4 to earn a round and rosy 16.0. Sharpest dip of the night was Jack Smith's loss of 4.5 to wind up with 5.5, same figure which Gabriel Heatter held after a 0.4 skid.

Dinah Shore and Burns & Allen combined in that special broadcast and grabbed 10.7, while Suspense was strong at 12.2, off 0.5. Curtain Time took a 4.7, up 0.6; Detect and Collect, 4.8, up 0.8; Earl Godwin, 1.5, down 0.9; Hobby Lobby, 4.9, off 0.6; Island Venture, 4.9, up 1.1; Lum and Abner, 3.4, down 2.2; Andre Kostelanetz, 4.4, down 0.5; Real Stories, 3.1, up 0.1; Rogues Gallery, 4.7, up 0.6; Treasure Hour, 2.6, up 0.6; Professor Quiz, 2.5, down 0.3. The Critics Say:

DIRECTED BY ARTHUR LUBIN

"'Night in Paradise' Beauty. . . . Lubin's direction, color, stars share high praise. The direction of Arthur Lubin has taste and authority. It's a splendid achievement that can stand as a case-book in how to hold an engagingly satiric, rather sexy, attitude without indulging in broad burlesque, or being offensive."

—Jack Grant,
Hollywood Reporter

"Arthur Lubin's direction is tip-top. The picture looks like ready money for any exhibitor taking."

—Motion Picture Herald

"'Night in Paradise' gorgeous fable in Lubin artistry. Arthur Lubin's direction insinuates sparkling fun into sex, bent situations for the delicate satire that hasn't been seen much upon the screen since Lubitsch stopped. The picture will be talked about wherever people congregate."

—Reed Porter,
Hollywood Review

"This picture should be one of the better audience gatherers of the season."

—Showmen's Trade Review

"'Night in Paradise' should do extremely well at the boxoffice, since it combines beauty, fantasy, comedy, and drama."

—Jimmy Starr, Herald-Express

"Show is strictly for entertainment . . . Arthur Lubin's direction paces both comedy and drama smartly."

—Daily Variety

"Direction by Arthur Lubin guides players through plot at a good pace, manages a number of sharp suspense sequences and lends an overall effect that will hold attention."

—N. Y. Variety

"Although the picture flies in the face of reality, it does succeed in commanding the interest uncommonly well. The importance of action and excitement to a film of this kind has not been lost sight of by Director Arthur Lubin."

—Film Daily

"'Night in Paradise' is well done. Arthur Lubin's direction manages with bland innocence to benefit by all his beauties of sex and color, while blending for pace a procession of comedy and action."

CANTOR ASKS FOR HILDEGARDE'S AIRSHOW SPOT

Eddie Cantor would like to move his Bristol-Meyers program on NBC into niche now occupied by Hildegarde's Raleigh show, which hits east coast at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays and an effort is being made, it is understood, by the Young & Rubicam agency, to get it for the comic.

Meanwhile there still exists the possibility that Joan Davis will take over Cantor's show next autumn, which would permit him to debut new program for Pabst in October on three-year pact rather than wait until 1947. One matter that must be adjusted is that plans call for Miss Davis to air on a Friday slot on NBC, while actress insists she wants Cantor's time. Bristol-Meyers, however, some time back promised that niche to Ed Gardner's "Duffy's Tavern." If Gardner can be induced to relinquish it, it is understood that Miss Davis may be found willing to accept Cantor-replacement bid.

tions of physical distribution under consideration. One is via American Railway Express and the other General Trucking Company. Latter is owned by Robert Young of Eagle-Lion films and does about 70 per cent of film handling in the country for major and indie deliveries.

Goldwyn has discussed the plan and invited Liberty Films, Leo McCarey, and Enterprise productions, and the Loew-Einfeld company to join in supplying the product.

Currently David Loew is in New York talking the setup over with Mulvey. He also is talking to United Artists and Matty Fox of United World regarding a release.

In line with the Goldwyn co-operative distribution setup understood he would also work out a studio production plan to supply space to those associated with him in the project.

Figured that the distribution of the pictures under the setup would not run more than 12 per cent to the producers. The sales organization would be under the direction of Mulvey, with offices and salesmen located in each key center for their respective territories. Also offices could be set up in cities not now included in the key outlay.

The films would be quartered in a warehouse in each town that handled the distribution, with shippers and inspectors provided by either of the two companies that would handle the distribution. Also whatever accessories were needed for the distribution of the films would also be handled by either Railway Express or General Trucking.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

THAT sign atop Mount Cahuenga is another colossal stunt being used to exploit "The Outlaw." Sign, believed to be the largest ever used to exploit a film, rears its letters 40 feet into the air and stretches for 240 feet along the mountain top west of the Don Lee television station. Sign is illuminated by turning floodlights on its canvas sections. Power is furnished by 16,000-watt generater hauled up the mountain side over road trail built especially to erect and display the mammoth stunt. Sign is put up each morning, remaining up until midnight when its canvas letter sections, each nine feet wide, are taken down. Property on which sign beams each night has been owned by Howard Hughes for some time, having been originally purchased as a television site

BATTEN, Barton, Durstine & Osborn's NY headquarters yesterday asked Coast cubicle chiefs to keep tabs on and speed word of any screen luminaries heading east for whatever reason. Agency badly is in need of setting guest-stars for its "Cavalcade" airer for duPont on NBC and the U.S. Steel summer-show, "Theatre Guild." Latter airs Sunday from San Francisco, but then heads back to Gotham. "Cavalcade," standardly of Coast origin, is now spending pair of months in NY and has six more broadcasts set from there. BBDO has been finding that many picture names, when east, fluff off air bids on grounds they want to vacation and as many others plead they will be around NY too short a time to squeeze in a guesting.

ALTHOUGH a series of differences between William Dozier and RKO toppers resulted in the exec leaving the studio, a recent tiff over a story property with prexy N. Peter Rathvon is believed to have been the final payoff. Sometime before Rathvon took over, Dozier had acquired, through the William Morris agency, "It's Love, Love, Love," an original comedy by Herbert Clyde Lewis. Dozier is reported to have been enthusiastic over the property and Lewis was signed to collaborate with Nat Curtis on the screenplay. Rathvon, on the other hand, didn't think the yarn was very funny. Currently, production plans on the story property are up in the air.

METRO sound department has job cut out for itself in working out sound effects for "The Beginning or the End," to simulate explosion of an atomic bomb. There is no accurate description of such a sound, American Army plane crews which dropped bombs over Japan having been too far away and too immersed with roar of their own motors to have any definite idea, and trial in New Mexico did not produce any agreement among scientists on the sound. Studio plans to collect all descriptions, then try to create an appropriate sound effect to be realistic and still not be so deafening that ears of audience will be affected.

COLUMBIA is making use of a six-way split screen in Technicolor for Heaven sequences in Rita Hayworth starrer, "Down to Earth," first time this has been attempted in a tinter. Photographic stunt of catching six images simultaneously on single frame of film is reported relatively simple in black and white, but heretofore has never been practical in color due to difficulty of matching tones. New gadget called a "color co-ordinator" has been devised by Rudy Mate, photographer on film, which solves this problem, with result many effects will be made possible never glimpsed before on color screen.

MILITARY stars and gold braid were very much in evidence yesterday at 20th-Fox, where Cafe de Paris resembled Officers Row. Major Gen. Two groups made tour of lot, visiting different sets and meeting players and studio toppers.

WHETHER PRC will change its tag to Pathe-Eagle Lion is still a matter of conjecture. Contention is that RKO got full rights to the Pathe tag when it purchased Pathe Newsreel back along 1931. It is believed that PRC will have to re-purchase Pathe Newsreel, if offered for sale, in order to obtain legal right to use the name.

When the Jacks and the Jills
Come to Hollywood hills
On the thumb, on the bus, on the make,
They are glad to be seen
In a bit on the screen
As they hunger and wait for a break.
They will jump off a cliff
When the going it stiff
And submerge in a studio lake
But at last when they land
They demand many grand
And forty per cent of the take.

Motion pictures have no monopoly on picturesque advertising. Now you can buy "Perfumes with the Audacity of Shooting Stars." An understatement often carries an undercurrent of authority.

Don't Gamble With Strangers

(Melodrama)

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producer, Jeffrey Bernerd. Director, William Beaudine. Screenplay by Harvey Gates and Caryl Coleman. Photography, William Sickner. Production manager, Glenn Cook. Musical director, Edward J. Kay. Assistant director, Theodore Joos. Technical director, David Milton. Film editor, William Austin.

PREVIEWED at Monogram Studios, Hollywood, Cal., May 14, 1946. Running time: 68 MINS.

"Don't Gamble With Strangers" justifies the moral caution of its title with a lot of dire results cooked up into piping hot melodrama. Plot is tightly fitted for thrill and suspense, action is smartly paced by Director William Beaudine, and if there is more than a touch of corn in some of the sequences, it's planted where it doesn't interfere with the entertainment. Picture shapes up as surefire stuff for Monogram market.

Kane Richmond and Bernadene Hayes put on a convincing performance as a couple of professional gamesters, highly skilled in both flushing out and plucking pigeons. Chief pigeon in the story is Frank Dae, in the role of small town banker, who gambles fifty grand or so, right into a final rubber check that bounces to the embarrassment of himself and his son (Peter Cookson), who is assistant district attorney.

Ingenue role in the piece is that of the young assistant D. A.'s boyhood sweetheart, played appealingly by Gloria Warren.

While Richmond is double-crossing his own jailed brother out of $4000 embezzled money, muscling the village gambling czar out of his and fleecing the banker, he also finds time to make an almost successful play for the ingenue and incidentally double-cross his girl friend and partner, Miss Benton.

The youthful assistant D.A. gets into action to save his father and the girl from the toils of the gambler, but it's really Richmond's own talent for being a heel that gets him in the end. So when he is found thoroughly shot in an automobile in front of the gal's home there are plenty of logical suspects for the police to work on. In the denouement of the story clarity has been more than somewhat sacrificed to speed

Supporting cast is all excellent with Dae and Charles Trowbridge winning a hand in the chief character roles and Bill Kennedy handling the brief part of the wronged brother creditably.

Picture has been skilfully produced by Jeffrey Bernerd and photography is adequately handled by William Sickner.

Neufeld Forming Film Outfit with PRC Execs

Sig Neufeld and some former PRC officials are currently organizing a new producing-distributing organization. Blueprint on the new film company is now being worked out in conjunction with about 20 former PRC franchise holders. The outfit will map a production format aimed directly at the nation's low-budget picture market.

Understood that financing of the new company has been underwritten by local banking organization. Outfit is mapping a slate of 24 features per year, with two films skedded to roll each month. All the pictures have been earmarked for $40,000 budgets.

Company will start its production program at the single sound stage studio operated by George Weeks on Gordon street. It was reported that Fred Preble, former studio manager at PRC, is currently pushing plans for construction of a two-stage studio, which would also be utilized by the new company.

Neufeld, currently producing "Blondes on the Loose" at PRC, has three more pictures to do for the company before getting off the lot by August 1. Current plans are to have the new company in production shortly after that date. It is believed that several key personnel, either dissatisfied with the recent Pathe-Eagle Lion consolidation or being let out by the development, are joining the new company.

"There is a very definite market for low-budget action pictures," a spokesman for the new company said last night. "This new organization is working out the program with the former franchise holders of PRC who want to continue in business and must have a source of supply."

Another unusual aspect in deal is that Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn agency some time ago set Miss Blondell for Tuesday program and yesterday agreed to let J. Walter Thompson agency sign her for preceding night. BBDO first checked sponsor for reaction, then nodded assent. Regular Monday evening rehearsal for "Best" will have to be shoved back so Miss Blondell can fill the Lux bill.

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Ida Lupino's contract with Warners has only eight more months to run. The brothers Warner have been talking long and earnestly to Miss Lupino in an effort to re-sign her. So far, no soap. Solid at the boxoffice, she wants to get on that old gravy train—heavy hunk of coin plus percentage of profits . . . It'll be a surprise if a young male dancing star (a click in his first pic) returns to Hollywood for another picture. Too many execs' wives got a glint in their eyes on his account . . . Warners is shifting into high on its 20th anniversary of sound celebration. Such joint sponsors as A.T.&T., Bell Telephone, Eastman-Kodak and RCA-Victor have been rung in on the deal . . . It almost always happens. A magazine hits the stands with a layout on a film couple showing them in turtle-dove poses and quoting them on love eternal, and they split up. Currently hit by the jinx is Screenland, whose June issue carries a story and art on Dick Cromwell and Angela Lansbury titled "Happy on a Hilltop." They announced their separation two days ago . . . Taylor Caldwell's "This Side of Innocence" blasted its way to the top of the best seller list in record time. NY Times reported it hit the top on the basis of its first two weeks sale.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: One of the top screen villains and a laugh-loving producer are working a rib on a writer visiting from the east for all it's worth. The scrivener lapped up too much liquor one night recently, and wasn't quite sure the morning after what he did in various night spots. The ribbers seized on this lamentable blank spot and gave him wild accounts of his misbehaviour . . . Mike Curtiz got one of the longest takes ever recorded in Technicolor on "Life with Father"—five full minutes of dialogue batted back and borth by William Powell, Irene Dunne and Edmund Gwenn . . . Another story of Samuel Goldwyn's misadventures at gin rummy: Playing with Milton Bren, he kept losing consistently and burning slowly. Finally he snorted, "Figure out how much I owe you and we'll quit." Bren toted up the score and mentioned a couple thousand dollars as Goldwyn's loss for the evening. Goldwyn gritted his teeth. "Keep dealing!" . . . Nitery notery: Dave Rose, Mickey Rooney and Sid Luft stagging it. L. B. Mayer and Joseph Schenck sharing the same dancing partner at the Mocambo. Also at the same spot: John Emery and Tamara Geva, Spencer Martin and Janet Thomas, Paul McNamara and Audrey Young, Jim Kimberly and Adele Jergens, the Mark Hellingers, Tom D'Andrea and Shirley Mitchell . ... Incidentally, all revelry on Sunset Strip stops at midnight, on the button. The Law, mindful of approaching elections, is eagle-eyed these nights . . . Dorothy Sarnoff made her entrance for the "Only a Rose" number in "The Vagabond King" the other night, only to find she had left the rose in her dressing room. Fortunately she didn't leave her voice or wits in the same place.

CALL SHEET: ALEXIS SMITH will be the first film actress to be pictured in Encyclopedia Britannica with five portraits in color illustrating a chapter on makeup by Perc Westmore. She was notified yesterday that she'll receive a set of Britannicas for free . . . GEORGE BRENT received a rather curious award yesterday. Thomas A. Edison Society announced it was honoring him for the "most consistent record for sanity in acting" . . . EDGAR DEARING plays his 100th detective role in RKO's "Nocturne." Broke into films with a featured role in D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance" . . . GREER GARSON received a portrait of herself from E. Kanarek, Polish painter. He depicted her as a red-haired mermaid—ironical touch after she nearly drowned off the coast of Monterey . . . HAROLD J. McCORD will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given tomorrow by Jack L. Warner, marking his 25th year with the studio . . . GRACIE FIELDS and her husband, Monty Banks, were honored at a reception given by USO-Camp Shows in New York yesterday on their return from a world-girdling entertainment tour for Allied troops . . . FRANK BORZAGE will sponsor his second Motion Picture Invitational golf tournament at the California Country Club July 14 . . . GENE RAYMOND will do a summer stock show at Dennis, Mass., in August . . . PENNY SINGLETON and ROBERT SPARKS return from New York tomorrow . . . ROBERT CARSON returned from his vacation in Death Valley with a case of the flu.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Charlie Brackett probably realizes now he wasn't meant to be an actor. Yesterday he stepped into camera range for appearance in a trailer. A split second after the camera started rolling, it stopped dead and all the lights blacked out. The studio power had failed, but most of Brackett's associates took it as an omen he should stick to writing and producing . . . The dear, demented, pre-war Hollywood is coming back. Couple of ex-servicemen, Harry Engel and Ed Striker, are preeming a hot-dog stand at Beverly and La Cienega, tonight, with lights, red plush, photogs and such film personalities as Keenan Wynn, Martha O'Driscoll, Charles Korvin, Lawrence Tierney, etc., attending . . . Edward H. Griffith and Gene Fowler are leaving next month to scout locations for "Rip Van Winkle" in the Catskills. Free advice for Mr. Griffith: Don't let Fowler disappear on you; he has something of the old Rip in him . . . Konstantin Simonov, Russian war correspondent and author of "Days and Nights," will be honored tomorrow night at the Beverly Wilshire, with Lewis Milestone, Howard Koch and Vincent Price on the program. Simonov is touring the country as a guest of the State Department . . . June Fraser, film starlet, has been signed by the Theatre Guild for a role in Eugene O'Neill's play to be produced in NY this fall . . . Metro turns the clock back—way back—for its chase scene in "Jenny Was a Lady." Jan Clayton, in a horse-drawn buggy, will be pursued by a squad of villains driving a 1905 Ford.——D.D.T.

ZANUCK WINS OUT ON NO MORE B'S FOR 20TH-FOX

New York, May 14.—The 20th-Fox announcement last week that studio would discontinue making "B" pictures signalizes victory for Darryl F. Zanuck in a running battle with the top brass in the east that has continued during the past several years.

Zanuck has been adamant that 20th-Fox trademark be attached to nothing but top "A" productions. New York toppers, taking the businessmen's attitude, contended the "B's" were necessary to spread overhead studio and distribution set-up, thus reducing per-picture costs. They also felt that a secondary product was vital to obtain maximum 20th-Fox profits in double feature territories. The Zanuck victory leaves the company still with a limited amount of "B" product under contract with Sol Wurtzel and Eddie Alperson. But it appears questionable that their pacts will be renewed.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 14.—Wonder how many of you have seen the interview with British film director Harold French which appeared in a London newspaper not long after he got home from his six-week visit in Hollywood. French told the reporter that our industry was "worried to death" about the success of British pix.

"The panic is having serious results for British studios," he is quoted, "because Hollywood is now grabbing all our stars—Rex Harrison, Lilli Palmer, Richard Greene, Roland Culver, Patricia Medina and anyone else it can get."

French further commented that: "They seem to know more about British films in America than we known about them in London."

Hullabaloo trusts you are all properly worried about British films. French would be so disappointed in us otherwise.

We have said it before, many times, and we repeat it now because of number of recent trade paper stories to the contrary—there will be no cut in the 20 per cent box office bite this year.

Your government is driving hard for a balanced budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The Ways and Means Committee of the House, which originates all tax legislation, has no intention of passing any new tax bills this year which will cut the government income at this time. No cuts will be made which will be effective before Jan. 1, 1947.

A report the other day by the Department of Commerce on the booming motion picture production situation in Egypt has an angle which is not mentioned in the report. It is on the investment possibilities in Egyptian studios.

The Commerce study points out that the whole Arabic world is interested in Egyptian pix because of the language and the angling. It will be no surprise to this column if Hollywood money starts to buy in there where films are made for a fraction of what ours cost.

Latest candidate for debut of a government film for distribution through ATA is "Seeds of Destiny" made by the Army with an eye to theatrical release. Produced by Maj. David Miller, former Metro director, "Seeds" points up the European food problem.

A black and white two-reeler, it will be screened for the Famine Emergency Committee this week, and will then probably be offered for theatrical consumption. Miller, heading a nine-man crew, shot on-the-spot footage, none of which has been previously shown. Government officials who saw it unscored give it rave notices.

Other possibility for ATA consideration is "Let There Be Light," Army psychiatric pic made by John Huston while still in uniform, and narrated by Walter Huston. Third choice is "Last Bomb," AAF tinter. "Bomb" is being plugged with screening tonight for members of the National Press Club.

OPTION GOODWIN AS POSSIBLE SUB FOR SINATRA

Old Gold has taken an option, it was learned yesterday, on a James Saphier package wrapped around Bill Goodwin starring in a 30-min. comedy-mystery program. Last night a Lennen & Mitchell agency spokesman admitted there is a possibility the Saphier show might replace Frank Sinatra next autumn for the ciggie account.

Tonight at NBC the agency auditions for Old Gold execs a layout designed to board CBS as Sinatra's summer replacement, commencing with June 6 broadcast. Comedy is titled "The Sad Sack," and lead played by Herb Vigran is patterned after comic-strip character created during war years in pages of Yank mag by George Baker. Ted Sherdeman produced program for Lennen & Mitchell, with Arthur Stander and Charlie Isaacs scripting.

PLUGGERS' UNION FACES 'PAYOLA' QUESTION

General membership meeting of Coast branch of Music Publishers' Contact Employes (songpluggers' union) will be held Monday afternoon at Hollywood Knickerbocker. According to director Nat Winecoff get-together is planned to stimulate more good-fellowship and less wrangling among the 115 songpluggers here, but it also is known that recent evidences of the "payola" evil rearing its head will be discussed.

At a confab of board of governors of union yesterday, Jimmy Campbell, one-time British music pub, was admitted after seeking a membership for several years. He had been stalled off because he was not a U.S. citizen, but he appeared before board yesterday armed with application for citizenship and consequently six board members present voted him in. Union rule is that non-citizens cannot join. Campbell, once enrolled, will commence work as plugger here for Rudy Vallee's music company.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

We've got to make decisions and now in international affairs. We've either got to quit this muddling through, or decide we don't care whether another war comes along or not. I'm thinking of the action of the Congress on the draft. It's another stop-gap, another step to avoid doing something. It means more uncertainty for the teen agers and fathers who don't know whether they'll be drafted after the present reprieve period. It means they can't plan their lives. It means—since the 20 to 30 group already has been called on in the draft or exempted—that the men now in the service will either have to stay longer, or we'll have to reduce our plan for occupation and service forces. It means that what Byrnes says in Paris is not backed up here at home, and that he is robbed of any power. The point is that we've either got to decide we take our part in world affairs, and that means occupation of Germany and Japan, to see they don't rise again, and service on the way to those countries, or we decide to let Nazis and Tojos thrive to strike again some other day. That means we've got to get men to do these jobs either by the draft or by voluntary enlistment. We're doing nothing about the draft and got half our quota in voluntary enlistments in April, the last reported month. That means we're falling behind in our commitments, and at the same time we're criticizing Byrnes. Somehow we've got to learn the word responsibility is not one that means: "Let George do it."

PIX EARNINGS $204 MILLION

earnings, the take for the big boom year of 1929 was only $62,000,000. And then if we look back to the depth of the depression in 1932 and 1933, the industry dropped $123,000,000 for those years.

In 1945 corporate profits for broadcasting amounted to $76,000,000; and for all other branches of amusement and recreation (and that includes professional sports) the figure was only $58,000,000.

After deduction of Federal and State taxes last year, the picture industry netted $75,000,000, as contrasted with $29,000,000 for broadcasting and $22,000,000 for all other amusement and recreation. Due to the higher tax rates, pictures fell $2,000,000 below 1944 and $6,000,000 below 1943. These figures, of course, have no connection with the admissions tax.

In 1945, motion pictures paid out dividends of $32,000,000 to stockholders, a figure equaled in two other years, 1930 and 1944. Last year, the broadcasters paid $13,000,000 in dividends and all other amusement and recreation paid $4,000,000.

These figures tell a comprehensive story of the relative importance of films to other amusements.

NEXT STATE FAIR NOT IN SIGHT UNTIL 1948

Sacramento, May 14.—With the cancellation of the California state fair this fall, insiders now believe there will not be a fair in 1947, either, but that all efforts will be directed toward opening the exposition in 1948 on its proposed new site here.

Last state fair was held in 1941. Plans were well under way to resume it this year, Aug. 20-Sept. 10, and considerable money had been spent in preparation. Freeze on nonessential building, cost of approximately $500,000 needed to put grounds in shape, and shortage of labor forced directors to cancel it May 3, however.

Plans to move grounds from within city limits to site on outskirts, near confluence of Sacramento and American rivers, have been under discussion for several months.

With this year's cancellation these plans are expected to be speeded and all indications point to no fair next year either, while new site is being readied. Legislature, however, has to approve new site at 1947 regular session.

4-HOURS-A-NIGHT AIRER BOUGHT BY SPADE-COOLEY

Four hours nightly have been bought on station KFVD by Spade Cooley at price of $1,500 weekly. Leader will use time to plug his operation of the renamed Santa Monica Ballroom, formerly Western Palisades, and to popularize cactus school of music. Deal is for one year and is probably bankrolled by Walter Newcomb, wealthy realtor and owner of ballroom. Also possible that Cooley's recording affiliation, Columbia, and publishers, Hill & Range Co., are assisting. Dean Simmons agency set deal.

Emcees are being auditioned for show which started last night with spieler Sam Levene. All and sundry western artists will be invited for cuffo guest airings, and to play their own recordings. Program will be combo of live, recordings and transcriptions, and will run seven days weekly, from 9 p.m. to one a.m., station's sign-off. Name is "Spade Cooley Time", and program will not be sponsored, eliminating all plugs except personalities, disc, sheet music, etc., of participants. Ballroom will also be picked up as remote on weekends, but regular show airs from studios of station.

Deal is said to have been inspired by Cooley's recent unfavorable publicity, plus attempt to build dancery to better position in community. Formerly operated on Saturday nights only, it is now going full three-day weekends.

RKO Plans 16M Distrib Spots in All Key Cities cities can take a 16m mobile unit into the surrounding communities and draw from 80 to 100 per cent of the population. Presently such exhibs can hope to hit only about 10 per cent once or twice a week. People in crossroad communities outlying larger towns usually visit the city only once or twice a week, thus concentrating theatre business in a few nights each week. This group, plus those that pass up film entertainment because of delay in getting home or other reasons, would make up a profitable revenue source for the 16m units, it is believed.

COMPETISH BY FARMERS

Persistent rumors pointing towards the RKO 16m move gain strength from fact that a number of new organizations are being formed to bring motion pictures to rural areas, which will increase competition for regular 35m operators. Among these newly formed organizations is the Farm Film Foundation, which yesterday announced it has decided to push for the creation of at least 1,000 16m picture circuits throughout U.S. rural areas.

The non-profit, educational outfit is headed by Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., and is composed of leaders of various farmer organizations. California's representative is Paul Armstrong of Los Angeles, who is general manager of the California Fruit Growers Exchange.

Following a meeting of the board of directors in Washington yesterday, Fuller said the program will "aim toward the creation of a better understanding of the importance of farming to the welfare of the world, through the carefully directed use of audio-visual education centered about 16m sound films." The Foundation plans to maintain a national screen library, establish circuits in cooperation with farm organizations and to advise on film production.

While the Foundation is an educational outfit, such a circuit as it plans would be a natural for assembling farm audiences for regular film features, reduced to 16m. If established film companies can aid 35m exhib customers to break into the rural film with narrow gauge screenings, it will be a big step towards elimination of rapidly rising jackrabbit competition.

Crosby informed the company at the expiration of his long deal that he would give them a chance to match any proffer that was forthcoming from elsewhere. Walter Thompson agency in Chicago this week, to submit to Crosby. Just what the plan is has not been revealed, but likely that Crosby might be given opportunity to absorb stock in National Dairies, which is the parent company of Kraft cheese.

WARNERS will celebrate 20th anniversary of talking pictures this coming August, but Thomas A. Edison beat the brothers Warner to the punch by 30 years in predicting advent of the sound screen. Inventor wrote, in a pamphlet: "I believe that in coming years, by my work and that of Dickson, Marie and others who will doubtlessly enter the field, that grand opera can be given at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York without any material change from the original, and with artists and musicians long since dead." Edison was scoffed at by general public, at the time, for such a prediction as a screen which both moved and talked.

Gaillard demurred, stating, "What are people going to think who see Gaillard crouched down in a police car?" He finally won his point and made the trips in own vehicle, with a motorcycle escort sweeping a swath through traffic.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

John L. Lewis has precedent for that health and welfare fund he's demanding. Fourteen other unions have such a fund. He also has the factor that the employers contribute the money in the majority of current cases. But in only one or two cases do unions have full charge. Mostly the fund is in the hands of an insurance company; in some cases it is jointly administered. Lewis also is asking for a much larger percentage of gross payrolls than usual, since the most of the fourteen unions obtain their fund from a 2 to 3 per cent tax. However the National Buttonhole Manufacturers Association gets 7½. Doubtless Lewis knows that, and has been waiting for the opportunity to say: "So you think 7 per cent is too much? Do you therefore think that mining is less hazardous and less hard on workers than that of buttonhole making?"

Retakes

Night has fallen in the valleys
While the hills are still aflame.
Then the skulking villain sallies
Forth to do his deed of shame.

Screams arise from yonder attic,
Drops of gore begin to flow
And the case grows problematic:
"Who has murdered Unce Joe?"

Cops blow in with wailing sirens,
Eager on the murder job,
Blocking all the near environs,
Pinching Joe's young nephew, Bob.

Bob has nothing to commend him;
He is headed for the noose
As the coppers apprehend him—
Then another scream breaks loose.

Old Aunt Minnie lies a-gasping
On the staircase in the hall
While her feeble hands are grasping
Clues that might betray them all.

Suddenly the mazdas darken
In the sultry evening air
And a dozen suspects hearken
As a footstep creaks the stair.

There are dozens of surmises
As they ponder, cold and numb,
While a silken voice arises
With a blurb for bubble gum.

The educational influence of motion pictures goes on, with the boys and gals of Hollywood learning something new about geography. In the old Rand-McNally days the student memorized a pink country known as Persia, which later became Iran, and you don't know how to pronounce Iranians or Iranese; you learned how to pronounce Uruguay and Paraguay and you recollected that one was a sort of pale rose color and the other was an October brown. Now it all comes out in Technicolor, where the natural colors don't work, on account of they clash with science. Back in the old days you paid a nickel for a kaleidoscope, a little dingbat in which you could see a lot of colors when you juggled the broken glass. At the same time you could look up in the rainy afternoon sky and see a rainbow. Maybe science isn't everything.

LEGIT OPENING

THE AVON FLOWS

George Jean Nathan showed that his skill as a "play surgeon" can be carried over into the other side of the footlights. He displayed it with the premiere of "The Avon Flows," which was presented last night at the Pasadena Community Playhouse.

Critic Nathan contrived with Shakespeare help to become a playwright. In fact, it is Shakespeare's work with only an assist from Nathan. The latter has wielded a scalpel on "Romeo and Juliet," "Othello" and "Taming of the Shrew" to show what might have happened to Romeo and Juliet if they had married. It is a cute trick; amusing, but "full of sound and fury signifying nothing." Nathan has proved himself adept at patching and mending but the transitions move too fast for the student of Shakespeare as well as the tyro. What Nathan has done is neat chicanery. What Shakespeare has done, let no man put asunder.

The cast last night had a grievous fault of spitting out lines too fast. Commendable, however, were the performances of Frederick Berest, Mary Whaley, Paul Langton, Emily Lawrence, and Alex Gerry. George Phelps direction was in the spirit of the play.

At Last, Diogenes!

WOLFE KAUFMAN who "Hates Blondes" and, maybe at times, most everything else he can think of, has written a piece in the May issue of the Screen Writer under the heading of "What Is The Answer?", about the screen writer and the film reviewer or critic.

He starts by saying "The business of the writer-critic relations is a bit more than at first it seems possible." He sets himself up as an authority on the matter from standpoint of writer and critic, but admits he does not know the answer.

Guess the problem, if one exists, between writer and critic, is much more muddled by his expression. In his article he forgets such a thing as continuity as to how their relationship ties in. Then he goes into a scurvy indictment of most anyone who has written a film review outside of Wolfe Kaufman.

Kaufman indicts newspaper people for offenses to which he pleads innocent. He says picture companies try to control them as far as notices are concerned. That theatre people try also. But that in no instance was there any effort made by editors for whom he worked to dictate policy or direct his views. But he adds: "In only one case was it possible, nevertheless, for me to be completely unhampered and honest in my opinions. This was on Variety, where anything I said or thought was printed, as I said it, or thought it. And where no one ever tried to bribe me or influence me. (I must point out, in all fairness, that this was during the 1930-37 period; I cannot know whether this freedom and honesty still exists on Variety)."

For the information of Mr. Kaufman, and others concerned, the principle of reviewing which existed on Variety when he was on it up to 1937, still exists. And also on Daily Variety, which was founded in 1933. This should relieve his mind of the fear that honesty left Variety with him.

Kaufman then tries to alibi himself for whatever he did elsewhere, by saying he was never permitted such honesty, even on Marshall Field's Chicago Sun. "But most is my own fault. And I'll be darned if I know how to avoid it." He says the advertising department "influences you." "The business office influences you." "The movie publicity department influences you." "Even your readers influence you."

Boy, oh boy, how weak and flexible Wolfie Kaufman must be.

He goes on and indicts everybody. Claims the film studio helps out by supplying a number of nice reviews, written in advance, in the studio. "Help yourself."

The article continues: "I have met only one movie reviewer in my life who is completely honest and devoid of temptation. I was publicizing a movie when I met this gent, on one of America's first ranking newspapers. He said: 'How long a review would you like?' I said, very modestly: 'Use your own judgment, old boy.' He said simply: 'Well, it's up to you. A half column review costs $15, a full column review with a picture, costs $25.'"

That's really hollering copper, but we're not surprised!

Kaufman further states that reviewers must be taken to lunch or dinner every so often. That they are given gifts. Not lavish ones. That they must be given trips to New York or Hollywood, every once in a while.

Yep, he's right. He knows. We remember when he was the Hollywood correspondent of News Week back in February, 1941. Universal had a premiere of "Back Street" in Miami. The studio invited a number of syndicate writers, important reviewers and trade paper people to go along. Kaufman was not on the list. But it did not take him long to get on, for he let the boys at Universal studio know it would not augur well for them, if he didn't go. He went, not only to Miami. He returned via New York, where he had some personal business. And, to boot, he was a guest of Warners here in 1942 when he was Movie Reviewer of the Chicago Sun.

So Mr. Kaufman was as susceptible to gift taking, or trips, as were those of the "fourth estate" whom he indicts.

But those of us who know Wolfie Kaufman sum up his squawk in one word: "Applesauce."

Dressed To Kill

(Melodrama)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Producer-director, Roy William Neill. Executive producer, Howard Benedict. Screenplay, Leonard Lee. Adaptation, Frank Gruber, from story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Photography, Maury Gertsman. Editor, Saul A. Goodkind. Musical director, Milton Rosen. Art direction, Jack Otterson, Martin Obzina. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman, Edward R. Robinson. Sound, Bernard B. Brown, Glenn E. Anderson. Gowns, Vera West. Assistant director, Melville Shyer. Song, by Jack Brooks.

PREVIEWED at studio, May 15, 1946. Running time: 72 MINS.

"Dressed to Kill" maintains the standard set by previous Sherlock Holmes offerings and should please audiences which have followed series, with customary returns accruing. Film moves at speedy tempo which early attracts attention and cleverly-contrived plot holds this interest. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce are up to usual form, as Holmes and Dr. Watson, respectively, and Roy William Neill, in dual capacity of producer-director, has accorded picture showmanship treatment.

This time, Holmes is confronted with the problem of ferreting out hiding place of stolen Bank of England five-pound-note plates. Thief, who was caught 15 minutes after lifting them, and now in Dartmoor Prison, sends out cue to their resting place in trio of music boxes, and it's up to master sleuth to make sense out of the tune of one of these boxes, convict's associates having other two.

Detective is up against a dangerous antagonist in solving case, which provides plenty of suspense and movement. Leonard Lee, scripting from Frank Gruber's adaptation of a Sir Arthur Conan Doyle story, turns in a well worked-out piece of writing, and Neill makes the most of script with his direction. Saul A. Goodkind's editing heightens interest and technical departments generally are of high standard.

Rathbone and Bruce endow their roles with customary aplomb, Rathbone shrewdly convincing, Bruce properly stuffy. Heading supporting cast is Patricia Morison, as leader of the crooks, with Frederic Worlock and Harry Cording her confederates, all lending credence to their roles, and Edmond Breon stands out as their murder victim. Smaller roles have been atmospherically cast.

OUTDOOR THEATRE GROUP PLANNING 12-WEEK SEASON

The Hollywood Starlight Theatre, newly organized show combo which recently leased the Greek Theatre, will launch in July a 12-week season of light operas and musicals featuring top singing and dramatic talent. Opening show will be "Two Hearts In Three Quarters Time," with negotiations currently on for Irene Manning and Kenny Baker for starring role. Among the financial backers are David Loew, who is on the board of directors, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers and other film personalities. Ray Sinatra has signed on as musical director and is already creating a musical organization.

Understood that the group leased the 5,000-seat, well-equipped outdoor theatre from the Los Angeles City Park Department for a $20,000 annual rental plus a participation deal on the net. Shows will be presented seven nights weekly, with admissions scaled from one to three dollars. There will be no matinee performances. Jackie Jones, eight-year-old son of Allan Jones and Irene Hervey, is getting an early initiation in the woes of show business. Producing a grade school play, Jackie wanted his younger playmate to play the lead. "But," Jackie said, "he won't play it, doesn't like the script." "Why not?" his father asked. "He can't read," Jackie explained. Many an older producer has had the same suspicion about actors—and vice versa.

MANAGERS BEEF ON 'SELL OUT' TO FOX-WC

tres president, without knowledge or sanction of the Teamsters or Local 266.

PROTEST TO TOBIN

Wire to Tobin, signed by James G. Moran, Local 266 secretary, charges Leheney with failing to properly and uncompromisingly represent the managers as trustee in negotiating with Fox-West Coast, an NT subsid, and cites the asserted secret deal with Skouras as an example. Claim is made that Tuohy set-up is a sell-out of the union, wire stating: "We do not believe you granted us a charter a scant eight weeks ago only to see us sold down the river now," and asked Tobin for advice on the next move to be taken by the local. Wire cites instances of unsuccessful attempts to contact Leheney, who is also public relations head here for Teamsters, to get a clarification of Local 266's status.

Fox-West Coast had no comment to make on the Tuohy position nor the protest by the managers. It is known that managers union activities past months has given circuit many headaches, even resulting in transfer of one top executive to a new post. Labor relations department has been needed by the circuit for some time in handling negotiations with various crafts such as projectionists, drivers, etc., on new contracts. Finally realization of need was behind bringing Tuohy into the picture to work with other executives on new deals and present sore spots.

STAGEHAND PACT UP

Getting the managers straightened out will probably be the first job for Tuohy, although there is also new pact to be negotiated with Stagehands union covering Los Angeles, preliminaries on which have already started. Job of convincing managers that his appointment to new post, an important one, is perfectly proper and may advance the demands of Local 266 will be up to Leheney.

Protests, which managers point out is not against the Teamsters but aimed at asserted secret manipulations by Leheney, have also placed Tuohy on the spot. Tuohy, business agent for Studio Transportation Drivers, Local 399, is in the middle of negotiations for the Hollywood local on a new contract with producers, making it difficult for him to step out immediately. For that reason announcement of his National Theatres post is being held up until Tuohy has a chance to clear matters with his local and Tobin.

LIGHT AND AIRY

BY D. W. THORNBURGH

(Hitch-hiking for Jack Hellman)

Each year, it is increasingly evident that Radio has obeyed Greeley's admonition and the trend of normal progress to "go West." This trend during the past ten years has established Hollywood as the radio capital of the nation.

Now with the contemplated additions to the established plants of CBS and NBC, plus the projected new buildings of Mutual and ABC and the additional independent radio stations in the neighborhood, we are developing a concentration of radio facilities and activities in the Hollywood area more impressive than the production facilities in New York.

Radio as an industry is comparatively new, but I, for one, am tired of hearing it referred to as an "infant industry." At twenty-six, a man is expected to be an adult with a future assured and with an alert eye to the ways of the world and the demands of his own destiny. Certainly an industry is no different. So, first of all, let's stop thinking of radio as a juvenile and expect it to qualify as a mature and vital medium in an advancing world.

We here on the Coast bear the brunt of that challenge to maturity . . . and we accept that challenge, not only with pride but with genuine anticipation. The tools we have to work with are ideals and talents.

Prior to the war, the coming of the fall months was always an exciting event in the home lives of radio listeners, who looked forward to innovations with each new season. But the war, with its unrelenting demands for straight and accurate information and reporting and its enlisting of radio as an actual fighting unit put a necessarily restraining leash on new entertainment ideas. While radio grew and thrived during the past few years, it did operate without the advantage of young blood and new ideas.

Fortunately, we are unusually well equipped with both of those essential qualities, young blood and new ideas, here in Hollywood, and therein lies our primary qualification as a radio capital.

THE bright young minds are back, many of them already lending their talents to the industry and still more of them returning day by day. These ingenious young men are coming back to us with valuable experience gained through the many and varied radio activities of the armed forces. They will be our fountain head of new ideas.

Just as a general marshalls his strongest forces at the point where the action promises to be the most furious, so radio is currently focussing its finest talents—theatrical, technical and business—at the point of greatest challenge. And that is Hollywood. More network programs are now emanating from the West than ever before in the history of radio, and there is every indication that the number will continue to increase. Recognizing this, the networks are constantly enlarging their West Coast staffs, as are the advertising agencies. Closer coordination is being fostered between western area offices and their headquarters in the east.

In line with this increase of coast-to-coast coordination, the Columbia Broadcasting System recently appointed Ernest H. Martin as Director of Network Programs. Headquartered in Hollywood, Martin is working closely with Davidson Taylor and Edward R. Murrow in New York on the over-all revitalization of the System's transcontinental programming. This is the first major step by CBS toward the end of having a large percentage of its staff operating in Hollywood. Other networks are engaged in similar activities. Already such outstanding company producers as Norman Corwin, Charles Vanda, William N. Robson, Larry Berns and William Spier are originating most of their major productions from Hollywood's Columbia Square studios. The obvious reason for this westward movement of personnel is to take advantage of the tremendous pool of talent afforded by this entertainment center.

So, already we have the framework for ambitious expansion, and for the attainment of that maturity we were talking about.

NOW we must fill in that framework. The agencies and the networks are looking for programs of outstanding entertainment value. That means a combination of ideas, talent, writing abilities and technical skill. In short, we're seeking ideas and programs to inject new life into programming and radio in general. That's a large order.

Like every fighter, radio had first to shed its military uniform before it could devote itself wholeheartedly to reconversion to civilian life. Radio has been honorably discharged from actual combat duty. Now it behooves the industry to approach its peacetime development with the same courage, the same ingenuity, the same creative genius with which it helped battle to victory.

The days of easy sales are over. But the talent is here. The West is still the new empire . . . and the spaces are still wide open. Never has there been such an opportunity for radio, and every other industry, to forge ahead with fresh ideas and with improved quality of product.

Radio now has the responsibility and the golden chance to create not only improved entertainment, but also outstanding public service features, fed by the interests of the community and of the nation.

KELSO QUITS WB BEFORE ANSON TAKES OVER

Kelso was to remain until final day, but on failing to get together with station on a new late night disc show of his own, he left. Lou Marcelle and Joe Yocam, announcers, continue filling until Anson takes over. All night show would have been departure for KFWB, involving considerable expense.

Little children, like these, were first on Hitler's death list. The survivors numbered only 10%.

Many of these tragic remnants of humanity have since died.

Many are dying this very moment.

Most of them will be dead by the end of 1946 unless you help them.

Every creed, every race has a stake in this fight for survival.

What is your answer? Death for them — or LIFE?

GIVE — and they live!

DON'T — and they die!

YOUR CONTRIBUTION MEANS A LIFE... OR LIVES!

Time is vital! Starving souls and bodies cannot wait. Your gift today will spell a happy future . . . or an immediate death.

Which shall it be?

Los Angeles must raise $5,000,000 to meet its share of this life-saving campaign.

A thousand activities demand continuous life-saving action — from transportation, to housing, to food, medicine, clothing.

To give is not only a duty, but a welcome privilege. Thousands now about to die will live — and live to thank you!

No Crowding on Televish Black and White Lanes

Washington, May 15.—Recent prediction by Federal Communications Commission chairman Charles A. Denny that 100 video stations would be on air next year was discounted here today with disclosure that there are only about 100 applicants actively seeking low - frequency black - and-white channels.

Best estimates now are that no more than 50 television outlets will be humming by the end of this year, since some of present applicants are expected to withdraw and others will be unable to get into operation in time. Imminence of color video has been given by backsliders as reason for their withdrawal, with some attributing lost interest to OPA construction ban and the prospect that but few tele receivers will reach public in the next two years.

Even those who agree with RCA that color is five years in the future claim it will take a year and a half, under OPA's present rules, to get a station on the air. Two years more would be required, they assert, before money would start to return and by they color video may wipe out their entire investment.

Meanwhile, FCC today laid out its schedule for video hearings in Los Angeles, slated to open May 20, with eight bidders in the running for seven channels. Vying for consideration are Howard Hughes, Paramounts subsid, Television Productions; Earle C. Anthony, Don Lee, NBC, ABC, Times-Mirror Co., and Dorothy Thackrey. FCC Spokesmen indicate, however, that if one of applicants pulls out, the hearings may be cancelled.

GALLUP SEEKING AIR CLEARANCE FOR POLL

Jack Sayers, chief of Coast office of film division of Gallup poll, flies to NY Monday for home office huddles on future of "America Speaks," program which CBS has aired locally only for past five weeks and which has attracted network sponsor bids.

Prime difficulty to be overcome on program, which Sayers himself is handling, is fact it is restricted off webs at present because of Gallup column syndicated in newspapers. As airer is based on same cross-section statistics gleaned from public, permission will have to be obtained from sheet in each locality where it is released. The Los Angeles Times, a Gallup subscriber, gave special permission for the tryout which has been staged here.

Young & Rubicam agency, of which Gallup is veepee in charge of research, handles program and is understood to have received bids from two bankrolls. One, a finance company, was nixed because Gallup is said to be seeking an institutional advertiser only.

FCC Orders Inquiry Into Par Television Holdings

clude a thorough study of Paramount's holdings and stock ownership in three television companies in which the film company has majority control and in four others in which company itself or Paramount officials hold minority blocks of stock.

FCC said it was going into the Paramount holdings at this time to determine whether or not licensing these companies would be contrary to the Commission's multiple ownership rule limiting one outfit to "control" of only five stations.

The Los Angeles television screening is the first hearing to affect a Paramount subsidiary. Recently, however, the FCC awarded a television permit to Dumont Labs in Washington—a company 40 per cent-owned by Paramount. Earlier this month FCC by-passed the application of the United Detroit Theatres, a 98 per cent-held Paramount affiliate, in acting on bids of two other applicants for Detroit television.

COMPANIES UNDER FIRE

The FCC order called for study "to determine the stock ownership and management interest of Paramount Pictures, Inc., in the following applicant companies, among others": Television Productions, Inc., for stations in Los Angeles and San Francisco; Allen B. DuMont Labs, Inc., for Cleveland, O., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cincinnati, O.; United Detroit Theatres Corporation for Detroit; New England Theatres, Inc. for Boston; Mass.; Comerford Publix Theatres Corp., for station in Scranton, Pa.; Interstate Circuit, Inc., for station in Dallas, Texas; and Maison Blanche Company for station in New Orleans, La."

FCC will direct heaviest fire on Paramount's interests in Allen B. DuMont Labs, which is also applying for ceiling of five stations. Paramount owns all 560,000 shares of Class B stock in DuMont, a fraction of the Class "A" shares, but has only minority representation on the company's board of directors.

In addition, company officials hold all Class B stock in Comerford Publix Theatres Corp., Scranton; and Interstate Circuit, Inc., Dallas—both television applicants. Other officials have much smaller holdings in bid of New Orleans department store, the Maison Blanche Co. for outlet.

PAR OWNED COMPANIES

Wholly-owned Paramount companies in the television market are Tele Productions, Inc.; United Detroit Theatres Corp.; and New England Theatres. WBKB, a Balaban & Katz-owned station, is already on the air in Chicago.

FCC, in any event, will not act finally on any Paramount-controlled application, pending settlement of the Department of Justice's anti-trust proceedings again the company, it is understood here.

Should Commission nix the bids of several of these companies, it is looked on as "body-blow to black-and-white video," since the proposed networks of DuMont and Paramount —along with NBC and ABC—are backbone of present low-frequency television broadcasting.

Paramount may be doing "The Big Haircut" and 20th-Fox "The Razor's Edge" but Enterprise has the barber shop. New shop opened on the lot yesterday and all barbering is for free to studio employes, with even tips barred.

Glaser Back To NY After 2 Deals Here

SKOURAS, FABIAN, STEWART, MAYER UP FOR BEACON

New York, May 15. — Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy; Si Fabian, theatre circuit head, Arthur Mayer, exhibitor, and James Stewart, actor, have been nominated for the annual Beacon awarded each year by Motion Picture Associates for meritorious and patriotic achievements in the film industry. Nominations were made at luncheon meeting today. Results of balloting will be made official the night of the annual MPA dinner-dance at the Waldorf June 4.

It is doubted whether Stewart will accept the Beacon if winning over the other three nominees, as he shies away from such things.

At today's meeting, President Fred Schwartz, vice prexy of the Century circuit, outlined plans to raise $102,000, to which goal several commitments have already been made.

PRESIDENT SHOWN ARMY PICTURE 'OF DESTINY'

Washington, May 15.—"Of Destiny," Army-made two-reeler, will probably be the first Government-made film to be handled by American Theatres Association.

Film was run off at the White House yesterday for the President's Emergency Advisory Committee; and was screened today for Fiorello LaGuardia, UNRR director. LaGuardia was deeply impressed and said it was a picture that the entire nation should see.

Last night Arch Mercey, film liaison man for the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, discussed "Seeds" with Si Fabian, of ATA on the phone and is understood to have urged that the theatres take it to help the Food for Europe drive.

Irving Brecher writing original screenplay, "Baby Goes a'Hunting," for Metro.

Yes, Mr. Mayer

A few weeks ago Louis B. Mayer lectured Metro producers and directors on the need for economy production. He encored the talk in New York. Evidently director Roy Rowland listened. He read the script of "Tenth Ave. Angel," estimated the footage at 8500 and shot it. Rowland trimmed out 200 fet in the editing and, last night, ran it. Footage? You guessed it, 8500 feet.

ASCAP'S BUNDLE FROM BRITAIN

Coast songwriters yesterday received royalty checks for performances of their respective tunes in British Isles during 1943. ASCAP submitted, having recently received money from England's government-owned Performing Rights Society.

Since outset of war, Britain has been behind in payments, which are computed on basis of actual number of performances. However, that situation doesn't annoy writers as much as the wonderment about rest of Europe.

OBITUARIES

LEE KOHLMAR

Lee Kohlmar, 74, veteran stage actor and a leader in theatrical philanthropic work, passed away yesterday morning following a heart attack at the home of his nephew, Fritz Regenstein, 4455 Laurel Grove Avenue, North Hollywood. He was the father of Fred Kohlmar, 20th-Fox producer. The deceased for many years was identified with the New York stage. He is remembered chiefly for his work with David Warfield in "The Music Masters." For many years the elder Kohlmar was the Hollywood rep of the Jewish Theatrical Guild. His services, very often, took him away from acting chores to administer to the needy of the profession. The remains yesterday were being forwarded by his son, Fred, for interment in Mount Judah cemetery, New York City. Surviving, besides his son and nephew, are a sister, Emma Sichel of New York, and a brother, Bernhard Kohlmar of London.

'Annie Get Your Gun' Gets Raves for Merman, Berlin

New York, May 16.—Ethel Merman is the toast of the town, triumphant in "Annie Get Your Gun," season's triumph at Imperial tonight. Here's one show that wasn't overtouted. Studded with Irving Berlin's songs and without one dull moment, it should vie with any musical comedy in run honors. Miss Merman has twelve numbers, half of them solo and revels in all. Ray Middleton's stalwart baritone teams but her style of handling lyrics is her own.

First nighters couldn't get enough of Merman. On appearance she's immense and at one point displays shapely gams; virtually entire score is melodic, an amazing Berlin accomplishment because delivered under pressure. "Show Business" is standout ditty but there are runners up such as

DESPITE wishful eyeing of "Henry V" by a number of first run theatres locally, picture is scheduled to open at the Laurel June 14 on a two-day roadshow basis at $2.40 top. United Artists, distributing the English-made film, had previously sold picture to the Laurel, it is understood, and has been unable to withdraw to make a more favorable booking. Film turned in surprise business when it opened in Boston, catching distributing company short on many contracts already made. Exhibs figure film could go into a local showcase seating more than the Laurel's 800 and stay for a long and profitable run but effort to land feature for other houses so far have proved unsuccessful.

Which means the actor will remain at RKO for the next few months, pending formation of his own independent producing company.

Story is pleasantly nostalgic in that it recalls Buffalo Bill and sharp shooting Annie Oakley of William F. Cody's Wild West Show at turn of century. Lubov Roudenko and Daniel Nagrin excellent dance duo. Two major production numbers including Indian ceremonial dance stand out. Marty May as circus manager, William O'Neal as Buffalo Bill, figure in the going with Betty Anne Nyman and Kenny Bowers as song and dance team. Harry Bellaver as Sitting Bull does good job.

"Annie" is all show with many people and much color. Backed by 20th, when it reaches film form, it should be really something.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Way back in early western days the boys could shoot a sparrow
Or even nick the silent flight of any Redskin arrow.
Their six-guns were so very keen they clipped a buzzard's wings
And at a hundred yards they clipped a rattler of its stings.
Old Wyatt Earp and all his pals would chuck a lot of chuckles
To see a cowboy drop his rod and battle with his knuckles.

There is something sweet and naive about the windup of a western film, something you recollect from your panty-waist days, along about Christmas time when Jack the Giant Killer made right prevail over might, no matter how. The keen eyed cowboy, who can read the trail as easily as Noah Webster could read his ABC's requires six reels to discover that the crooked banker is in league with the rustlers although they leave their trails all over the canyons and hillsides of Rimrock County. Your keen eyed cowboy can shoot the whiskers off a mountain goat at one mile but wastes a hundred rounds of good old Smith & Wesson ammunition missing a villain whose 10-gallon hat stands out like a beacon above yonder boulder. So they throw away their artillery and put on a knuckle fight that the referee would toss out of the ring in the first round if they tried to pull it in the Hollywood Legion stadium. They are not even club fighters. Those haymakers are so obvious that the boys in the back rows would start tossing pop bottles into the ring. But on the screen it all winds up happily with law and order restored to Rattlesnake Creek and the blonde looking longingly as the cowboy rides out of focus with four Brooklyn hillbillies nasaling a Texas song written on Vine street.

Specter Of The Rose

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE of a Ben Hecht production, directed and written by producer. Co-producer-director and photography, Lee Garmes. Musical score, George Antheil. Musical director, Morton Scott. Production designer, Ernst Fegte. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr., Otto Siegel. Editor, Harry Keller. Sound, Ferrol Redd. Costumes, Adele Palmer. Choreography, Tamara Geva. Assistant director, Harold Godsoe.

CAST—Features Judith Anderson, Michael Chekhov, Ivan Kirov, Viola Essen, Lionel Stander. Supporting players, Charles "Red" Marshall, George Shdanoff, Billy Gray, Juan Panalle, Lou Hearn, Ferike Boros, Bert Hanlon, Constantine, Ferdinand Pollina, Polly Rose, Jim Moran, Freda Flier, Miriam Schiller, Miriam Golden, Grace Mann, Allan Cooke, Alice Cavers, Nina Haven, John Stanley, Arleen Claire, Celene Radding.

PREVIEWED in Hollywood, Calif., May 16, 1946. Running time: 90 MINS.

"Specter of the Rose" is one of those pictures with a great deal of artistic energy but lacking almost entirely in popular ingredients, a film of many speeches and doubtful box-office appeal. Certain measure of suspense is built up through use of music in achieving climax, but even here feature is slanted for limited carriage trade. Lack of draw names and studied treatment which goes in for effect rather than entertainment are further deterrents to film, which was produced and directed by Ben Hecht from his own story.

Story carries a ballet background, of a half-mad dancer bordering on a genius who is loved by a little ballerina. He murdered his first wife, a secret known by La Sylph, formerly a famous ballerina herself but now an aging ballet teacher, and in his mental state he nearly murders his second, who tries to save him from himself. Into this skein is woven narrative of the building of a ballet, and a tragic ending.

Ivan Kirov and Viola Essen portray the two dancers, both newcomers to screen, each contributing a top performance but hardly of a nature to attract public. Their ballet dancing, with choreography by Tamara Geva, is gracefully executed, and Miss Essen particularly evinces making of a dramatic actress.

Judith Anderson is strongly cast as La Sylph, turning in a capital performance, and Michael Chekhov offers a curiously-wrought characterization of a ballet impresario. Lionel Stander plays a typical Hecht character, with long platitudes for dialog. Balance of players are composed of type casting.

Hecht keeps tempo at snail's pace, for most part, permitting long pauses in action for the sake of meaningless dialog. Most remarkable part of picture is Lee Garmes' photography, each scene being made an interesting portrait. Garmes also acted as co-producer-director. George Antheil's musical score likewise is outstanding, and interesting backgrounds were designed by Ernst Fegte. Other technical credits match up.

'Abie's' Twins Picked

Patricia and Maureen Kory, nine-month-old daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Kory, were chosen yesterday from among 60 babies to play the twins in "Abie's Irish Rose," which Eddie Sutherland is producing and directing for Bing Crosby Producers, Inc. Mrs. Kory is a former dancer and has appeared in several pictures, but this is the debut for the twins.

Metro Shuffles First Runs for More Seats

Juggling of Metro's local first run showcases to total of four houses is expected to give the company weekly grosses topping any city in the world. Under new setup, the Fox Wilshire is being brought in to replace the Ritz, and the Belmont, subsequent run on Vermont is being upped to first run status to become the fourth house in the string.

Lineup gives Metro approximately 7,600 first run seats, an increase of about 2,600 over capacity of old setup, and tops any theatre in the country on ability to accommodate customers.

While not officially admitted, it is believed tremendous gross piled up by "The Spiral Staircase" at the Wilshire on its first week influenced Metro execs to press for a trading deal for the Ritz. Wilshire capacity is 2,296 seats, against the Ritz's 1,370. "Staircase" established new house record at the Wilshire with first week gross of just over $17,000.

First film to open the new foursome will be Metro's "Two Sisters From Boston," debuting June 4.

Million Dollar Takes Over Orpheum Role in Vaude

name film-vaude theatre booking the top attractions formerly playing the Orpheum.

Theatres to join with the Orpheum in the new policy are expected to be named within the next day or two. In addition to providing an outlet for top English features and product turned out by United World, the new combination will relieve backlog pressure on other showcases as policy will not be confined to imported features or to pictures turned out by domestic-foreign production combines.

Long runs in local first runs and difficulty in juggling adequate playing time to satisfy producing and distributing companies fully justifies establishment of new showcase string.

MILLION DOLLAR SWITCH

Million Dollar, in taking its place among the city's ace theatres, will open June 11 under the new policy with the Ink Spots' unit as the top attraction. House, operated by Metropolitan Theatres which also runs the Orpheum, is presently being completely renovated with new sound, new stage, dressing rooms, lighting equipment, foyer, and is being reseated and floored. New seating capacity will be 2,420, larger than Orpheum, A new orchestra pit is being installed. Theatre closes June 4 to permit final stage work before reopening June 11. Face-lift is costing close to $200,000 to make house figure as one of the most de luxe in the city.

NAME TALENT SIGNED

Name talent lineup already signed to play the Million Dollar during coming months includes Duke Ellington, Woody Herman, Louis Prima, Lionel Hampton and the Lecuona Cuban Boys. All had previously been booked for the Orpheum. Sherrill Corwin, partner in Metropolitan, will continue to operate both theatres under the new policies.

Mae West's 'Ring Twice' Is Comedy Click at Preem

"Ring Twice Tonight" opened at the Long Beach Municipal auditorium last night for a one-night break-in, revealing a script that is full of corn. It's the golden bantam kind, however, that pays off by the bushel at the box-office. Miss West is up to her old tricks but with a new slant. Instead of the come-on, she is trying to get rid of them. She bats down approximately one dozen suitors. The switch from Miss West's usual lure plus the lines and gags given her make for lots of laughs throughout the evening.

Comedy by Miles Mander, Fred Schiller and Thomas Dunphy has Miss West in the role of an adventuress who is about to marry a young millionheir. From the buildup on her past it appears she has had an unsavory history. It all comes out fine in the end with a star-spangled finish that reveals her as a G-girl. Her maids send out balloons with her cards on them to keep her from being lonely. Result is an assortment of strange characters who show up with a gleam in their eye.

Miss West shows a terrific sense of timing and showmanship. Supporting her are Cleo Desmond and Francesca Rotoli as her maids, Michael Ames, Joe McTurk, Allan Nixon, Harold Bostwick, Don Harvey. Russell Fillmore's direction is very sharp. Rita Glover's setting is in best possible taste. Show undoubtedly will click in its Coast run.

Film Review

Galloping Thunder

(Western with Music)

CAST — Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette, Adelle Roberts, Richard Bailey, Kermit Maynard, Ed Cobb, Ray Bennett, Curt Barrett, John Merton, Nolan Leary and Merle Travis and his Bronco Busters.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post theatre, Hollywood, Cal., May 16, 1946. Running time: 57 MINS.

It all comes up in Splitrock, Arizona, where the ranchers are rounding up wild horses for U.S. Army remounts and a gang of miscreants are doing the U.S. Army dirt by stampeding the steeds in Oro Canyon. That is where Charles Starrett comes in, doubling as Steve Reynolds, a representative of the Arizona Stockmen's Syndicate and the Durango Kid.

Along comes Smiley Burnette, an undertaker, seeking a spot in splitrock, where men die with their boots on, evidently a fertile field for a mortician. The gangsters, figuring that Smiley is Starrett, hop on his neck in the canyon, but Charles gallops onto the scene in time to save Smiley's life. So you know right away who the square guys are, even though the audience is not supposed to know for 57 minutes.

Charles and Smiley go their separate ways and naturally wind up in Splitrock where the town banker, Richard Bailey, is a crook. Everybody in town believes he is an honest guy, including his fiancee, Adelle Roberts, who is the daughter and the heiress of the owner of the Flying T Ranch. Charles, in his role as Steve Reynolds, tells Adelle that her banker boy friend is a louse, but Adelle sticks up for her fiancee and thinks Charles is a louse. This is one case where womanly intuition does a flop.

So there is a fake bank robbery in which Bailey's henchmen do the dirty work while Charles, masquerading as the Durango Kid, cops the loot and goes away from there. Foiled in his own robbery, the banker holds a meeting of the neighboring stockmen, during which the Durango Kid gallops up to the open window and tosses the stolen loot into their midst, with a note accusing Bailey. Even then Adelle won't believe it, although everybody in the audience does. She won't believe Charles when he warns her to send the herd through Wagon Wheel Pass instead of Oro Canyon where Bailey and his mobsters are lurking. The only thing left to do is for Charles to put on his Durango Kid disguise and foil the banker, after a lot of promiscuous shooting, with a good old right-hand swing.

It is a lively western, following all the customary details, with Merle Davis and his Bronco Busters rending music.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Galveston bathing beauties are hanging their heads in shame—or should, according to the story Johnny Weissmuller tells after returning from an appearance at the Texas city's annual Splash Day. Forty of Galveston's best lookers were assembled to accompany Weissmuller on a mock raid on the island. METRO DOUBLES RUSH PRINTS ON 'ATOM ISLAND'

More than 300 prints—twice the usual number—of the new Carey Wilson Special Miniature, "Bikini—the Atom Island," will be distributed by Metro for showing two weeks before historic atomic bomb tests in early July.

Film, all of which was made by the U.S. Navy's official photographers, records dramatic story of evacuation of 167 natives from the tiny atoll in Marshall Islands.

Audience sees and hears Commodore Ben H. Wyatt, USN, make request that island king give up atoll. After natives agree to sacrifice homes for science, they pack belongings and assemble for last church service. Converted to Christianity by New England missionaries generations ago, they sing hymns and recite Lord's Prayer.

Finally, they board an LST for 175-mile trip to Rongerik Island, where Seabees are pictured constructing new and larger dwellings for them.

One-reeler has been produced by Fred Quimby. Carey Wilson authored script and serves as narrator.

MGRS. UNION WILL MEET TOBIN REP. IN FWC BEEF

Meeting of Fox-West Coast managers union board with Ainar Mohn, international representative for Dan Tobin of the Teamsters on the Coast is expected to be called late today or tomorrow to discuss union's beef over Joseph Tuohy joining National Theatres as labor relations head. Mohn is due here today from San Francisco.

Meanwhile, Charles P. Skouras, president of National Theatres and its subsid, F-WC, denied that any deal had been completed as yet for Tuohy to join the circuit. In a press statement, Skouras said:

"Because of my duties with National Theatres have become more complex and time consuming I have had under consideration for some time the appointment of a director of labor relations for National Theatres and Fox-West Coast Theatres. We wanted an outstanding man and have interviewed several candidates. Among them was Mr. Joseph Tuohy, whose qualifications deeply impressed and whom we would like to have in our organization. No arrangements have yet been completed with him as Mr. Tuohy felt obligated to discuss acceptance of the post with officials of his organization, Mr. Dan Tobin and Mr. Dave Beck."

Special luncheon slated for yesterday in circuit's conference chambers, at which Tuohy was to be introduced to district managers and other personnel as the new labor relations chief, was suddenly called off yesterday morning about 11 a.m. District managers, who had scheduled a deep-sea fishing trip for the day, had previously been notified that trip would have to be called off as their presence would be required at the luncheon.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The industrial relations situation is like the weather. Everybody talks about it, but no one can do much about it—except such temporary ineffectualities as raising an umbrella, or shoveling away the snow from the garage. John D. Small's idea that we ought to have a law outlawing strikes for six months was received in the same way. We all recognize that we need uninterrupted production for at least six months or the inflation that will result will be disastrous, beyond the most perfect of OPA's. But the question is: what can you do about it? Passing a law is like passing one against rain for the next six months—or, as Byrd says, like trying to outlaw war. We don't even know, if the railroads and mines are taken over, whether the workers will run the trains and mine the coal. One Brotherhood head has said, "Unless we get the rule changes we want, we won't work, no matter who is our employer" and that means the government, too. We've come to a point in our system of free enterprise when immovable forces are meeting irresistable objects—and John Q. is between both. Or to return to the weather simile: we're caught in one devil of a storm, with the lightning striking, the rain lashing, the mud deep. We'll get out of it somehow, but right now the sun just seems to have forgotten us.

'SURPRISE PARTY' SHOW TAKEN EAST

Lee Cooley, Ruthrauff & Ryan's director of daytime radio, concludes ten-day visit and heads back to NY headquarters on Monday, lugging three audition platters of "Surprise Party," new audience-participation program which debuts for American Home Foods over CBS' Pacific slope hookup on July 1.

TODD MAY PRESENT 'CENTRAL PARK'

Michael Todd yesterday began preparations for his Pilgrimage Theatre and Hollywood Bowl presentations this summer. With "Hamlet" set to open August 17 in the Pilgrimage Theatre, Todd is currently mulling several shows for the Bowl.

Understood that the producer is giving serious consideration to bringing his entire "Up In Central Park" company out here, upon completion of its current run in Chicago this September. If he decides on the latter move, Todd is expected to enlarge the company by an addition of at least 200 performers.

MACHINISTS LOCAL 1185 IS BARRED FROM STUDIOS

The Los Angeles Central Labor Council yesterday round-robined all major film studios with a letter advising that Cinetechnicians' Union 23968 is solely enfranchised by the American Federation of Labor to perform machine work in studios and that AFL members may not handle any equipment which has been worked upon by members of Lodge 1185, International Association of Machinists. Latter organization some time ago withdrew from AFL.

Admonition is plain that Labor Council is calling upon studios to cease hiring Lodge 1185 enrollees, and hint is made they should be fired, albeit invitation is offered to align themselves with Cinetechnicians' Unions. On May 2 the Cinetechnicians posted notices in all studios announcing that AFL had chartered group as an affiliate. Since there have been reports that opposition members were working side-by-side with employes still in good standing with AFL.

By RADIE HARRIS

Virginia Cherrill, tarrying at the St. Regis en route back to London, and still hanging on to her Countess of Jersey title, devastated her former N.Y. pals with the "monocle in her throat." Her Mayfair accent is more British than the Old Vic! Incidentally, the gossips who are trying to revive a romance between Virginia and her former husband, Cary Grant, are on the wrong scent. True, Cary did dine with his ex-wife, but only because she reminds him so much of the blonde who decorates the frame on his dressing room table—Betty Hensel . . . Ingrid Bergman will recuperate from her Mad-hattan whirl at a friend's retreat in the Maine woods. It wasn't until the eve of her departure that Ingrid and Eric Remarque met for the first time to discuss her "Joan Madou" in his "Arch of Triumph." Wonder if either of them have heard the dissenting "remarks" re Bergman's choice of this tres sexy role? . . . Olivia de Havilland, who visited the Cape Playhouse with Burgess Meredith several summers ago, was so intrigued with it that she promised to come back the first season she was free to join the company for a week's engagement. Now, suiting the action to the word, she is just waiting to okay the right vehicle (possibly a trio of the "To-Night at 8:30" cycle) before giving the final nod to Dick Aldrich . . . Although his divorce from Peggy Knudsen doesn't become final for a year, Adrian Samish already has his next bride sniffing orange blossoms—she's a niece of his ABC boss, Ed Noble.

ADD ARRIVALS Sonja Henie at the Pierre . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hell-man at the Gotham . . . Rowland Reed at the Waldorf . . . Lew and Rolli Landers and Phil Harris at the Madison . . . Milton Golden at the Ambassador . . . Jack Benny, Mary Livingston and Dennis Day at Delmonico . . . Ditto Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, who switched from the Madison.

MR. DEEB(S) GOES TO TOWN: Al Deeb, who is N.Y.'s newest and most fabulous host—the Rex St. Cyr of the east coast—entertained at a dinner party for forty five guests at the Copacabana, honoring Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz. Desi, of course, spent most of his time on the bandstand, while "Lucy" spent most of hers playing "Texas Guinan" to Eddie Buzzell, Francis Lederer, Eddie Dowling, Joan Castle, Curly Harris, Al Crippa, Ed Crowley, Gene McHugh, Tom Rogers and the rest of the gang, who were lucky enough to have reservations for this S.R.O. preem. In this, his first return to N.Y. nite life since his discovery at La Martinique some seven years ago, Desi proves that a movie career, marriage, army life and a break-in at a Hollywood cabaret, have all contributed to making him one of the outstanding personalities in the supper club field today. It's a cinch he can stay at the Copa for as long as he's in the mood—and Proser's in the chips. In the interim, he's been deluged with musical comedy offers for next season and he'd love to lend a listening ear (the local boards haven't seen him since "Too Many Girls" back in '39) but there's the problem of what to do with his band—and if you don't think that's a problem, ask Local 802! As for his "Ball" and wife, who is a cuffo attraction to the paying customers at the Copa, ogling her at the ringside every night (where she looks like every movie fan's idea of what a movie star should look like) she says she knows nothing about the report that she is skedded for a p.a. at the Capitol. If she is, she thinks it's polite to wait until she's asked—which hasn't happened yet—and when Marvin Schenck does approach her, it isn't a matter of her four figure salary, but of material, of which she ain't got none—unless she teams up with Desi again in their former act. And since for the two of them, I'm afraid Mr. S. will have to throw in half of Loew's, I think Lucille will just continue her vacation as "Mrs. Desi Arnaz—housewife."

ITEMS DROPPED BY THE BROADWAYSIDE: Martha Scott, en route to L.A., will stop off in Kansas City for a reunion with her family . . . Bill Doll has has flown to the Coast to set up a publicity department for Mike Todd, thereby giving substance to the suspicion that Mike will confine most of his activities to Hollywood next season . . . When "Merry Wives of Windsor" winds up its tour in L.A., the Theatre Guild may follow it with "Winter's Tale," if Florence Reed, Henry Daniel, Jessie Royce Landis, Geraldine Brooks (now at Warners) and others of the original Broadway cast are available . . . Correction please: Gregory Peck will appear at the Cape Playhouse the week of July 8, not June 8 . . . At Phil Baker's second anniversary party, the highlight of the very gay evening was the presence of Aileen Stanley, the original "Victor Girl," now a grey-haired lady with glasses, who sang all the old time favorites she used to sing when she and Phil were vaude troupers together . . . The opening of "Uncle Vanya" brought out another distinguished audience for the "Old Vic." Spotted in the lobby jam: Lilliam Gish (who watched Margaret Leighton re-create the role she played in the Jed Harris production sixteen years ago), Nedda Harrigan (wonder what memories flashed through her mind as she recalled this same production, in which her late husband, Walter Connolly, played "Uncle Vanya"?), Kent Smith, mobbed by the clawtograph fans while W. Somerset Maugham passes by unrecognized, Libby Holman greeting her old pal, Howard Dietz, Virginia Gillmore and Yul Brinner, being congratulated on their impending "blessed event," the John C. Wilsons and the Gilbert Millers, the Richard Hallidays (Mary Martin) with the Johnny Byrams, Nina Vale, Boyd Crawford, Dorothy Massey, Bianca Strook, Jack Kapp, Valentina and the Garson Kanins, again with Vivien Leigh, who again looked soooo beautiful in a black satin draped cape with hood to match. (Aside to all Hollywood columnists: in spite of widely circulated rumors, Vivien is not available to replace Peggy Cummins in "Forever Amber." She is DEFINITELY returning to London with Larry Olivier immediately on the conclusion of the Old Vic's six-week engagement here.)

JESSEL DICKERS FOR VARIETY CLUB FILM RIGHTS

New York, May 16.—George Jessel is dickering with Bob O'Donnell, Chief Barker of Variety Clubs of America, on filming the club's story either as a 20th-Fox release or independent production. Most of the profits would be turned back for charity. According to O'Donnell, however, Paramount presently has the rights to the story through arrangements by Paul Short of Interstate when latter was Chief Barker. If Paramount fails to do anything with the story, it may go to Jessel. Both Metro and Jules Levy had formerly considered making a picture about the Variety Clubs.

At second day of the Variety Club convention, members confirmed William McGraw as executive director at a salary of $12,000 plus $8,000 traveling expenses and $5,000 secretarial expenses. Money is to come from the "Annual Journal" receipts.

Members selected Los Angeles as the first choice for the 1947 convention, dependent upon availability of rooms. Second choice is Miami. If the latter, it will be sponsored by the Atlanta tent.

Convention also voted to force all Tents running women's auxiliaries to disband them as a violation of the constitution, which calls for a strictly stag organization.

DUMONT FLAYS FCC ON NOTICE FOR INQUIRY HERE

DuMont. Counsel for the labs pointed out that it was impossible for him to be in Los Angeles on such short notice, and called on the Commission to forego any inquiry into Paramount interests in DuMont until some later time.

Although the Commission voted to rake over the Paramount interests at special meeting May 2, the order of inquiry did not go out of FCC offices until 13 days later. Most of the Washington lawyers in the Los Angeles hearing had already left town for the coast.

As a result of the faux-pas, Col. Wm. Roberts, DuMont counsel, said here today he had been assured FCC would not take up question of the pix company's "minority" interests in the company. It was suggested to the commission that the whole question of Par's holdings could more properly be subject of separate hearing before the full bench of six commissioners.

The DuMont opposition, filed at FCC today, said the Commission's offer "came as a complete surprise" while disavowing completely "any control of DuMont by Paramount," company claimed its interests might be "materially and adversely affected unless fully represented in any such investigation or hearing."

Such a question should properly be brought up, the opposition declared, only in hearing on Dumont requests for television stations in Pittsburgh, Cleveland or Cincinnati. The company recently won a construction permit for a Washington station and commish went into its stock ownership fully at that time, it was claimed.

DuMont added that it had testified at the Washington hearing on a new financing plan which had effect of substantially reducing Par's stock holdings in the company. At the same time, Dumont had told the FCC of circumstances under which Par's Class B holdings and directors were to reduce participation in the company's management.

Inflation note — "Lassie," canine star, was originally purchased by Rudd Weatherwax for $10. And yesterday Weatherwax said he had to pay $150 for a dog to act as stand-in for her in Metro's "Courage of Lassie."

SEYMOUR Nebenzal expects big foreign market intake for his United Artists production, "The Chase," which starts today. Michel Morgan, femme lead, is a strong box-office lure overseas, particularly in France and England, and Alexis Minotis, seen in one of top roles, was a leading man in Greek National Theatre. Minotis and his wife, Katina Paxinou, were known as Lunt and Fontanne of Greece. Nina Koschetz, opera singer in cast, also has marquee value throughout Europe. Nebenzal himself still carries name weight in France and other European countries for his production of "Mayerling."

UNDERSTOOD that service men and civilians, all plenty experienced, working with Armed Forces Radio Service are doing a burn over introduction of film directors to Svengali film luminaries being used on AFRS programs. Filmsters didn't need special coddling before, it's complained, nor does innovation make for added cooperation of film industry.

The French Key

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE of a Walter Colmes production. Director, Walter Colmes. Screenplay, Frank Gruber, from his novel of same title. Photography, Jockey Feindel. Set decorations, Syd Moore. Musical score, Alexander Laszlo. Editor, Robert Jahns. Sound, Frank Dyke.

CAST — Stars Albert Dekker. Features Mike Mazurki, Evelyn Ankers, John Eldredge, Frank Fenton, Selmer Jackson, Byron Foulger, Joe DeRita. Supporting players, Marjorie Manners, David Gorcey, Michael Branden, Sammy Stein, Alan Ward, Walter Soderling, Emmett Vogan.

PREVIEWED in Hollywood, Calif., May 17, 1946. Running time: 67 MINS.

"The French Key" starts out with a likely mystery premise which is lost track of early in its unfoldment, leaving spectator in almost constant state of bewilderment which windup fails to clarify. Film has a few good moments, and there is certain degree of suspense, but general plot confusion and carelessness in writing reduces picture to very ordinary status, just another program feature with little to recommend it.

This is first of the Johnny Fletcher series Walter Colmes will produce and direct for Republic, with Albert Dekker set as private detective, and Mike Mazurki his strong-arm sidekick. Pair get themselves in a muddle in opening sequence, when a murdered man is found in a hotel room they're locked out of by a French key. Story takes up Dekker's efforts to clear them by tracking down the murderer, but how he does it still remains a mystery after film ends.

Cast works hard and gives as convincing performances as script will allow. Dekker makes role of Johnny Fletcher a rugged character and Mazurki provides a good foil for him. Evelyn Ankers comes in for romantic aspect of film, and others topping cast include John Eldredge, Selmer Jackson, Frank Fenton and Joe DeRita.

Colmes' direction does little to help picture, but he did manage to instill an exciting poolroom fight sequence. On production end, he got good values. Frank Gruber scripted film from his own novel.

Rep's Western Sales Meeting On Today

Republic sales meeting of Western District exchange managers and salesmen gets under way at the studio today. Meet is first of series of three regional sales conclaves, with other two gatherings slated for Chicago and New York. Prexy Herbert J. The delegates will meet studio's entire roster of contract stars and players at a special reception from 3:30 until 6 p.m. in the Republic Music auditorium.

Tele Firms Girding For FCC License Battle

Hoped-for withdrawal of another television license applicant was not forthcoming over weekend. Eight remaining station-seekers were at wire at 10 a.m. this morning in Federal Communications Commission offices to plead their cases. Usually social weekend of radioites was forsaken for huddles of local and visiting execs, legalites and engineers, mapping battle plans and pitches to be made.

Hearings are expected to last all day of estimated week it will require to hear cases. Opening sessions were preceded by usual pre-trial conferences of all attorneys and commish staffers to establish time limits, to set evidence rules and other agreements on procedure. FCC members want to conclude hearings by end of week, though preparations have been made for continuance until end of month. It's possible that engineering hearings will be held in Washington, D.C., following show cause sessions here.

Over weekend following names were added to list of those who will appear for various interests: Edward Hayes, television rep for Hughes Tool Co.; Louis Caldwell, Washington attorney; Eugene Overton, local attorney; Curtis Mason and H. L. Blatterman, engineers; A. E. Hamilton, auditor, and G. W. Curran, designing engineer, for KFI.

Color-hawking Columbia Broadcasting System threw its final damper on events with release of last-minute warning Saturday that all concerned should see video through CBS-championed rose-tinted lenses. Teaser, addressed to no person but to "National Broadcasting Co., Hollywood," came just as NBC biggies were huddling. It's presentation caused humorous interruption. Note said:

"Whatever your television philosophy you will be interested in the attached report of a very important prophecy by an outstanding figure on the American manufacturing scene. (Signed) Leonard Lowman, v-p. Color television will be in 'relatively widespread use' within the next 18 months in the opinion of Western Electric Corporation's Walter Evans, v-p in charge of the company's radio activities."

Full Investigation Of Par Television

Washington, May 19.—Except for the affiliation with DuMont Laboratories, the Federal Communications Commission will proceed with full probe of Paramount holdings in all companies seeking video outlets, at Los Angeles' television hearings which open tomorrow.

Acting on protest of DuMont that its attorneys could not attend L.A. sessions, FCC ruled on Friday that Par's interest in that firm "may" be the subject of a hearing later here. At that time DuMont will be given opportunity to place additional evidence in the official record to support contention that the film company in no way controls operations of DuMont.

THOMAS PLANS PRC SALES MEET

Harry Thomas, PRC Pictures prexy, leaves for New York this week end to ready plans for a national sales convention of the distribution organization. Participating in the projected meet will be reps from outfit's 28 exchanges and three franchise holders.

Sales topper has been busy here the past three weeks lining up company's 1946-47 program. Understood that Thomas has been discussing continuance of package deals with producer Sig Neufeld and the Alexander-Stern combo. Thomas also has been talking with other indie producers on similar package-deal setups.

Jean Hersholt has been nominated for his tenth term as prexy of the Motion Picture Relief Fund. Other nominations to be voted on at organization's annual meeting, July 7, include Ralph Morgan, first veepee; Lucile Gleason, second veepee; Sol Lesser, third veepee; Charles Bickford, fourth veepee; George Bagnall, treasurer, and Wilma Bashor, executive secretary. Nominated as trustees are Charles Brackett, John Larkin, Frances Goodrich, Douglas MacLean, Henry O'Neill, Charles G. Rosher, Morgan Wallace, Mary McCall, Jr., Reeves Espy, Lloyd Corrigan and Charles R. Rogers.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

For sometime we've been worrying about the Near East because it has been one place where the interests of the Soviet and the western powers meet and conflict. That's why the papers this morning play up the reported fighting between Iran central government and Azerbaijan forces. The clashes are the natural culmination of Iranian central government reluctance to give autonomy to Azerbaijan, because Teheran realizes that this northern part of the country as the main part economically could soon become the dominant section if given autonomy. It could run Iran, be the tail that wags the dog. Since the fighting has begun, the Soviet might move her troops back again into Iran with valid reason. However it is more likely the Soviet will maintain hands-off officially, while she unofficially aids Azerbaijan with weapons and even military leadership. Iran could become another Spain. But it will instead prove another real challenge to the United Nations, and to the leadership qualities of the United States.

PREVIEWED at studio, May 17, 1946. Running time: 81 MINS.

"The Walls Came Tumbling Down" is a class whodunit which builds in interest from opening sequence. Convincing set of characters realistically directed in a story which holds water endows film with box-office potential. Film has been accorded showmanship handling throughout, and is credit to both producers and cast.

Lee Bowman and Marguerite Chapman are co-starred in this Albert J. Cohen production, which tells narrative of a Broadway columnist turning sleuth to find murderer of a priest who reared him. Motivating plot are two Bibles, which contain clue to where an invaluable painting is hidden, search for which is made by two different groups, Miss Chapman and her associates and a criminal ring.

Screenplay by Wilfrid H. Pettitt is craftsmanship piece of writing which Lothar Mendes in his direction drains of melodramatic possibilities. Characters are made believable through legitimate entry into plot and behaving in a logical manner. As producer, Cohen has assured no illogicalities in story and has packed film with values.

Photography by Charles Lawton, Jr., is above average and musical score by Marlin Skiles accentuates melodramatic interest. Other technical credits are correspondingly effective.

Both Bowman and Miss Chapman contribute neat portrayals and are strongly supported by George Macready and Edgar Buchanan in top roles. Other standouts include J. Edward Bromberg, Lee Patrick and Jonathan Hale, and Noel Cravat is in for menacing bit.

HOUSE PASSES PLAN FOR GOVT. FILM LIBRARY

Washington, May 19.—Library of Congress narrowly squeaked through in the House Friday with its plan to provide a general film service and film clearing house for all Government agencies.

Rep. John Tabor (R., N.Y.) waved a pamphlet from the International Film Foundation, Inc., of New York, which he announced listed eight "Communistic" films. Last page of the pamphlet said: "All inquiries regarding any of these Government films should be addressed to Mr. Luther Evans, Librarian of Congress." House was then in the process of approving an additional $75,000 for the Un-American Activities Committee and things looked black for the Library, whose budget came up a little later.

However, Rep. Emmett O'Neal (D., Ky.) said he had checked into the matter with Evans who denied any knowledge of the pamphlet or of the Foundation.

"Not a single one of the eight films is in the Library's possession," Evans wrote in a letter which was introduced in the Congressional Record. "The films are not known to Mr. John G. Brey, Director of our Motion Picture Project or to me. They have never been mentioned, so far as I can determine, in any correspondence carried on by an officer of the Library."

P.S. — The Bill was passed unchanged.

"SENSATIONAL" is the word for the drama ... in

The KILLERS
A UNIVERSAL RELEASE

JUST FOR VARIETY

THE GRAPEVINE: Kraft isn't nearly as mournful over losing Bing Crosby after listening to the reception Eddie Duchin got in his first broadcast over Kraft Music Hall. And the guest star, Doodles Weaver, who couldn't round first base in Hollywood, was a sensation on his first coast-to-coast show. He's doing all right as a night club entertainer, too . . . Metro's bill for "The Yearling" will come to about $6,000,000, including the false start made five years ago with Spencer Tracy in one of the leads . . . When Mike Todd's production of "Hamlet" opens at the Pilgrimage theatre August 17, don't be surprised if Jennifer Jones plays the role of Ophelia . . . Eager to obtain an initial reaction away from the picture-wise Southern California audiences, David O. Selznick is considering a Florida previewing of "Duel in the Sun" . . . Anne Lehr, whose Hollywood Guild Canteen has sheltered more than 2,000,000 servicemen, is rallying support for her current campaign before the Los Angeles Regional Planning Commission for extension of her zoning exemption permit . . . On their trip east, Joan Fontaine and William Dozier will be reunited with her sister, Olivia de Havlliand, and mother, Lillian Fontaine, at his mother's Trenton, N.J., home . . . Ralph Richardson, the Old Vic player now causing NY drama critics to drool into their typewriters, had Hollywood drooling too. Turned down a dozen offers from Hollywood, including one from Enterprise for a top role in "Arch of Triumph," before signing a four-picture contract with Sir Alexander Korda.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Phoebe Hearst, granddaughter of William Randolph Hearst and daughter of George, will marry Nacio Herb Brown, Jr., Hollywood songplugger, any day now . . . Incidentally The Chief is conferring with three of his top men—Ward Greene, head of King Features; Seymour Berkson, general manager of International News Service, and Joseph Gortatowsky—at his Santa Monica beach house . . . That was really a gun battle Warners staged for "Cloak and Dagger." In the sham battle between SS and the OSS (that O makes a big difference!) 21,000 rounds of ammunition were exploded . . . Lucien Ballard, cameraman on "Bella Donna," and Andre De Toth are collaborating on a screen vehicle for their wives, Merle Oberon and Veronica Lake, who have never appeared in a film together but figure they'd make a good contrast . . . Sassiety Dept.: Lot of film people will turn out for the Elias Kanarek exhibition at Francis Taylor's galleries tonight, with cocktails an added attraction. Charlie Butterworth and Thornton Delehanty were among the guests at Natalie Schafer's Sunday breakfast party. June Haver and Bob Hutton, Herbert Marshall and Boots Mallory at Ciro's. Philip Reed is doing the night spots with Alma Maison, who happens to look just like Barbara Hutton . . . Ann Sheridan will take in Cuba before going to New York for the Broadway premiere of "One More Tomorrow," in which she is starred.

CALL SHEET: RORY CALHOUN started a new gold rush the other day, frenzied prospectors being his fellow players on "No Trespassing," locationing at Sonora. They all quit acting when Calhoun, who was a miner before he went thespian, yelled "Gold!" and displayed a handful of sand speckled with shiny, golden particles. Director Delmer Daves, a minerologist of parts himself, halted the gold rush by asking Calhoun whether he filed the exciting yellow specks off the plumbing or a spitoon. The actor grinned, and admitted a piece of brass pipe was the source of his "gold" . . . LILLIAN HARMER KAEBER'S death last week closed the final chapter on the 36-year-old friendship between herself and the late May Robson. They met while both were legit actresses and were inseparable until Miss Robson's death a few years ago . . . NINA ROSS, mother of Greer Garson, is continuing her screen career with a speaking part in Metro's "Lady in the Lake." She appeared in "Undercurrent" but had no lines . . . DAVE ROSE will conduct his original composition "Waukegan Concerto" for the first time on his Holiday for Music airer over CBS May 29. Novelty was written in honor of Waukegan's famed son, Jack Benny . . . VAN JOHNSON traded autographed pictures with Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York . . . TURHAN BEY is still stationed on Guam but made appearances in Tokyo, Okinawa and Pekin with an entertainment unit . . . ALAN LADD is maintaining his fan mail record of 28,000 letters a week at Paramount, though "The Blue Dahlia" is only his third picture to be released in the past three years.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: J. Arthur Rank, brave fellow, is invading Ireland. He's adding to his theatre interests, recently acquiring two key houses in Dublin and others in the suburban area . . . The psychological whodunit cycle is being followed by satire cycle on the same subject. Latest to kid the celluloid wierdies is F. Hugh Herbert, whose "Triple Horror Bill" appears in the next issue of Cosmopolitan. Story concerns a middle-aged character who goes off the deep end from seeing too many horror pictures, plans the perfect crime only to have his plot boomerang . . . Ann Savage received a letter from a GI stationed on a lonely Pacific island saying, "You are my favorite pin-up because you arouse your last name in me" . . . Jean Marshall, Paramount actress, will not be asked to bring her favorite musical instrument with her on "The Emperor Waltz" location trip to Jasper National Park. She plays the tuba . . . Oh, for the life of an A.P. man! Gene Hansaker, of the Hollywood staff, interviewed Virginia Welles at the Studio Club, intrepidly asked to inspect the upper premises, where no man had trod before. Permission was granted after the upper floors were alerted, and Hansaker came back alive with his story . . . Anita Ellis went to a specialist in dermatology with a mysterious rash which had been bothering her for weeks. "Have you a dog?" the doctor asked the worried singer. "Yes," she said. "He has fleas and you have fleabites. I would advise you to sprinkle him with—D.D.T."

SINATRA, 'HOUSE' HITS TAX SNAG IN CANADA

Deal currently is in work to turn proceeds of Canadian showing of "The House I Live In" to Kiwanis Club, to be used for organization's activities in helping under-privileged children throughout Dominion. This is juvenile delinquency short which Frank Ross produced, Mervyn LeRoy directed, Frank Sinatra starred in and RKO is distributing, all on non-profit basis.

Hitch which is holding up completion of deal is Dominion government's regulations requiring taxation of all proceeds from a film. Committee which governs distribution of all profits of short to needy organizations stipulates specifically that all such contributions be tax-exempt. Kiwanis officials in Canada now are trying to iron out this snag.

If and when deal goes through, Kiwanis can expect tidy sum for from 12 to 18 months, time required to exhaust earning power of short in Canada.

LIGHT AND AIRY

BY DON SEARLE
(Hitch-hiking for Jack Hellman)

It isn't every day one gets the opportunity to reach for a Pancho Orango (or are they Uppman Coronas?), scratch the back of his noggin, and prepare himself to peck out a thousand typewritten words for a vast and avid audience.

Nor is it as simple as falling off a log—or working on radio schedules for the period covered by daylight saving time—or summer production—or new building plans.

That last, incidentally, is a subject we are asked about almost every day. People want to know "when" and "where." Frankly, we, too, will be happy when the answers to those queries are available. In the meantime it can be taken for granted we are giving the subject plenty of attention. We know, and leading "cuttysarkers" doubtless will guess, that when ABC comes forth with its new home every effort will have been made to present to Hollywood the finest radio plant possible to create.

Summer Production already is taking definite shape, with the Ford summer replacement program looming as one of the best bets for the hot weather broadcasting season in Hollywood. Fine music in a light classical vein, Alfred Drake as singing emcee, and rising young motion picture vocalovelies (isn't that what a columnist would call them?) from RKO, Paramount, Twentieth-Century Fox and other studios, will do the honors.

CHAIN Breaks . . . While the new programs get their summer tryouts a nationwide experiment by ABC to overcome the problems of daylight time scheduling will be getting its acid test. One of radio's worst operational headaches always has been the great rejuggling of network schedules when New York and Chicago, two of the nation's three principal originating centers, switch to daylight. This year ABC vice-president Charles Rynd conceived a plan which permits the maintenance of practically all programs in the same time zones the year 'round. Briefly, it consists of broadcasting network shows at the time they are to be released on the eastern seaboard, and transcribing them at the same time for playback an hour later in Pacific Coast, Mountain and Central Zones. Not only should it simplify the problems of stations, but listeners are enabled to locate their favorite ABC programs in their usual time slots without having to check and recheck radio schedules. We believe it to be a great step forward in radio scheduling.

The network's Hollywood production during the past year has been highly interesting and varied, with many new programs. Some of them undoubtedly will be kilocycling around for a long time to come, and in this category one must place shows like "Bride and Groom" and "Dark Venture." Many others are bound to be heard from in a list which includes the new "Bill Thompson" opus, "I Deal in Crime" with Bill Gargan, "Al Pearce," "Win, Place and Show," and the new daily pickup from in front of the Brown Derby titled "Hollywood and Vine." Helping to make the past few months busy ones for all departments, and exciting and interesting ones for fans and dialers, have been Paul Whiteman's Radio Hall of Fame and Forever Tops (now back in New York), the Alan Young variety series, Sammy Kaye's arrival for two coast-to-coasters weekly, Theatre Guild's visit to the Pacific Coast, addition of Lone Ranger to ABC wavelengths, and a pair of topnotch newcomers aired from San Francisco studios—Bob Wills' western variety offering and Sunday night's Enchantment half hour.

Hitch hikes . . . Headed by President Mark Woods and "veepee" Robert Kintner, five ABC network officials will be in Hollywood to attend the television-FM hearings starting today. An excellent site has been located by ABC on the summit of Mt. Wilson . . : Most important network acquisition of many months is the purchase of all stock of the King-Trendle Broadcasting Corp. of Detroit, which owns WXYZ there as well as station WOOD, Grand Rapids, and the Michigan network. Subject to FCC approval, of course . . . The general public as well as the trade was interested when Edward J. Noble, chairman of the board, announced a plan for public interest in the ownership of ABC through a stock offering, details for which are now being worked out.

And one closing thought. If it were possible to wear the more than 50,000 hats received in the great Breneman-Hopper hat contest, I'd tip them all in Jack Hellman's direction, for writing a swell column day in and day out. And believe me, I'd much rather read it than write it. But many thanks for the buggy ride.

Andy Russell In Johnny Mercer Spot

Andy Russell will assume Johnny Mercer's singing spot on "Hit Parade" program on June 15. Currently featured vocalist on Joan Davis' show, Russell will go to New York to board Lucky Strike airer after present affiliation fades off ozone for summer with May 27 broadcast. Mercer will be leaving "Parade" after 13 weeks, chiefly due to fact he wants to return to Coast and administrative duties at Capitol Records, of which he is prexy.

Vet act last week tried to negotiate release from pact with coffee account to seek a Sunday night spotting with another sponsor. When deal didn't jell, the comics amicably agreed to work another season for sponsor in same Thursday night NBC niche. Prime reason B & A sought release was to dodge that competition put up against them by CBS' "Suspense" dramas.

but the project will be undertaken.

U. S. Senators Claude Pepper and Warren Magnusson spoke at the feed, giving the Clubs tributes for humanitarian endeavors. One of the evening's highlights was O'Donnell's announcement that the Tulsa Tent won the year's award for its work in promoting interracial solidarity between white and Negro peoples.

BENNY, JESSEL FUN

Jack Benny and George Jessel lent humorous touches with their speeches. Benny remarked he wanted to become an indie producer but his radio program and working under other film producers prevented. He added he still has hopes, but probably won't get around to it for some time because this summer he either is going to Europe or Far East to entertain troops.

Kidding on the square, Benny remarked he hopes some day to see on a marquee: "Jack Benny presents Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in 'Road to Grossingers'." His references to Jack Warner drew loud guffaws, especially the remark that he resented anyone, including Hope, being termed "America's No. 1 Comedian," because it was unfair to Warner.

GAGS ON WARNER JOKES

Stating that Warner was a great guy as well as his boss, Benny said "it's a pleasure to be suspended by him." He gagged he has yet to go to Warner's home when Warner doesn't try to tell the joke about two Jews getting on a streetcar. "If all his jokes were laid end to end, they'd lay end to end," Benny concluded. Jessel greatest cackle-getter was the statement he had grown up with Walter Winchell and Eddie Cantor, but now didn't know what had happened to them. "I guess they just didn't have the stuff; they're probably with some cloak-and-suit firm now."

VOTE IN OFFICERS

On Friday the convention re-elected O'Donnell Chief Barker for another year. Other officers voted in: Carter Barron, first assistant; C. J. one-day run at the UA several weeks ago, before police seizure of the print. "The Outlaw" broke all house records. Publicity that has resulted from police action and subsequent trial is expected to make the new opening an even larger grosser.

GENESIS BACKS VERDICT

Presiding Judge Twain Michelsen of Municipal Court cited from Genesis, the United States Supreme Court and quoted Lord Denham and Justice Cardoza in ruling that, as a matter of law, the delineation and portrayal of the film did not come within the provisions of Section 741 of the Police Code. The 2,500-word decision finding Allister Dunn, theatre manager, not guilty and releasing the picture represents a terrific victory for Hughes and his attorneys, Jerry Geisler and Jake W. Erlich.

After touching on the difficulties which the peoples of the world have gone through in their hopeless efforts to define what is right and what is wrong, Judge Michelsen castigated the San Francisco Police Department's incompetency for pouncing on the picture in 1946 while permitting it to play approximately four months in 1943 without interference.

JUDGE WAXES FLOWERY

In his instructions to the jury for a directed verdict, the judge said: "I say, on simple reflection, that I cannot bring myself to the legal conclusion that the picture which you and I have looked upon has left you ladies and gentlemen of the jury in a state of moral suspense, in a state of mental lewdness or licentiousness, bewitched and seduced. I cannot bring myself to the legal conclusion that you, after viewing 'The Outlaw' have suddenly changed your code of morals and ethics, that you, the gentlemen of this jury, have resolved to become adulterers and home breakers.

"That you, the ladies of this jury, have decided that you would under some opportune and clandestine moment abandon your hearths, your children and your husbands to lie in the bed of some invalided or dying man for one last moment of carnal or lustful experience. It is my considered opinion that no civilized community would tolerate such a doctrine of morals and morality, but that, in this case, is the way you are expected to feel under the legal theory of the complaint on file in the case."

VERDICT DIRECTED

Closing his charge to jury, Judge Michelsen said: "In the light of the legal authority which I have cited, which are but a few of the many available to counsel for both the people and the defense, I feel impelled and constrained to grant the motion for a directed verdict interposed by the defendant through his counsel. I therefore direct you ladies and gentlemen of the jury to retire to the room awaiting you and that you there appoint one of your number to act as your foreman and then and there have your foreman sign the form of verdict which I have had prepared by a clerk of this court finding the defendant not guilty."

Get More Space For 'Golden Boy'

Geller Theatre Workshop has leased Hampshire Guild Playhouse for presentation of "Golden Boy," starting tonight through June 2. Heavy demand for seats during run of the play at Geller, caused the switch in theatres, to enable longer playing time and increase seating.

JESSEL CUTS FIVE DAYS OFF P.A.

New York, May 19.—George Jessel will terminate his personal appearance on Roxy stage Thursday night so he can head for Chicago and do a turn as toastmaster Saturday at dinner at which Jack Kirsch will be inaugurated prez of Allied States Association. Additionally, Darryl Zanuck has asked Jessel to return to 20th-Fox studio as soon as possible, and after the feed the comic-producer will speed to Hollywood.

Irving Lesser, managing director of Roxy, stated today that he had wanted Jessel to continue full third week at house, but that release freely was given under circumstances for Jessel to cut away five days earlier. Teamed with "Dark Corner," Jessel drew $92,000 first week and will get a very steady $75,000 on second stanza, ending Tuesday. Roxy, which usually changes bills on Wednesdays, will open "Do You Love Me?", which Jossel produced, on Friday with Count Basie band the podium attraction.

Denial was handed to MPRF for $300,000 project for a new building with living quarters and 18 hospital beds. Slapsy Maxie's was denied $50,000 building improvements grant, which would have enlarged kitchen facilities and redecorated the nitery.

Bowl was granted $65,000 worth of improvements in the interest of public safety and because no critical materials were being used. Plan is to rebuild concrete retaining wall, steps and supports for seats.

METRO BUYS OUT ROBBINS FOR 673G IN FEUD

which he was veepee and managing director. Loew-Metro, which heretofore held 51 per cent of stock, paid out total of $673,000 gross in order to permit Robbins his half million net after federal and state taxes.

Robbins' impatience with Metro's attitude on eastern exploitation of songs reached a climax many years ago when he and Louis B. Mayer feuded and Robbins was barred off Hollywood lot as result. A protracted series of arguments resulted in Robbins confining his Metro contact to talks with the late David Bernstein, who at that time was veepee and treasurer of Loew, Inc., and with Harry Link occasionally sitting in as special liaison, to concentrate on Metro filmusical songs' insertion into Feist catalog.

ROBBINS' ULTIMATUM

Of late, Robbins' differences with Metro increased, especially in dealings with attorney Julian T. Abeles, who originally set up Loew's buy into Robbins' companies. Abeles, a director in firms working on behalf of Loew interest, disapproved of many of Robbins' managerial moves. Recently Robbins told Charlie Moskowitz, with whom he dealt after death of Bernstein, that "either I run the music companies or Abeles does." Statement started a series of recriminations which culminated in Robbins announcing his willingness to be bought out.

Among salient issues over which Robbins and Abeles lately have brawled was Robbins' desire to cede television rights of songs to ASCAP, which Abeles opposed on grounds Loew's should have full jurisdiction on matter, not Robbins.

ABELES SUSTAINED

Another matter of disagreement was Robbins' wish to make British and Australian tie-ups with two publishers whom Abeles considered were careless about their royalty commitments. A showdown argument before Loew veepees Moskowitz and Lew Friedman sustained Abeles and speeded Robbins' exit apparently.

Robbins' stock is now in escrow with Chase National Bank along with all necessary papers relating to his release as an officer and director of music firms. Loew, Inc., will act formally upon his resignation at June 6 board meeting. Abe Olman, general manager of Robbins-Feist-Miller, will handle reins Robbins has dropped, at least for interim.

"I have been instructed by the Executive Board to notify each major studio that the Central Labor Council is calling upon all members of the AFL employed in the motion picture industry to refuse to work with any employees performing machine work . . . not members of the AFL. We are further calling upon the membership to refuse to handle any such equipment . . ."

W. J. Bassett, secretary, in a letter May 14, 1946 to studios.

A REPLY IN KIND

TO THE MEN WHO JUST CALLED

HOLLYWOOD'S LATEST 'STRIKE'

So you and the Executive Board of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council have ordered our members out on strike, Mr. Bassett.

Ours and all other AFL members in studios.

That's around 25,000 people, Mr. Bassett. A lot of people.

You order them out in a telegram which we have yet to receive, but which shows up in papers that like to knife unions, then watch them bleed. Papers such as you have used when attacking honest, progressive AFL leaders and when calling strikes illegal before the strikes had ever been called at all, or even discussed.

Why weren't we, one of the many AFL studio unions involved, consulted before you issued your order?

Why weren't our members consulted?

We, Mr. Bassett, were members of the Central Labor Council here long before you were made its secretary. We, Mr. Bassett, help pay your salary.

Instead, under some czarist cloak which fits no better than the flag your board likes to drape itself with, you went over the heads of the unions involved and you ordered those unions' members "to refuse to work" with certain other studio employees.

You also told them "to refuse to handle" any equipment those other employees worked on—those untouchables.

In doing so, your board assumed an authority we thought only the international presidents of unions exercise.

This was last Tuesday. Studios should be closed now, tight as a bigot's mind. But are they?

It appears that your board, and some of the board's close saddlepals who threaten to run this union out of the industry, have overstepped their authority. And not for the first time.

It was your board which on Feb. 16 last rushed into the Hearst press with condemnation of a "Hollywood strike" which hadn't even been discussed up until then. You personally got off some fine, upstanding, true blue 105 per cent American quotes about "irresponsible" labor leaders.

After talking to Willie Hearst your boys talked to Roy Brewer. Roy, too, got off some fine quotes about "irresponsible." Only his were 110 per cent.

Both cries were false alarms. There was no strike. None was planned. Nor was there a strike planned when MGM's Eddie Mannix sent his scare telegrams saying machinists would walk out the night of April 17.

The cast of characters responsible for these false alarms is getting tiresome, Mr. Bassett, especially when the troupe is seen to include labor leaders who spend much of their time reviling other labor men far more reputable than they; also so-called leaders who owe their jobs only to international appointment, and gentlemen said about to give up labor posts so they can enjoy the fruits of working for The Boss.

We out here in Hollywood, at least, are getting wise to some of the individuals who, pulling strings in your organization, usurp the powers of organizations and call on us to jump. We think the call will be repeated — but in full reverse.

CINECOLOR WINS NOD AT METRO

Enterprise Refused OK On 100G Stage

"Duel in the Sun" was sneak preview in Bayonne, New Jersey, by David O. Selznick, who reported back to the studio yesterday that picture will now go as is, without cuts or additions. Print was shipped back to Selznick, who is now in the east, last week for its trial screening. Film hit the prescribed running time of two hours and 35 minutes right on the nail.

Hughes, 'Outlaw' Steal Tele Hearing Spotlight

Howard Hughes, who has been stealing top attention in films, did it again yesterday in television—and again with his "Outlaw." His reps opened television hearings in Federal building. Highlight of day's testimony, which centered principally around programming, was admission by Hughes' television exec that "Outlaw" was unfit video fare. Such material would never be considered for aired pictures, he admitted.

Matter came up during cross-examination by Louis Caldwell, attorney for KFI. Efforts of Hughes' attorney, Fred W.

New York, May 20.—Charles Einfeld, David Loew and other Enterprise toppers began discussions today on a distribution deal for the new company. Looks like Universal is the best bet. Seton Miller Gets Release From Par

Seton I. Miller yesterday asked for and received release from his writer-producer ticket at Paramount. His deal started with the studio late in 1942. His last chore for Paramount was "California."

Olivier Bats Either Way In Old Vic Doubleheader

New York, May 20.—Sophocles' tragedy "Oedipus" in the Old Vic Company's double-header at the Century tonight was so terrifying and awesome as to be a brilliant tour de force. Sheridan's comedy "The Critic" was tiresome and anti-climactic, but showed Laurence Olivier's versatility as a foppish playwright in contrast to his powerful portrayal of a foredoomed king in the Greek tragedy. The double bill clinches Olivier's claim to being the greatest actor on Broadway this season.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

PARAMOUNT'S "O.S.S." will replace "The Blue Dahlia" in all bookings where latter film has not yet played in a move by the company to rush its film dealing with the Office of Strategic Services on the market. Shuffle will give Paramount a considerable edge on "Cloak and Dagger," a forthcoming Warners release which also concerns strategic services work. "O.S.S." opens at the Gotham in New York Saturday and is slated to open locally following current run of "The Virginian." Rush has brought about considerable pressure to prepare advertising copy and trailers, NY opening having been plugged by trailer instead of usual advance screen ballyhoo. "O.S.S." originally was slated for release in the late summer and early fall but was moved ahead to take advantage of topical interest and reportedly to beat competitors on the market.

WITH Federal Communications Commission persuading, two of town's indie stations are altering their race results spot announcements. KWKW and KGFJ will discontinue interruption of musical and other programs to give gee-gee dope as heretofore widely practiced. Bookie banter will be confined to regular sports programs, possibly news shows or announced at given times such as every half hour, etc. KWKW admits FCC encouragement and undertaking of move, while KGFJ states it is "improving its service." Others, too, are reportedly seeing the light—of the FCC's now famous "Blue Book."

PARADISE Found is Metro's designation for a location discovered for "Lucky Star," the studio's first film in Cinecolor. It's a hidden valley found by director Andrew Marton while scouting sites for his company by airplane. Access to the spot is almost as difficult as Shangri-La, however, with men and equipment having to be lowered by crane from a railroad track bordering the rim of the canyon. Marton gained film recognition by being the only man to film an almost-Shangri-La, a hidden monastery in Tibet.

BALLYHOO for "Duel in the Sun," which has already ranged from distribution of sun flower seeds to putting out pari-mutuel tickets on the Kentucky Derby yesterday was concentrated on a move to start a new dance craze. Jennifer Jones and Gregory Peck do a dance called the varsoviana in the picture and studio flackery has sent photos of the sequence to more than 2,000 dance academies throughout the country. Reaction, they say, has been enthusiastic with hundreds of dance instructors writing in for the ballroom routine.

When Monte Cristo struck it rich in simple days of old
He found a lot of diamonds and emeralds and gold.
He thought, poor chump, that he was rich, but never understood
That he discovered endless wealth for guys in Hollywood.
He never knew, when he was dunked amid the raging seas,
That he would be emblazoned on a thousand film marquees.
He never dreamed, while reveling in heaps of gems and gold,
That he would make producers rich when he was dead and cold.

MPAA TRANSFERS THEATRE TOP TO WASHINGTON

Washington, May 20.—David Palfreyman, who has headed the Motion Picture Association of America theatre service department since 1929, moves from the New York to the Washington office June 17, Eric Johnston announced today. Coincidentally, the theatre service department will change its name to the trade relations department.

Shift of Palfreyman is the first of several slated to take place in the next few months. There are two reasons for the changes—there is space in the Washington headquarters and the New York offices are overcrowded; and, second, Johnston wants more of the organization where he will have his eye directly on it.

Before the move, Palfreyman will attend exhibitor conventions in Chicago, Jacksonville and Columbus, Miss. He has been in the picture business for many years, before joining the Association he was with the Kunsky theatres in Detroit, with Goldwyn Distributing Corp., and with First National. He was also manager of the Detroit Film Board of Trade.

WB Sets Boardwalk Anniversary Meet

New York, May 20. — Warners will hold a three-day sales convention in Atlantic City Aug. 5-7, in connection with the Twentieth Anniversary of Sound Motion Pictures. Toppers from the home office, as well as the nine district and 37 branch managers, will attend the sessions.

Jack Sampson of Sterling Resigns

Seattle, May 20.—Jack Sampson, manager of advertising and publicity for Sterling Theatres here for the past eleven years, has announced his resignation to enter other business. He will remain, however, until a successor is appointed.

20th Pension Plan Up To Stockholders

DMYTRYK LEAVING FOR BRITISH FILM

Edward Dmytryk leaves end of week for London to direct "So Well Remembered" for RKO. Adrian Scott, set to produce, will follow sometime next week. The cast will be set when Scott arrives in London. Robert Donat has been reading script, but to date has not indicated whether he will accept star role. Film rolls July 16 at J. Arthur Rank's Denham studio.

'Oklahoma' Breaks All Records for Biltmore

Sold out for the entire run of 12 weeks, except for a few gallery and box seats, "Oklahoma" is the biggest seller and the largest grosser in the history of the Biltmore theatre. Advance sale totaled $225,000 and Theatre Guild production, now starting its third week, is already on the verge of SRO. House management estimates that the Rogers-Hammerstein musical could stay 26 weeks and still get the sold out shingle up for the run. Boxoffice men working the heavy sales reported one new gimmick. Customers are not buying in usual quantities of two or four ducats. Seats to single purchasers are running anywhere from eight to 100, which is a new high in private buys.

Wallis Bares British Pix Plans; Will Use Milland

Hal Wallis will use the British director, cast and technicians when he produces "For Her to See" for Paramount in England in early spring, he disclosed yesterday. He had returned over weekend from England.

Producer, who with his partner, Joseph H. Hazen, spent number of weeks abroad surveying English studio situation, said that Ray Milland, English-born, will be only player to accompany him to England for picture. Less than half a dozen assistants will make journey from here, Wallis also revealed, since British will not permit importation of production talent.

Wallis has no fear at all of procuring stage space for his forthcoming picture. He talked with both J. Arthur Rank and Sir Alexander Korda in London, and while no deal for space was signed, he was promised such space when he's ready to shoot in spring.

Plans for Paramount to construct a studio outside London, which is contemplated and for which Y. Frank Freeman will return to England in August, must await British casualty priorities, Wallis stated. Freeman was in London the same time as Wallis and Hazen in effort to line up shooting space for number of Paramount pictures, but was not successful. Material for Paramount studio will not be available until at least middle or late 1947, Wallis indicated.

If further stage space is procurable by him, Wallis also will produce "Whenever I Remember" for Paramount in England. This will follow hard on heels of "See." Ray Milland again will be only Hollywood player, and again British director, cast and technicians will be utilized in its production.

While in London, Wallis confabbed at length with James Mason, with view to his doing an English pciture for him, and one to be made over here. He likewise talked deals with several British name players, for them to come to Hollywood for pictures here, but no signatures yet have been set.

Wallis will make two pictures here before heading back to London. He will start "Desert Town," to co-star Lizabeth Scott and Wendell Corey, in September, and "Dream Puss," Robert Cummings starrer, will go before cameras in November.

Trade Showing

The Stranger

(Melodrama)

INTERNATIONAL PRODUCTION FOR RKO RELEASE. Producer, Sam Spiegel. Director, Orson Welles. Screenplay by Major Anthony Veiller. From story by Victor Trivas. Photography, Russell Metty. Production designer, Perry Ferguson. Production manager, Bernard F. McEveety. Assistant director, Jack Voglin. Wardrobe designer, Michael Woulfe. Film editor, Ernest Nims.

CAST — Edward G. Robinson, Loretta Young, Orson Welles, Philip Merivale, Richard Long, Byron Keith, Billy House, Konstantin Shayne, Martha Wentworth, Isabel O'Madigan.

TRADESHOWN at Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, Cal., May 16, 1946. Running time: 94 MINS.

Aside from the fact that it fits naturally into the general category of good shows with high box office expectancy, "The Stranger" is a bit difficult to classify. It has the dramatic elements of a detective story without too much of the customary hokum, and the shuddery thrill of a horror yarn without recourse to supernatural trappings. But ticketed either way, the picture will still hold an audience under tension for its 94 minutes of running time. Final scene, in which Orson Welles, in the role of cornered murderer, comes to a well-earned bad end on the clock tower of a New England village church, is sheer melodramatic dynamite.

Story deals with the search for Welles, as an escaped Nazi war criminal, by a government special agent (Edward G. Robinson). Welles' collaborator in Nazi atrocities, played by Konstantin Shayne, is released from custody on the chance that he will seek out Welles and unwittingly disclose the latter's whereabouts. Shayne, with Robinson close at his heels, arrives in remote New England village where Welles has assumed a new identity as a teacher in a boys' school. The erstwhile Nazi leader has been accepted by the town-folk as a respectable American and is about to be married to the daughter of the leading citizen of the village.

Shayne first seeks Welles in the school. It is after hours and the building is empty. Robinson follows him in. Shayne ambushes the detective in the deserted gymnasium and knocks him out, supposing he has killed him. Shayne then goes to the home of his Nazi pal and finds no one there but the prospective bride (Loretta Young). He eventually makes contact with Welles on the day of the wedding. He discloses he has been followed but says he has killed his pursuer. So the nuptials are briefly delayed and while the wedding guests wait Welles does a neat job of murdering and burying the only man in town who knows his true identity.

Later, when the body is discovered and Robinson is investigating there is only one person in the village besides Welles who knows whom the mysterious stranger came to see. That is the bride and she is promptly scheduled as the next murder victim. The suspense intensifies from there on with Miss Young at the brink of death at the climax.

As director, Welles has pointed up the drama sharply, paced the action effectively and worked the Anthony Veiller script for all the thrill and suspense it has in it. As an actor he shapes up notably in the big scenes, but is inclined to overplay the quieter passages. He is so con-

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: One of the studio commissaries got tapped for $3,705 for violation of OPA ceilings. Edwin Sadler, price control board chairman, knows but he ain't talking . . . Mike Todd has his feelers out for John Ford to direct his first picture for Universal release, "The Great Son." Ford's main interest now, however, is formation of an indie producing company with Merian C. Cooper . . . Madhouse on the Metro lot is—quite fittingly—the Pentagon set for "The Beginning or the End." Thirty actors with speaking parts are included in the scenes and 22 portable dressing rooms required make the place look like a trailer camp . . . After dark notes: Paula Drew and Bill Josephy at Mocambo. Bruce Cabot showing Tahia Korem, Egyptian actress-producer, around town. Jacqueline de Wit and Edwin Ridgway making the spots together. And, in San Francisco, John Garfield, June Havoc and Leo Carrillo were guests of honor at a Bohemian Club banquet. Trio was making personal appearances up north . . . While thousands of citizens were stranded by the yellow bus-car strike, Butch Jenkins and Beverly Tyler spent all day riding up and down a length of tracks on a trolley in "My Brother Who Talks to Horses" . . . Fay Holden takes off for her native North Wales soon for her first visit in 28 years. She'll bring her mother to Hollywood . . . Buddy DeSylva, now greatly improved in health, is working up a film to be called "Street Music," based on "The Beggar's Opera."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: An indie producer wound up shooting on a mystery picture last week. Dispute ensued on windup of the film so they shot two different endings. Then they couldn't decide which to use, so now they're using BOTH, one after the other . . . Metro talent scouts got a different sort of assignment last week. Studio ordered them to comb Los Angeles for four automobiles of 1900 vintage. Yesterday they came up with a Stanley Steamer, an electric auto, a 1905 Ford and a Marion . . . Freeloading dept.: Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce is playing host to a flock of local magazine and newspaper writers for the kickoff of Helldorado Week, when local color is rampant . . . They're calling it the "poor man's Garson rescue" on "No Trespassing" location at Sonora. It happened in a swimming hole on Sullivan's Creek instead of of the wild surf of the Pacific. And of course, complains Jerry Hoffman, Sol Lesser publicist, the girl was Jackie Freeman, of San Francisco, who isn't in the cast at all, and the rescuer was Tom McDonald, a makeup man, not a dashing fisherman. Yes, Jerry almost had a story . . . On request from UNRRA in New York, the local bureau of missing persons is looking for Militza Korjus, the blonde singer who played the feminine lead in "The Great Waltz." Can't trace her beyond 1942 . . . Pure poetry is the name of the manager of the Ambassador theatre—Richard Pritchard.

CALL SHEET: JULIA DEAN, stage star who retired 20 years ago, will re-open her makeup box for the role of the Austrian archduchess in "The Emperor Waltz" . . . RED SKELTON will play in a film-within-a-film in "Merton of the Movies." He'll risk life and limb as a comedian in a two-reel short, "Soles on Fire," to be inserted in the picture . . . GLORIA LLOYD, Harold and Mildred Lloyd's daughter, will celebrate her 22nd birthday on the set of "Bella Donna" today . . . MITCHELL KOWAL claims he's one of Hollywood's few bluebloods in a literal sense. While giving him hay fever shot, his doctor absent-mindedly gave him an injection from his fountain pen . . . SIDNEY LANFIELD shot around Bob Hope's right arm yesterday. Same is in bandages after Hope crashed through a glass door several days ago on the set of "Where There's Life" . . . MELVILLE BURKE, director of the Skowhegan summer theatre in Maine, lined up Lee Elson and Marian Carr of RKO's contract list for appearances with his company this summer . . . TEXAS JIM LEWIS will toss off a new jeep as door prize when he opens his Redondo barn dance Saturday night . . . JOHNNY COY and DOROTHY BABB are honeymooning in Montreal, his home town. They were married in the Little Church Around the Corner in New York Friday . . . POLA NEGRI is back in Hollywood after arranging for publication of her memoirs with a New York publisher.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Marsha Hunt and Robert Presnell waited three months to borrow Delmer Daves' mountain cabin at Crestline for their honeymoon. As they unpacked, a pungent perfume drifted up from the floorboards, informing them beyond doubt that a skunk had exercised prior rights. So they re-packed and found lodging for the night in San Bernardino. Now they'll have to postpone the honeymoon again until Marsha finishes her role in "Smash-Up" . . . Somebody always gets a break out of the toughest situations—Margaret O'Brien doesn't like bread and, with the shortage on, she isn't made to eat it now . . . Only three persons returned to Metro from "A Woman of My Own" location without poison oak rashes . . . No shortage of flowers in the buttonholes of the crew working on "Miss Television." Cleatus Caldwell averages three bouquets a day . . . American Society of Armchair Detectives decided yesterday that Raymond Chandler is the best writer of hardboiled mysteries, Craig Rice is tops in whodunit comedy, Leslie Ford best of the un-hardboiled school and Mildred Gordon's "The Little Man Who Wasn't There" best mystery book of the year . . . Columbia went looking for a rainbow and found it in a gun barrel. For "Down to Earth," studio decided a painted rainbow wasn't glamorous enough. So propman William Black loaded six air-guns with sequins and shot himself a beautiful rainbow . . . State of the world note: Newest drink in Hollywood is the Black Tulip which is compounded of gin, dry vermouth, Crepe Yvette, Dubonnet and blueberry juice. We accept no further responsibility.——D.D.T.

By RADIE HARRIS

MY WEEK

TO THE OPENING OF "ANNIE GET YOUR GUN" AT THE IMPERIAL: Produced by Rodgers and Hammerstein. Score by Irving Berlin. Book by Dorothy and Herb Fields. Settings by Jo Mielsiner. Staged by Josh Logan. Starring Ethel Merman. With a parlay like this, how can you miss? The question is not rhetorical. It will be answered by the S.R.O. trade at the Imperial way beyond the time when the $300,000 nut is paid back to "the little Foxes" of 20th Century, who should have tagged this best seller "Forever Merman." Back in harness again for the first time since "something for the Boys" ('43) when she retired to become Mrs. Robert Levitt and devote her singing to the lullabying of Ethel the 2nd and Bob the 2nd, she debunks that exploded theory of show business that a prolonged absence is harmful to one's career. As a first-nighter in the ch ering section of all her successes —"Girl Crazy," "Anything Goes," "Red, Hot and Blue," "Dubarry Was a Lady," "Panama Hattie," "Something for the Boys"—let it here be said that she tops herself in "Annie" and holds uncontested her reputation as one of the greatest musical comedy performers in the theatre today. As for her leading man, Ray Middleton, whom Hollywood has ignored in the past, it requires no Delphic oracle to assume that every studio will now discover him with a "where have you been all our lives?" awareness. For the record, he has a run-of-the-play contract, but if after the first five years (!) something sensational comes along in the way of a movie offer, his pal, Dick Rodgers, responsible for giving him this best break in his career, won't stand in his way. In any event, MCA has their hottest new client since Frank Sinatra.

At this date, to start talking of the genius of Irving Berlin would come in the category of anti-climax department. Suffice to say that again his words and music will be ASCAP-ing forth from every radio, juke box and band, with at least five, "It's Wonderful!" "I've Got the Sun and the Stars," "Comes Naturally to Me," "Lost in Your Arms" and "Who Loves Me?" destined for immediate Hit Parading.

Among the lucky $9.60 a pew aisle-sitters: Leland Hayward and Margaret Sullavan, who in a simple grey tailored suit was a striking contrast to all her ermine and orchid neighbors . . . Beatrice Pierson, with her least severe critic, George Jean Nathan . . . Lucille Ball, swathed in platina, having a hard time seeing from an upper box, but a beautiful time being seen . . . Sonja Henie, looking like something you'd want to eat with a spoon, in a creation of black lace and blue velvet, with her golden curls piled high . . . Robert Sherwood, whose six feet two of manhood, I'm glad I didn't have to sit in back of . . . The Quentin Reynolds with the Billy Roses . . . Otto Preminger, Anatol Litvak, Hal Wallis, Lew Landers and Lester Cowan, more of the Hollywood contingent . . . The Pam Blumenthals with the Howard Reinheimers . . . Jack Benny, rushing over after his United Palestine broadcast appeal, and two unescorted ladies in the very last row, whose husbands were otherwise pre-occupied—Dorothy Rodgers and Ellin Berlin.

All in all, it was a gala, wonderful evening, as Oscar Hammerstein must have suspected it would be when he sailed away for Australia without waiting for the verdict. Already identified with four other smashes ("Oklahoma," "Carousel," "I Remember Mama," "Show Boat"), he knew that this newest hit would just add to his fabulous reputation—and income tax. For it's as plain as the "schnozzola" on Durante that it will be a long, long time before the Imperial treasurer can say, "Annie doesn't live here any more!"

TO THE XAVIER CUGAT OPENING ON THE STARLIGHT ROOF OF THE WALDORF-ASTORIA: Where Lana Turner, Sonja Henie, Cary Grant, Ann Sheridan, Dottie Lamour and Howard Hughes outshone the stars in Lucius Boomer's heavens.'' Lana, in a severely tailored dark brown blouse with tan skirt, and her hair drawn straight back with a bun in the back, looked far from the glamour queen she usually is, but that didn't prevent her from copping three escorts—Cary Grant, Howard Hughes and Johnny Myers—exclusively to herself. Lana danced with Cary to Cugat's tantalizing rhumbas, while Howard Hughes just sat and ate and ate, one course after another. I'm sure if the waiters didn't know who he was, they must have been thinking, "Poor guy! I bet he hasn't had a square meal in days!"

Sonja Henie, at the next table, had all the glamour that Lana left home. Her backless, black lace dress was breathtaking—in more ways than one—if you know what I mean, and I think you do! And her emerald and diamond necklace and bracelets would have made even Margot Grahame green with envy. No wonder that Cary, who kept staring in her direction, finally wound up inviting her to be his exclusive date at the Copa later. Which explains why Johnny Myer is now trying to persuate Sonja to accompany the Howard Hughes junket (including Cary Grant!) to Rio for a brief spin. So you see, Ted Saucier, you don't need a "week-end at the Waldorf" for romance to flourish—just a "starlight roof!"

TO THE OPENING OF "SWAN SONG" AT THE BOOTH: where a 12-year-old moppet steals the honors away from Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. Her name is Jacqueline Horner and not only does she play the piano extraordinarily well for her age, but she has the embryonic acting talent of an actress who was out front applauding her—Helen Hayes . . . To the Embassy, where nine out of the ten tables don't understand a word of the French that Charles Trenet is singing, but they yell "encore! encore!" which makes them very "au courant" . . . To cocktails at "21," where Fred Astaire denies the rumor that he has any intention of doing a musical review for Irving Berlin. "My acting days are over," he tells me. "I'm 47 years old. How old can you get and still hoof? I'm winding up with a good picture, 'Blue Skies.' How wrong can you go with Bing Crosby?"

Modesty, they name is Astaire. Would there were more like you!

PLUGGER UNION CALLS PROBE ON PAYOLA

The subject of "payola" was brought up on the floor at general membership meet of Coast branch of Music Publishers' Contact Employes (songpluggers' union) yesterday with introduction into the minutes of a letter written by Nils T. Granlund to songwriter Harry Ruby on May 14.

Letter contained the following statement: "In answer to your recent letter, a singer who belongs to the union must be paid the minimum salary to appear on the show. Most of the singers who have appeared to introduce a song . . . have been paid by the song publisher, or the person whose song they are plugging."

Granlund was referring to his ABC airshow, "You're in the Act," on which numerous songs lately have been introduced by single-shot guests, most of whom are professional members of AFRA and as such must be paid.

After letter was presented, Nat Winecoff, regional director of songpluggers' union, instructed the board of governors to launch an investigation today to seek out what publishers have been paying to get songs on air, a practice specifically outlawed by MPCE. Publisher violators can be fined up to $5,000, according to union tenets.

Meeting was first held by general membership here in many months, and the attendance was deemed disappointing in that but 30-odd came, out of current roll of 119. Suggestion by Winecoff that union hold social gatherings monthly to instill greater fellowship withered through palpable indifference of most of rank-and-file members.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The Byrnes speech last night was a fighting one—the kind of rousing one that should appeal. The address adds weight to the contention that the Paris conference was not a failure, in at least a negative sense. It was not a failure because we did not yield on the principles that we consider necessary for "the only kind of peace that can endure"—one that is not "founded on vengeance or greed." It was not very likely that we should obtain agreement on fundamental issues at the Paris conference, since Molotov came there with directives that he could not change to meet a current situation. The interval between the Paris gathering and the next one will give the Soviet time to adjust some of their demands. If they do not, Byrnes argues for pitiless publicity, for telling the world where the powers had agreed on points and where they had not, so that world opinion could "point the way to a final settlement." The effect of world opinion, if the people are aroused to interest and demands, can be tremendous. This is especially true of the people of this country, who can be leaders, if they will only act like them. As President Truman said at William Jewell yesterday, we must have fewer Monday morning quarterbacks. "It's time we all got in the game."

OUT OF HORN'S MOUTH

O'DONNELL DENIES ATA IS MENACE TO INDIES

New York, May 20.—Answering charges made against the American Theatres Association by independent exhibitors in Boston, Bob O'Donnell declared today that the ATA is not a menace to the indie exhib because it doesn't deal with trade practices as charged. ATA was established as an all-inclusive exhibitor body to deal only with those problems on which exhibitors see eye-to-eye, such as legislation, taxation, etc.

Trade practices are strictly in the bailiwick of Allied and other independent exhibitor organization, O'Donnell said. ATA is in no way opposed to Allied and there is a place in the organization for all exhibitors, whether affiliated or not, he said. O'Donnell refuted the Boston charge that ATA favored a single annual collection aiming for $20,000,000. He said a recent resolution called for a single collection but no figure was stated. O'Donnell returns to Dallas tomorrow.

sistently sinister that he is just barely convincing as a lover.

Miss Young scores heavily in a role freighted with high emotion and Robinson gives a top performance. Billy House can take a bow for vivid and effective portrayal of character role that supplies only comedy relief in the picture. Shayne handles his rather brief but exacting part creditably and others earning special mention are Martha Wentworth, Richard Long and Philip Merivale.

Sam Spiegel has given the show top quality production and handled his materials with expert showmanship. Production designer Perry Ferguson wins a hand, camera work of Russell Metty is outstanding. Picture is International's final RKO release.

Albertson, to have it stricken were refused by presiding officer and Federal Communications Commission assistant counsel, Harry M. Plotkin. Thereafter several pointed — and humorous—references were made to the subject.

Hughes Tool Co. was first and only on list for the day when hearings were dragged out as opposing counsel sought to establish recent association with enterprise of leading witnesses. Attorneys also hammered at light expenditures and experimentation by the Hughes outfit. At close, all of Hughes' witnesses had not been heard.

Hearings started late, with Plotkin, John P. Hearne, FCC field attorney from San Francisco, and Bernard Linden, local FCC rep of 12 district officiating. About 85 industry leaders and spectators were on hand, including attorney Ed Marr, repping color-conscious, though nonparticipating CBS, as observer. However, hearings ran until after five due to lengthy examination of Henry M. Crossland, television g.m. for Hughes, and Hoyland Bettinger, program consultant. Engineering hearings were deferred to later date in Washington, D.C., by mutual agreement.

HALL FIRST WITNESS

Howard P. Hall, assistant secretary of Hughes Tool Co., first testified on Hughes' quest for 50 kilowatt station in number four channel (66 to 72 megacycle band)atop Mt. Wilson. He established corporate setup of applicant. Frank M. McConnell, comptroller and treasurer, was next, testifying to finances and estimated costs of proposed operation. Initial costs were figured at approximately $1,850,000. Monthly operating nut was tabbed at estimated $109,000. Financing of project is to come from monies on hand and future earnings of Hughes Tool Co., parent organization of various "departments" in corporate setup. Company's statement, incorporated in exhibit, showed overall assets and liabilities of $50,343,546. Total surplus was listed as $23,388,546, and of that $17,000,000 was fixed assets.

Proceedings were lightened during testimony of next witness, Noah Dietrich, officer holding several titles and Hughes' right hand man. While extolling late Howard Hughes, Sr., and his accomplishments in various industrial fields it was suggested by opposition that comments be confined "to junior." Dietrich cited Hughes' activities in aeronautics, motion pictures, etc., elaborating on exhibit that contained photos of personalities discovered by Hughes, including a well-clothed Jane Russell. Dietrich also stated that Hughes has spent $140,000 to date on television, $60,000 of it in real estate at Cahuenga Peak, an alternate site if Hughes fails to reach agreement with CBS to share Mt. Wilson. Mt. Markham is another alternate preferable to Cahuenga.

BREAKDOWN ORDERED

A breakdown of announced expenditures was not available but was ordered presented before hearings conclude.

Hughes present film studios at 7000 Romaine, Hollywood, will be used for tele studios, in addition to Culver City airplant, if latter found necessary, testified Crossland.

When Caldwell asked if "Outlaw" was indicative of type of programs to be expected of Hughes' organization he was flung a definite "no!" Caldwell, in countering Albertson, Hughes' attorney, also asked if Hughes had not resigned from Motion Picture Producers Association because of the film. Over objections, Plotkin ruled testimony be included.

Composer Shannon Dies Under Train

Pontiac, Mich., May 20.—James Royce Shannon, 65, composer, committed suicide here last night by walking in front of a freight train. Shannon, whose real name was William Royce, started songwriting with his mother, making his first success with music for Chauncey Olcott's "Shameen Dhu." Some of his hit songs were "Missouri Waltz," "Irish Lullaby," "When Day Is Done," "Mother of Mine" and "At the Foot of the Cross." He had written over 600 songs. Reason for suicide was given as ill health.

'Eileen' in Package

Arthur Kurlan, indie radio producer, is offering for network sponsorship a serial package shaped out of "My Sister Eileen," stage hit of few years back and more recently a film. Lucille Ball will star in the series, which has been written by John McClain.

Claire At Maxie's

With Anne Triola cutting short her engagement to go on tour, Dorothy Claire, songstress, steps into her spot in "Laughs Only," current show starring Jackie Gleason at Slapsy Maxie's.

initial experiment with the process.

Improvements in the Cinecolor method are understood to have been worked out in the course of the filming of "Lucky Star" by Producer Harry Rapf. Nature of these were not disclosed but it has been announced that studio technicians had to make their own camera when it was decided to use the color process. At the time every existing Cinecolor camera was in use and no new ones were available. Camera sharps worked for a month reconstructing a black-and-white camera and converting it to Cinecolor use.

Rapf said the color "turned out wonderfully" and stated that company will make other Cinecolor pictures. "Lucky Star," he said, probably will not be released until fall. "We haven't had time yet to complete our plans for Cinecolor," he said, "and next picture in that medium is not yet scheduled."

ginian" to estimated $48,500 on the week at the two Paramount theatres. Without the strike the downtown house would pull estimated $3,000 to $4,000 more than present outlook. "Do You Love Me," big at the Chinese and Uptown, is being nicked several thousand dollars at the Loew State but will still finish week with excellent $49,500 estimate in the three spots.

Holdover money goes to "The Postman Always Rings Twice" at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz where it finished its second week last night with estimated $55,500. "The Spiral Staircase" hit a second week record at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire theatres, closing last night with estimated $37,000. "Her Kind of Man" is shaping up to about $30,000 or near on its second frame in the three Warner first runs. "The Outlaw" will hit approximately the same figure for its seventh week in the four Music Halls. "Gilda," with a six-day fourth week at the Pantages and Hillstreet, is closing with estimated $26,000 on final frame.

Third week of "Seventh Veil" at the Vogue theatre is clocking $5,000 or near after $5,200 on its second week. "Madonna of the Seven Moons" at the Carthay Circle should come through with $6,500 on its second week. Moveover of "Dark Corner" at the Four Star is very good at $5,500 prospects.

YOUR CONTRIBUTION MEANS A LIFE . . . OR LIVES!

Time is vital! Starving souls and bodies cannot wait. Your gift today will spell a happy future . . . or an IMMEDIATE DEATH. Which shall it be? Los Angeles must raise $5,000,000 to meet its share of this life-saving campaign. The motion picture industry MUST raise $1,000,000 of this Los Angeles quota!

A thousand activities demand continuous life-saving action—from transportation, to housing, to food, medicine, clothing. To give is not only a duty, but a welcome privilege. Thousands now about to die will LIVE—and live to thank you!

ARE YOU GOING TO LET US DIE?

Little children, like these, were first on Hitler's death list. The survivors numbered only 10%.

Many of these tragic remnants of humanity have since died.

Many are dying this very moment.

Most of them will be dead by the end of 1946 unless you help them.

Every creed, every race has a stake in this fight for survival.

What is your answer? Death for them — or LIFE?

GIVE AND THEY LIVE

DON'T...AND THEY DIE!

Partial Merger of MPAA With Indie Prods Mulled

New York, May 21.—A partial amalgamation of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers with the Motion Picture Association of America is a likely possibility in the not too distant future. Such a partial melding of the two organizations has been discussed recently by SIMPP members. SIMPP member David O. Selznick, explaining proposal in New York, said such a telescoping would involve only aspects of mutual interest to the two groups, with SIMPP continuing on matters peculiar to indie production. Efforts to bring the two organizations together were instigated sometime ago by Eric Johnston.

Donald M. Nelson, in Hollywood, last night said "I know nothing about such a proposal, nor have I heard of any of these moves."

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

KING Guion ork has nixed a bid to disc for Jewel Records, rather unusual stand for a new band to make which has no waxing pact at all. However, Stillman Pond, Lake Arrowhead realtor, who has bankrolled the musicrew, figured it best for outfit to hit peak smoothness and proficiency before stamping itself on something as relatively imperishable as a disc. Guion combo started last March and looked so good when serving as relief crew at Meadowbrook ballroom that Music Corp. of America inked outfit to a seven-year contract. Since engagement at dancery, Guion has been one-niting along Coast.

ALTHOUGH nitery biz here currently is off generally, the top spots are found to be shelling out top money to top acts. Rooms are forced to, in order to compete with eastern and midwest operators. Ciro's is laying $4,000 on the line each week for Joe E. Lewis and Jimmy Savo is taking down $2,000 as a single at Florentine Gardens. Larry Adler, now getting $2,500 at Las Vegas, will get same when he decides into which of two local rooms angling for him he'll go next month. Harry Richman is booked into Florentine, starting June 19, at $3,000 per stanza.

GEORGE Elcock, director of the British Scophony Co., has told associates that his organization is not planning on any early installation of theatre equipment in Great Britain. Reason for delay is that he is awaiting further developments to improve screening quality. Elcock has expressed view that currently the Skiatron system is the best method for theatre use. The Skiatron system employs electronic projection on to a ground glass screen and was used in many R.A.F. radar stations. Experts state that method gives a well-defined image.

SWITCHEROO in picture buildups will be done by Harry M. Popkin, when he presents dramatization of his initial production. "Sheila," over the air. Yarn will be broadcast via platterings on various air outlets. Popkin plans to use film names in the radio version. Platters will be made either for serialization or presentation in one slice of air time. Cardinal Pictures producer states he believes story is of the type that will cause much discussion and that radio, instead of taking edge off, actually will whet appetite of potential audiences.

FOR past few months associates of certain Metro producer have been trying to talk him into deleting certain sequence of picture he finished, with producer screaming they didn't know what they were talking about and that sequence was going to be left in. Following day, producer solemnly announced he had decided to cut out disputed footage.

GENERAL Foods is considering switching product plugged on Fannie Brice Sunday show on CBS. Currently it's Sanka, but probably it will be Jello come autumn. Latter product is again becoming available after war-years shortage, and sponsor wants it to hit the air again under aegis of established show. Added factor is that General Foods has come to realize that Miss Brice commands an extremely strong following of children and teen-agers, not the most apt audience for coffee, but the perfect one for a dessert.

WEATHER is playing tricks again with Hollywood companies on location, what is ideal state for one studio being source of financial loss for another. Sol Lesser's "No Trespassing" troupe, slated to spend six weeks at Sonora for exteriors, wound up all its exteriors in five, due to perfect skies. On other hand, Metro's "A Woman of My Own" remained two additional weeks at Monterey waiting for the sun, then principals returned to studio, with camera crew of 13 still there to get necessary sequences.

20TH IN CARROLL THEATRE DEAL

Consummation of deal whereby National Theatres and 20th-Fox will participate with Earl Carroll in giant theatre and entertainment center to be erected by latter on Sunset boulevard is expected to take place in New York next week. FOY RESIGNS AT 20TH FOR NEW JOB

Bryan Foy yesterday turned his resignation into 20th Century-Fox as of next Saturday, though his five year contract had until October to run. Foy found that his Pathe Eagle-Lion production duties in lining up talent would require his immediate time, but he is staying on the lot for about two weeks to finish his bow out picture.

Foy has hired Izzy Freidman, as head of the Eagle-Lion music department. Friedman was manager of the Warner music department for many years and from there went to Metro where he was until several months ago.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

There was a weeping willow tree when
I was but a child
And underneath its genial shade our thoughts ran rife and wild.
The little stream went rilling down its old familiar way
And now and then a bubble showed a vagrant perch at play.
And in the shade we read about Nick
Carter's daring acts
And how he foiled the criminals with elemental facts
And now when fifty years have slipped beyond the hills of time
We sit beside the radio and hear a tale of crime
And old Nick Carter prowls again amid the dawning pale
To solve a murder and to plug a brand of ginger ale.

You are sitting at home, trying to forget that two bucks that didn't come back and turn the dial to mystery stories. Three of them in a row, with a jockey doped and a stable burned at midnight and a hoss owner slain in his study amid the overhanging elms, take you right back to the two-dollar window. You get an impression that the boys on the radio are in cahoots with the boys on the race track. On the radio you know that Col. Effingham will be shot to death by a mysterious bullet while his good hoss, Snowflake, is rounding into the stretch and that Snowflake will romp home at odds of 50-to-1, but Col Effington won't be there to collect. Anyway the story always winds up with the slick private detective putting one over on the dumb cop and the suspected but honest jockey getting out of jail in time to ride Snowflake, but you wonder why Snowflake paid 50-to-1 when everybody knew he was the best hoss in the race.

Judith Anderson Flying Mother Home

Judith Anderson has reservations on Constellation for herself and mother, leaving New York for England on June 19. Actress is taking mother back to her home in London, and heads east as soon as she winds up role in Sol Lesser's "No Trespassing."

LEGIT OPENING

Philadelphia, May 21. — "The Dancer," Philly's first stage preem in four months is a melodrama with effectively macabre moments and several good characters. Too much work is needed to give it footlight chance right now. Character of title is a famous Russian ballet dancer, now living in post-war Paris, mentally sick, partly invalided, for three years speechless. He has a fortune stored in a vault whose location his coarse American wife and his patron want to know. Luis Van Rooten is notable, and Colin Keith-Johnston and Leon Fokiue, featured, are good. Films could highlight earlier dance career and introduce daughter's romance. There is plenty of grisly suspense.

Yates Bares New Color; Hints at Higher Prices

Announcement of studio's new Trucolor process, plans for increased use of color in film forthcoming production and warning to exhibitors of possible increase in film rentals high-lighted talk of Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic, at Republic regional meeting of western exchange sales executives yesterday.

"Color is on the march," Yates declared, "and in my opinion color today is in the same position as sound in 1928. Republic intends to meet the demand with the introduction and use of its new and improved Trucolor formula."

MAGNA COLOR IMPROVED

The Trucolor process is a development of Consolidated Laboratory's Magnacolor, which Republic has been using in its new Monte Hale westerns. Color in the first pictures of the series didn't work out so well, but technicians say that bugs are now worked out of the process and that latest Monte Hale, "Out California Way," just finished is highly successful color job.

Regarding film costs, Yates said: "It is our intention to fulfill the exhibitors' needs and requirements, but with the current upswing in production costs the exhibitor must be prepared to share the producers' problems.

"The exhibitor must realize that the cost of motion picture production has continuously increased beyond our control in the past few years and theatre operators must carry their share of the load in increased rentals if the quantity and quality of production is to be continued."

Meeting was presided over by James R. Grainger, executive veepee. Session concludes today and Yates, Grainger and studio and sales officials will fly to New York and Chicago for additional regional meets there.

GARDEN TELLS VIDEO SETUP

New York, May 21.—Insistence by Madison Square Garden Corp. that it holds all rights to theatre television for all Mike Jacobs promoted fights there, may be the basis for future video contracts. With tremendous potential b.o. anticipated for such sports and other events, it is believed that most promoters in the future will attempt to sell rights through separate contracts for home sets, or large auditoriums where admissions are charged. The Garden stated its procedure following controversy with NBC, when latter insisted it had "exclusive" contract signed for the Conn-Louis fight, giving the web full television rights for home or theatre reception.

Jacqueline de Wit Gets 'Wild Beauty' Lead

Jacqueline de Wit yesterday was handed lead in "Wild Beauty" at Universal. Film starts working today with Don Porter, Lois Collier, Robert Wilcox and Robert "Buzz" Henry in the leads. Red Rock Canyon is scene of initial filming on location with Wallace Fox directing and producing.

Lake, Whelan Report

Veronica Lake and Arleen Whelan check in today for wardrobe tests on Harry Sherman's "Ramrod."

Leo Leers Again

Momentous announcement come out of front office at Metro yesterday, carrying news that messenger girls no longer need wear slacks but now could adopt skirts and dresses. Anything but slacks has been banned by studio for use of mail-carrying femmes for past couple of years, ostensibly with idea in mind that skirts and pretty knees would tend to demoralize producers, directors, department heads and others with whom gals came in contact.

PROTEST MEETING CALLED BY SEG

Emergency meeting of board members of Screen Extras Guild has been called tonight to protest the hiring yesterday of a new exec secretary, Jim Clarey, by SEG Prexy Edd Russell and board member Dick Gordon.

Some time ago James Haning was hired for the post by group of four board members. Haning recently offered to resign and walkout was accepted with proviso that he take 30 days notice. Clarey was offered the secretaryship yesterday by SEG attorney Henry Ely, acting on orders of Russell and Gordon, or so alleged members of the committee.

Raftery Facing Draft for 3d Term as UA President

New York, May 21.—Probability looms that Ed Raftery will be drafted for another term as president of United Artists because company owners are far from an agreement on his successor. Meantime it appears from meetings held here last week by Mary Pickford, a UA partner, that Raftery, if he remains, might get a powerful executive aide. A successor must be agreed upon before UA's annual stockholders meeting June 11, if at all.

Among the possibilities mentioned are Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers. His name was widely mentioned as a result of conversations Miss Pickford had with various persons in New York. Nelson, in Hollywood, said he had not been approached.

If Raftery remains, there is a likelihood his principal aide is to be Allen Abeel, second vice prexy of Guaranty Trust in charge of film loans. Chief aim of the new aide would be to cut down the $70,000 weekly operation costs, which are figured too high for the gross business done.

It Shouldn't Happen To A Dog

CAST—Stars Carole Landis and Allyn Joslyn. Supporting players, Margo Woode, Henry Morgan, Reed Hadley, John Alexander, Jean Wallace, Roy Roberts, John Ireland.

TRADESHOWN at studio, May 21, 1946. Running time: 70 MINS.

"It Shouldn't Happen to a Dog" is somebody's idea of how a police reporter tracks down his story. Film doesn't make too much sense, but it furnishes entertainment for those who enjoy zany characterizations in contrived situations and should do well enough for second billing. Direction by Herbert I. Leeds pretty well drains comedy of laughs, and William Girard as producer has given feature first-class mounting.

Carole Landis and Allyn Joslyn are co-starred, as detective and reporter, respectively, but casting is strictly for chuckles and parts are played that way. There's a war dog, too, belonging to Miss Landis, a Doberman Pinscher, used to motivate action which has something to do with somebody who's object of search of police, a racketeer mob and Joslyn. Principal interest in comedy revolves around pooch, which is hailed as Rodney the Hold-Up Dog, because he figures in a stickup.

Miss Landis, photographed with a black eye which isn't explained in half her scenes, dresses and steps smartly but hasn't much to do. Joslyn, whose paper "promotes" him to science editor from his police beat, acts slap-happy through most of picture while trying to solve a case for paper which he believes rightfully his but which editor turned over to femme reporter. Roy Roberts handles city editor role cleverly, Jean Wallace plays newspaper gal and John Alexander has number of good moments as a cop whose love for April fool pranks is responsible for Joslyn getting into peck of trouble.

Screenplay by Eugene Ling and Frank Gabrielson, based on story by Edwin Lanham, is able piece of writing for this type of picture. David Buttolph's musical score is advantageously played and production credits generally match up.

JACK ROBBINS NEW DREAM SONGS

New York, May 21.—Jack Robbins, who it was figured had faded from the music publishing horizon with the sale of his interests in the Robbins Music and affiliated companies to Loew's is now a busy little man dreaming of plans for the future. Says he is considering associating with Reg. Connolly of London as U.S. song broker. Also has idea of starting an educational music publishing company, then he might help his son, Buddy, build up the Robbins Artists Bureau, and then when he gets around to it may start an Independent Music publishing company for his younger son, Marshall.

DEL RIO RETURNS TO H'WOOD FOR 'WHITE GOLD'

Dolores del Rio will return to Hollywood to star in his forthcoming indie production of "White Gold," William K. Howard announced last night. Producer-director talked with actress yesterday via long distance telephone in Mexico City, and she assured him she would come north whenever film was ready. For past three years and more, Miss del Rio, who will take the original Jeta Goudal role, has been appearing in Mexican pictures.

Howard plans to mostly eliminate studio stage situation by making 95 per cent of picture on location, on Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona. He currently is talking deal for space for two small interiors with several rental studios. Producer originally directed "Gold" for Producers Distributing Corp., in 1926, and has been confabbing with United Artists for release of new version.

Michael O'Shea has bought up his contract with Hunt Stromberg and will free lance. ENTERPRISE DEAL STILL COOKING

New York, May 21.—David Loew and Charles Einfeld here past week have come to no decision on a distribution deal for their Enterprise productions. On Monday they huddled with a delegation of Columbia executives, while other deals are still on the fire. Discussion of a deal with Universal has been left open as are those with United Artists, RKO, United World and a proposed Goldwyn outfit. They do not feel a deal will percolate during their stay here as they return to Hollywood over the weekend. Then they will return here for final negotiations.

JUST FOR VARIETY

THE GRAPEVINE: It was Robert Montgomery's birthday yesterday, but nobody seemed to know anything about it for hours. Directing and playing the lead in "Lady in the Lake" at Metro, he wondered why not a soul presented congratulations or best wishes. About 3:30 p.m., when the silent treatment was beginning to wear, someone on the set turned on a radio. Frances Scully's broadcast over KECA came on with a big buildup for Montgomery, best wishes on his birthday, and ended with, "Right now on the set of his picture they're wheeling on a huge birthday cake." Montgomery turned around to find the cake almost at his elbow—and blazing with 102 candles as a final gag . . . Technological surprise note: There are 30,000 television receiver sets in London against only 6,000 in New York, according to a recent survey . . . William Powell is closing his Palm Springs house for the summer . . . Johnny Mercer told his agent he doesn't want to appear on any radio shows this summer and added: "If you insist, I'll just pay you the ten per cent if you'll promise not to coax me out of laying off" . . . Cast and crew of Paramount's "The Emperor Waltz," totaling 135 members, were given physical checkups before taking off for the Jasper National Park shooting . . . Cissie Bartholomew's break-in as an actress in Pine-Thomas' "I Cover the Big Town" is caused by her desire to become financially independent of Freddie. Her aim is to become a dialogue director . . . Anne Jeffreys is viewing all of the late Carole Lombard's pictures in the RKO projection rooms, the studio believing she has the same flair for comedy and considering a re-make of some of the Lombard vehicles . . . The Roy Del Ruth production which Steve Broidy said will cost $2,000,000, actually will be made for $600,000.

OFF and RUNNING: Street car strike, weather and all those other hindrances had no effect on the Hollywood Park race meet opening yesterday. It was tops. Everyone you could think of was there willing to bet that trying to find a studio executive at his desk was like hunting for a needle in a haystack without a lantern. Harry Warner was a happy guy; his W. L. Ranch entry Lita's Agent won the first race and paid $24.00. Of course all the Warner clan and their kin cashed in on it. Then in the fourth a few at least that we knew had Chagin, which paid $86.60. Charlie Rogers had a $20 ticket on the nose and Joe E. Lewis had $40. A Look photographer had $40 on the nose, and lots of others had those two and five combo tickets. Mike Todd bet a buck that the tote board would hit $2,000,000 on the day. Almost a sure thing. The gals did not sport their light summer finery, but all had bankrolls or were accompanied by them.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Twentieth Century-Fox got the following letter yesterday: "May I ask what you are going to do when the Twentieth Century ends? Will you find an answer to this and announce it? A Worrier." It must be the dank, gloomy spring weather that causes people to brood like this . . . On the other hand there was a cherry note in Hollywood's streets yesterday—an organ grinder, with monkey attached, playing "Sidewalks of New York" . . . Somebody at RKO has a sense of fitness. James Ramsay Ullman, author of "The White Tower," best-seller concerned with Alps-climbing, was given an office on the fourth floor of Building G. No elevators, so Mr. Ullman can keep in trim . . . Up comes a story of Jerry Wald's youth, when he was radio columnist on the NY Graphic, now defunct, and Walter Winchell was already a Broadway bigshot. One day in the composing room Winchell gave the 18-year-old Wald a bit of advice: "You gotta take a sock at the big shots once in a while to get attention." Couple days later Winchell found a blast against him in Wald's column, sought out his protege and wanted to know what the idea was. "You told me to take a sock at a big shot and you're the only one I know," explained Wald . . . Society Dept.: Charlie Morrison will play host at a party celebrating Emil Coleman's 30th year as a bandleader Friday night at Mocambo. Roscoe Turner tossed a party at the House of Murphy for John Stelle, national commander of the American Legion. Cast and crew of "You're for Me" helped Perry Como celebrate his birthday on the set. And Harold and Mildred Lloyd appeared on the set of "Bella Donna" to help their daughter, Gloria, celebrate her 22nd birthday yesterday.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Maj. Gen. Curtis LeMay, commander of the B-29 fleets against Japan, was scheduled to pay a visit to William Wyler, ex-A.A.F. colonel now directing "The Best Years of Our Lives," on the set of his picture. Hoagy Carmichael was to play the A.A.F. song when Gen. LeMay made his entrance. When the latter appeared, however, Carmichael became slightly confused and pounded out "Anchors Aweigh" . . . "No Trespassing" troupe made a hit with Sonora officialdom, with director Delmer Daves coming back from location yesterday with the title of honorary mayor, Edward G. Robinson, honorary chief of police, and Judith Anderson, honorary justice of peace. And other members of the company can qualify as honorary jailbirds, having been forced by the housing shortage to lodge in the town pokey . . . Geraldine Brooks, NY stage actress signed by Warners for the second lead in "Cry Wolf," owns five per cent of "Oklahoma!"—which is better than owning an oil well in that state . . . Milton Raison's eye-catching "The Gay Mortician," published by Murray & Gee, hit the bookstalls yesterday . . . Just after Warners added sound to films 20 years ago, Jesse Lasky, then boss of Paramount, had finished "Warming Up," a baseball story with Richard Dix. He added two sound effects, the crack of the bat against the ball and the roar of the crowd as it turned into a home run—and doubled the gross on the picture!——D.D.T.

New York, May 21.—Paramount today canceled plans to screen "To Each His Own" aboard a plane on a trans-Atlantic flight. FORD EYES ROONEY AS BOOST FOR CROSBY SHOW

New York, May 21.—Ford Motors, anxious to hypo its Bob Crosby program on CBS, has been eyeing Dinah Shore, who parts from Birdseye sponsorship next month, but it appears Miss Shore is not interested, preferring solo vocal spot on own show. Meanwhile Ford has commenced romancing Mickey Rooney as possible addition to Crosby layout, Rooney now being on market since Ward Wheelock agency dropped its option on him.

Young & Rubicam agency, which handles Dinah Shore's soon-to-fade Birdseye show, is trying to sell singer to another of its accounts and idea apparently meets with Miss Shore's approval, since she would carry over virtually same show she now toplines. Miss Shore, her managerial rep and Y & R's radio boss, Tom Lewis, held long huddle here yesterday and today Lewis leaves for home office huddles in NY.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 21. — There's one gal who has taken down a pretty penny recently from Hollywood who doesn't sound the least bit awed or impressed by the place. She is Anya Seton, author of "Dragonwyck." She was in town the other day, feted by a cocktail party tie-in with the opening of the film at Loew's Capitol.

In an interview, she descibed Vincent Price, the villain lead, as "a little hammy in some places, but really awfully good." As for Gene Tierney, the authoress dismissed her by saying: "It didn't make much difference who played the part. The character is such a dope." Miss Seton definitely failed to see eye to eye with Darryl Zanuck on the ending of the film, declaring that economy forced the curtailment of her own climax.

The lady also had no inhibitions in discussing her book "Turquoise" which Warners has bought for a picture. She indicated to a local paper interviewer that she was upset over reports that Ann Sheridan might be cast for the lead. She wants Jennifer Jones or, at least, Ida Lupino.

Rumored resumption of negotiations with the Spanish Government on the film agreement seems definitely in the works, according to reliable sources here. State Department officials are hoping that negotiations will proceed along the same lines as were being pursued before the dicker broke down over a number of knotty problems, chiefly the import right system.

It is understood that the new proposal of the Spanish govt. will eliminate the necessity of purchasing these costly import rights. However, Spain is not expected to include any guarantee of dollar exchange, such as was contained in the original agreement.

Spain operates under a blocked money policy like most European countries. Originally she agreed to set up a specific fund of $2,000,000 for dollar remittance on the import of American films. Chief opponent of this is said to be the head of Spain's foreign exchange control, so the fund is probably a dead duck. However, if all the other difficulties are ironed out, industry reps are expected to swallow the blocking of exchange, just as has been done in several other countries.

That long awaited CPA agreement, clarifying the restrictions on set construction, is still tied up in the agency's legal division where it is likely to remain for a long time. Not that it matters because the CPA regional office in L.A. long since notified the studios to go ahead on the basis of $15,000 per set.

Less publicized is the fact that several studios applied for and received permission for sets costing more than the $15,000 ceiling.

Recently completed War Department film, "The Atom Strikes," a 40-minute eye-witness account of the Hiroshima destruction, is described as "so vivid it is beyond horror" by government officials who have seen the pic. The Jesuit priest who was widely publicized for his on-the-scene account of the bombing, repeats his report in the pic. Pressure is being exerted to put the film on the 16m circuit.

Three new film patents were issued last month by Patent Office of the Department of Commerce. Interesting because they may have an effect on Hollywood.

Henry T. Neuman of New York got one for the treating of motion picture film. Don Heyer of L.A. took one out on an automatic film exhibitor. Finally, a camera film wind and shutter control mechanism patent was issued to Chester W. Crumine of Eastman Kodak.

William Wyatt, the National Housing Expeditor, will spend a few hours in Hollywood June 28 prior to his speech that night in L.A. He plans to visit at least one of the studios and will meet with industry leaders . . . The early buildup in the east on Jerry Brandt's "Music in the Air" is really stepping along. Fred Polangin, eastern promotion on this, has wound up a week's huddles with the National Association of Broadcasters who have promised full cooperation. Next sessions are with the network execs in New York . . . Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, was guest of honor at the Variety Clubs' annual Mother's Day luncheon here . . . Possibility of a city tax on D.C. theatres cannot be ruled out. A special tax study committee is looking over the field and is presently considering a municipal sales tax. Novel stunt at the recent convention of the American Pen Women's Club beat the drums for "Age of Innocence," Story Productions film based on Taylor Caldwell's book. A model dressed like Amalie, torrid heroine of the story, interpreted scenes from the novel. Besides the author, Stanley Kramer, Story Productions veepee, and Don Ettinger, the scripter, were present . . . New Commerce Department figures show that we shipped over 24,000,000 feet of 35m print stock and 6,371,000 feet of negative raw film to Mexico in 1945 . . . One of the "World in Action" series, it is built on the war crime trials in Germany and Japan.

TWO STUDIOS GET BLDG. GO-AHEAD, THEATRES NIXED

Two studios received go ahead signal from Civilian Production Administration for construction of improvement yesterday while two projected theatres were nixed.

Consolidated Studios and Nassour, Inc., was granted permission to complete film and television sound stage as nearly $150,000 of the $300,000 total had already been spent on the work before the March 26 freeze on non-essential building. Hal Roach Studios was given okay for $120,000 construction job, part of the reconversion program uncompleted by the Army when studio was returned to civilian film making.

Request of Southside Theatre, Inc., to erect $350,000 theatre and store building at Vermont and Imperial Highway, and Simon Lazarus' application to build a $75,000 drive-in at 20001 Ventura were denied.

HUGHES ATTY., ANTHONY IN VIDEO JIBES

mony. Albertson was somewhat assisted by Federal Communications Commission counsel who pushed inquiry into station's familiar stand on commentators, making for some hairline differentiations between news analysts and commentators, plus some squirming of KFI witnesses.

KFI'ers testified that Earle C. Anthony, Inc., had already spent $90,000 in television, and was prepared to spend $421,269 annually in tele operation. Present and proposed expenditures to effect operations would be estimated $504,651. Total capital and liabilities of firm was listed as $5,928,599.

FREEDOM GROUP APPEARS

Meeting was further highlighted with unanticipated appearance of rep of California Committee for Radio Freedom requesting hearing on group's objections to licensing of both KFI and KHJ-Don Lee interests. Over objections of counsel for stations, Harry M. Plotkin, presiding officer, admitted introduction of group's testimony and named tomorrow morning as time they would be heard. Assumption is that group is reviving action against KHJ for alleged blast of Fulton Lewis against Screen Office Employes Guild. Objection to KFI is probably same complaint generated by station's dismissal some time ago of all "commentators." Seymour Mandel appeared for Committee and stated others would return to air formal objections.

Programming and final responsibility for it took the lead again today, following testimony of Hughes' final witness, Perry King, program researcher. Jack Frye, TWA prexy, was unavailable though on list of Hughes' attorneys. Commish reps repeated their desire for breakdown of Hughes expenditures to date in television, again asked for Hughes' contracts and commitments with General Electric, and re-stated presence of Hughes was expected before hearings conclude.

JIBES AT HUGHES

Eugene Overton, general counsel and v-p; W. B. Ryan, g.m.; A. E. Hamilton, comptroller; Curtis Mason and H. L. Blatterman, co-chief engineers, and Don McNamara, program director were called, in addition to owner Anthony. Latter sparked proceedings with outspokenness, humorous statements, jibes at Hughes, and concluded on questioning anent analyst-commentator question, that "Kaltenborn is not bought and Sam Balter (among station dismissals) is!" He repeated he was referring to Balter's honesty when queried by Plotkin. Commish concluded pressing of commentator canker by demanding presentation of KFI's affiliate contract with National Broadcasting Co., to check status of Kaltenborn's time on KFI. Commish wanted to know if time of his program here is net optioned.

VIDEO FUTURE EYED

Ryan testified that he was net-conscious in regards to television, but Anthony's later testimony was that such events were a long way off. In another day of applicant trying to show why it was not actually telecasting and what specifically had otherwise been done in video, no-

ABC Plans $15,000,000 Stock for Expansion

Though ABC is presently scattered all over Hollywood, Woods said situation was to be remedied. Several locations have been selected but nothing closed, pending governmental green light on building. San Francisco, Detroit, Chicago, Washington and New York were listed as sites of FM stations. Net chairman of board and owner, Edward J. Noble, will ask public to come in for 50 per cent of refinancing via new stock issue. Money would be put right back into company, says Woods. As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Today we can erase the Iran issue off the list of international issues. Today Hussein Ala will report the Soviet troops left Iran on 6th May as promised. That will be very good news, not only because the Russian troops are out, but also because the United Nations has been successful in gaining compliance, even if belated, with a treaty, and in spite of Russian reaction against the bringing up of the case. That is an important indication of the power—even though now principally potential—of the United Nations. In this case, we have one opportunity to accentuate the positive, since generally our way of looking at the same problem, as at Paris, is as if we were not even looking at the same issue.

GRACIE FIELDS JUST WANTS REST AFTER 54-WEEK TOUR

Back from a 54-week tour of the world, doing both commercial and camp appearances, Gracie Fields' next engagement is a siesta date at her Santa Monica home. Anything else will have to wait. Cream in her coffee and bacon and eggs are more important for the next few weeks—unless an unusually attractive offer pops up to lure Miss Fields from her beach chair.

Miss Fields and her husband, Monty Banks, came back from the round-the-world junket with a hearty appreciation of the United States' commonplace luxuries and the contrasting condition of the rest of the world. They also came back with a new song from Italy, "Florentine Morning," being a literal translation of its title. English lyrics will be worked up for the number to be spotted in Miss Fields' repertoire.

Otherwise the trip, which started here May 7, 1945, and covered the Pacific, Asia, the Mediterranean and Europe, was the usual amount of work, averaging two appearances a day, both commercial and for the services.

Miss Fields and Banks both noted that there is a new crop of film makers arising in Italy and France, producers and directors working on short budgets but with progressive, creative brains that will bring reality to the screen instead of the usual fluffy commercial escapist entertainment.

There's a picture in the offing for Miss Fields, Bernard Shaw's "Mrs. Warren's Profession." Offer has been made to the singer to take the serious role but acceptance hinges on how the script shapes up. It would be produced in England by Gabriel Pascal, probably in the early fall.

LACK OF STAGES SLOWS INT PIX AT UNIVERSAL

Laying out International production schedule yesterday was developing into jigsaw puzzle jobs of fitting pictures into stage spaces limitations. Company has an eight-pictures-a-year deal with United World and, with six still to go, is finding some difficulty arranging for stage and power facilities on the Universal lot.

Universal currently has largest number of pictures in work on the lot of any time in past year. Production execs admit to something of a headache in trying to accommodate the full summer schedule of the various units, but say it is being worked out.

LACK OF SPACE

With completion of "Bella Donna" International will have two of its United World releases ready, having finished "The Dark Mirror" at the Goldwyn studios before moving over to Universal.

VIDEO HEARING

ticeable effort at discouraging any video connection between NBC-RCA was made. Net result was stronger showing for KFI than its predecessor in hearings. Day evolved into knock down between Frank Albertson, Hughes' attorney, as sole contestant seeking to weaken KFI's case for channel four (66 to 72 megacycles).

Albertson tried to drag out statements on quality of Don Lee and Television Productions (Paramount) experimental video efforts with which KFI has been associated at times. Comparisons with what others had done and what KFI planned were sought—but not answered by wary KFI reps. Albertson also went into lengthy querying on KFI standard AM radio operations in effort to prove equipment obsolete. He failed to prove his point and efforts to include what was regarded as irrelevant matters in transcript were overruled.

Ryan testified that informal discussion had been held with NBC relative to tele net affiliation. Though denying any such connection existed now, he added "one of our fondest hopes should be that such a fine relationship (as exists in radio, it's presumed) should not be broken up!" Plan now is for independent operation with hope for later expansion, he stated. NBC's rep, Charles Detmar, also pursued possibility of KFI relationship with net, which drew denial. Anthony's tele station would have separate manager and not himself, said Ryan, though he will generally supervise all radio activities. It was further testified that KFI had no film company for pictures to televise, latter being "extremely difficult to get together with on price."

When Albertson replied to Anthony that his client was Hughes, Anthony asked, "Do they know anything about radio?" That, refutations of all cost guessers with remark that, "Nobody knows what money is needed," and similar cracks enlivened day. He added he was prepared to match Hughes' estimated initial expenditure of $1,800,000. KFI studios will be separate from radio operation, and located at 10th and Hope Streets, it was brought out.

The story of the doodling knight, etc...

Sir Alexander Korda, a distinguished doodler, also makes motion pictures. His doodles, while not as widely circulated, are every bit as challenging as his movies. This latest production, thoughtfully worked out on a recent Paris-New York Constellation flight, features an outstanding cast including a remarkably dreary character in the lower left-hand corner.

A man on a recent coast-to-coast Constellation flight startled several people by saying, "I make more money than anybody." This turned out to be Al Jeffries whose Jeffries Banknote Company is currently printing bales of foreign $20 and $100 bills. So far they've made 167 million "pieces," as they say in the trade, and they've been ordered to keep the presses rolling until the expressly unnamed government calls a halt. Jeffries got the order because he owns one of twelve existing geometric lathes (machines responsible for the complicated curlicues on paper money). The Treasury Department owns two of six in the U.S. and the rest are scattered around Europe. Literally.

Barbara Sutro is probably the only well-known New York photographer whose grandfather's cousin drained the inside of a mountain. The man was Adolph Sutro, the time was about 1875 and the place was the Comstock Lode in Nevada. Adolph saved a number of flooded mines by digging a four-mile tunnel to reach under them and drain the water. What he did with part of the money he made can be seen today in Sutro Gardens in San Francisco. He bought up tons of statuary and had it shipped around the Horn. Which brings us back to Barbara, a Constellation passenger on Flight 3 from New York to Los Angeles—easily the fastest and silkiest way in history to by-pass the Horn.

Mrs. Carveth Wells and her talking mynah bird, Raffles, went to considerable lengths the other day to get aboard an eastbound Constellation in Los Angeles. The bird hates altitude, just like people, and in ordinary planes he cracks his ears by yawning. Mrs. Wells wanted Raffles to take a whirl at the Normalair cabin, which keeps pressures at a relatively normal altitude. The airline was sorry, but birds and beasts aren't allowed on the Constellation. When Raffles found this out, his language, according to Mrs. Wells, was something fierce.

The air age has come to Carmen Miranda, or maybe it's the other way around. Ten days ago, on Hollywood-bound Flight 3, she let loose with a commercial—said she wouldn't go back home to her native Rio de Janeiro (it's been six years now) until she gets a Constellation to ride in. The accompanying photograph is offered as proof that six years in the United States haven't done her appreciable harm.

Cruising regularly coast-to-coast and overseas, Lockheed Constellations offer these and other interesting people greater speed, comfort and safety. Make reservations through a travel agent or one of the Constellation airlines.

PRIVATE FUNERAL RITES PLANNED FOR MRS. NIVEN

Private funeral services to be followed by cremation and possible interment in England were being planned last night for Mrs. David Niven, 28-year-old wife of the actor, who died Monday night from injuries sustained in a fall Sunday at the home of Tyrone Powers. She passed away at St. John's hospital, where she was taken immediately following the accident. Cause of the death was officially given as laceration of the brain.

The tragedy occurred during a game of charades. Mrs. Niven opened a door she believed was a clothes closet but which opened directly to a 20-foot stairway to the basement. The fatal injuries were sustained when she plunged to the basement floor.

The former Primula Rollo, she met her actor-husband during the war and they were married in England, August 15, 1940. She arrived from London two months ago to join her husband here. Surviving, besides her husband, are two sons, David J., 3, and James Graham, six months old.

20th Drops Option On Hurok Memoirs

New York, May 21.—20th-Fox has not renewed its option on rights to Sol Hurok's memoirs because of dissatisfaction on both sides with the ballet king's biog script. It is reported also that Darryl F. Zanuck doubted the film's box office value.

The Loafer

Harry Harvey can look forward to another busy year at RKO . . . that is, if the one for which he was optioned is like the past one. Actor, who just completed one year at the Gower lot, appeared in 52 films in the 52 weeks. Question is whether he managed to hold down any outside jobs during the initial stretch.

CIRCUIT SUED ON FAKE PCT. DEAL

New York, May 21.—Percentage fraud suits have been filed in Federal Court, Southern District of Ohio, against George Manos, the Manos Amusement Co., Inc., and Roxy Amusement Co., operators of a circuit of 12 theatres in Ohio, by eight major film companies. Complaint charges the defendants with furnishing falsified box office reports on percentage pictures in order to pay lesser amounts and secure reduced rentals. Distributors ask damage in the amount due, punitive damages and an injunction against tampering with books.

CAB Moves To Drop Crossley Rating Setup

New York, May 21.—Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting has finally decided to call it quits, so far as Crossley rating service is concerned. CAB board has already moved to negotiations whereby C. E. Hooper will take over, possibly within next month or two, with CAB to set up research standards. Pull out was agreed at meeting last Thursday.

and had been associated with Joseph M. Schenck for 34 years. He was born in Philadelphia and previous to coming to Hollywood in 1917 had been a Broadway actor and top rank vaudeville performer. His Broadway career included appearances in various musical comedies, best known of which was "The Gay Hussars."

ARBUCKLE PRODUCER

Anger gave up acting in 1916 to associate himself with Schenck, then pioneering motion pictures. He was sent out here in 1917 to produce the Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle comedies. Besides Arbuckle he is credited with developing several comedy stars, among them Buster Keaton and Al St. John.

He was president and general manager of the Buster Keaton Comedies and in 1920 became general manager and vice president of the Schenck organization.

Aside from the motion picture business he engaged in various activities and was known to old timers in Hollywood and Los Angeles as the man who put the Vernon Ball Club on the map and brought showmanship to local baseball. He was president of the Vernon club the year it won the Coast championship and then went east to defeat St. Paul in the "Little World Series."

THEATRE BUILDER

Anger also built the United Artists Broadway and Wilshire boulevard theatres, the Talmadge Apartments, the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel and was a leading figure in the development of the Agua Caliente resort and race track.

He was the first Hollywood motion picture leader to interest Mexico City interests in film production and was a close friend of Miguel Aleman, Mexico picture magnate.

Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Sophye Bernard Anger, former musical comedy star. The funeral will be held tomorrow at noon in the Wee Kirk of the Heather chapel at Forest Lawn.

George, who was recently released from duty with the Navy as a lieutenant, served in the Office of the Secretary of the Navy as head of distribution and promotion of the Navy's Industrial Incentive Film program. Prior to joining the service, he was a theatre exhibitor and was with 20th-Fox in a public relations capacity.

SEEK WINCHELL 6-WEEK SUB

Decision on summer-vacation replacement for Walter Winchell on Jergens program on ABC probably will be made early next week. Mann Holiner, Lennen & Mitchell agency veepee in charge of radio, is due back from NY Sunday and will huddle with Winchell, who currently is here. It is pretty likely series of guest spielers, on one-shot apiece basis, will span the commentator's layoff.

Winchell will take six weeks off ozone, two more than last season or normally. He fades off with July 14 broadcast and will return on Sept. 1.

Mr. Darryl Zanuck
Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.
Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dear Darryl:

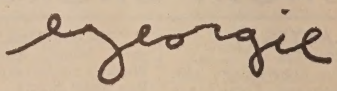
THE DARK CORNER got great notices here and I look for it to be tremendous all over the country, particularly as the gals get higher and higher on Mark Stevens.

The pre-opening campaign of DO YOU LOVE ME gives every evidence that the picture will roll up a tremendous gross. Please tell this to Messrs. Ratoff and Engel.

As for my personal appearance at the Roxy, I am enclosing a few quotes, not because the ham still predominates in me, but just to get me a little bit more respect in our dining room.

I will fly back immediately after my last show at the Roxy. No doubt they will still be applauding long after my plane has left.

Affectionately,



George Jessel.

"Jessel is one of the few remaining greats."

"Jessel at the Roxy has the carriage trade coming. He did a forty minute talk about everything from animal crackers to Zanuck. Georgie runs the gamut in this farewell performance. He talks like a Lindy waiter for one gag and a Harvard professor for another. He sings like a cantor in a synagogue and then like a Jolson in a theatre. Don't quit for good, kid, you're too great."
. . . Jimmy Cannon, N.Y. POST

"No entertainer but Al Jolson was ever as good as Georgie Jessel is. At the Roxy he held seven thousand people in the palm of his hand the other night and you felt like you were in a parlor."
. . . Barry Gray, WOR, MUTUAL NETWORK

"Georgie Jessel says this is his Farewell Performance at the Roxy. We hope he's just kidding. After he had them screaming with gags about himself and almost everyone we know from F.D.R. to Zanuck, he then sang the Kol Nidre from 'The Jazz Singer' and made the older folks cry."

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

METRO is confronted with nice selling problem for its latest Lassie picture, variously previewed under tags of both "Blue Sierra" and "Courage of Lassie." Picture, which originally started out as "Hold High the Torch," and which had publicity campaign with this title throughout its production and for 18 months to two years following its completion, was retitled "Blue Sierra" couple of months ago, and night it was previewed bore this designation. Late following day, film's tag was changed again, to "Courage of Lassie," but studio was not able to catch number of previews, which went into print carrying "Sierra" title. Exhibs now are bound to be confused through having seen both titles on previews in trades, particularly when picture was first sold to them as "Torch."

QUITE a gathering cutting in, through participation deals, on Warner Bros. "Life with Father." Playwrights Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse will get 35 per cent of the net take. Understood that Irene Dunne, who co-stars with William Powell, is also in for a slice of the profits along with director Michael Curtiz. Picture is Curtiz's last directoral chore on old contract, which does not call for such an arrangement. Early in February Curtiz was signed to a producer-director term ticket, providing for one of the biggest participation deals in studio's history. Under new contract Curtiz makes two films annually with a 35 per cent take of the profits. Indications are that a separate deal was made permitting Curtiz to participate in profits of "Father."

THE system of set construction like the fabrication of houses has not been modernized in years, according to Loren L. Ryder of Paramount. He believes the theatrical biz needs a completely new expendable material for set construction, as for example, a material which may be put together in a manner similar to carton construction and abandoned after picture shooting. The industry currently needs fast-drying paints, especially paints with high gloss that can be sprayed on floors between takes so as to retain the mirror-like, flawless effect which is so spectacular in reviews and dance numbers. Other innovations the industry could use are new carryalls for set handling and cranes or elevators for overhead rigging.

ALTHOUGH 20th-Fox is sending the entire cast and crew of "13 Rue Madeleine" by air to eastern locations where the picture will be filmed, the luggage and equipment must be shipped in a railroad baggage car. So much depends on this car arriving at its destination on time, that the studio transportation department has decided to route it through Canada, in order to avoid any possibility of its being held up by threatened railroad strike or coal shortages. The baggage car will re-enter the United States in northern Vermont from where the equipment can easily be trucked to Boston, where approximately half of the picture will be made.

PLENTY of shudders sprinting up and down spines of Coast songpluggers this week, due to reports hitting here of tune-touts being fired in wholesale lots in NY. Foote, Cone & Belding, agency handling account, is now making an effort to grab off a more choice time segment for the ork. It is believed the spotting of the dramatizations isn't ideal time of day to present what essentially is dance music.

COMPLAINTS of New York drama critics that the Old Vic dialogue is too tough for American comprehension are accenting the difficulties facing British film production in the United States. If sophisticated critics can't understand the Britishers, how about the masses? J. Arthur Rank, cognizant of the obstacle, is experimenting for some solution that won't hurt the standards for British audiences.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

By now we should be used to crises. Today is another one of those days—for coal and for the railroads. If the men refuse to work, and we have a shutdown in both, the people of the United States will begin to realize what it's like in the war-battered countries. That will be true if our factories begin to shut down one after another and millions lose their jobs, and if food supplies also are affected. But one of the great tragedies will be that we shall thus be unable to carry out our obligations to those needy overseas. Harold Stassen made capital of the situation when he said that the administration men who have to do with the industrial situation have failed and should all be dismissed—Wallace, Bowles and Schwellenbach. The Stassen statement can be looked at several ways. Many will say: "Stassen is right. He's a good man." Others will declare: "What would Stassen do? It's easy to find fault, especially when you're in the bleachers, and not in the game." And still others: "If this be politics, Harold will make the most of it. I've been afraid Harold could not break through the Old Guard, but now I have hopes."

From distant states the tourists come to town
And prowl the boulevard in hope to see
A male or female star of wide renown
To tell the folks back home in Kankakee.

To ease the eager craving of his mind
His idol in yon clubhouse gazes far
Upon a longshot seven lengths behind.

Once upon a time Hollywood stars hung around Hollywood boulevard and the legend still persists among the tourist trade. Ladies and gents from Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Puget Sound register disappointment when they don't see Clark Gable and Hedy Lamarr necking in front of the Daily Variety office. The only time they can see a star on Hollywood is when it becomes Santa Claus Lane, and Santa Claus plays a bit role.

16MS GET MORE COIN THAN 35MS

New York, May 22.—Under recent sales policy, Loew's International is getting 10 per cent higher rentals for 16m than the 35m version of the same film, according to Seymour R. Mayer, chief of 16m entertainment sales. He also announced the institution of a checking system and the package form of selling 16m films, including features and shorts, for a 50-minute program. Rentals hike was instituted because lower operating costs for the narrow-gauge exhibitors makes possible the same profit as exhibs screening 35m.

Don Lee Puts Tele Case On Demonstration Basis

Don Lee and National Broadcasting Co. showed rather than talked their cases for licenses at television hearings yesterday, with graphic exhibits of current video efforts and active backgrounds. Pair demonstrated where predecessors guessed and theorized. In consequence, there was less aimless talk and examination. Portions of three cases, including all of Don Lee's, tail end of KFI's, and opening gun of NBC's were heard. It was a record day in which multi-million dollar and show business aspects of telecasting were highlighted by John F. Royal, NBC v-p in charge of television.

"There's too much radio thinking in television," said Royal, "and the difference between the two is marked." The importance of lighting, makeup, costuming, commercial sponsorship and, most important, sources of suitable material, are not being sufficiently regarded nor can they be over stressed, he said. Foregoing was offered during brief closing session afforded NBC. Vet showman commanded rapt audience of industry leaders and others interested in video. He resumes this morning at 9:30 after hearings were concluded on request of Federal Communications Commission rep committed to previous business.

HUGHES INTERESTS JAB

Hughes interests got their last needling into KFI on opening of session. Frank Albertson, attorney, attempted to discredit KFI witness, G. W. Curran, engineer, via admissions of lack of knowledge of FCC's minimum requirements and other standards of good engineering practice.

Don Lee was repped by Lewis Allen Weiss, chief executive officer of net, and Harry Lubcke, television director and engineer.

He stated net's assets and liabilities as being $2,302,153, that Lee had already invested $376,973, minus overhead, in television, and was prepared to spend minimum of $172,084 in its first year of commercially operating 28 hours weekly. Present investment, planned expenditures for year, etc., if license is granted, would run figure well over million mark. It's conservatively estimated now at $985,564. To date Lee has locally telecasted some 7000 hours, it was brought out. Net seeks an "effective" 18 kilowatt outlet and would remain in channel number two (54-60 megacycles) it's now using experimentally.

Audience preferences run to remote pickup of events, according to Lee survey and reaction studies. So, Lee video station would probably concentrate on such subject matter, until economic differentials between the theatre, film industry, radio and tele can be adjusted. The animated type of show, sports, demonstrations, etc., rank over talky type shows. But whatever the presentation it must be showmanly, says Weiss.

Lee will spend its first year's commercial take in improvements, and cannot now see where more than 10 per cent of costs will be absorbed by commercial activities, according to Weiss, who sees sponsors as a very remote entry upon video scene. He envisions a network operation, at least between here and San Francisco, would draw upon Don Lee's automotive (Cadillac) agency affiliate if support is needed, and would commercialize no more than 60 to 70 per cent of programming. Testimony brought out that Don Lee Estate totals 10 to 12 million dollars.

Television demands a new school of writing, said John Royal, in his testimony. Date at which one-shot telecasting will burn up material is something to be well-considered—and acted upon.

EAST EXPERIENCE TOLD

To date Radio Corp. of America, NBC's parent, has spent $11,000,000 in television, not including $3,000,000 spent by NBC itself, it was testified. He pointed up the threat of syndicate-minded promoters now seeking to tie up and heftily price-tag events, particularly sports, that are vital to video, and despite apathy of promoters, television, as demonstrated in East, has helped sports at the box office, in addition to lump sum tele rights.

Royal strongly espoused networking of television. Without nets television cannot exist, he opined. Such syndication would help reduce staggering costs. Network operations in video will assure great things since only networks may afford to buy one-shot bests. For everyone to get truly great things in television at low cost, the net is essential.

3-Hue Cinecolor Features Near; Majors Eye Shorts

Cinecolor has developed its three-color process to point where company is talking with number of major studios regarding its use for short subjects. Development has not yet reached stage where it would be feasible for features, but this is expected within the next six to nine months.

Three-color process already is utilized by Paramount in filming of its "Popeye the Sailor" cartoons, as well as other cartoons. Company, too, has used process successfully for production of commercial films for number of national business organizations, including such concerns as Ford and Dr. Pepper.

Experiments in this three-color filming is expected to gain momentum as soon as new equipment is installed in September. Impetus, too, will be given company's present two-color business, which is being used widely by majors and smaller studios alike in filming of features. Plant now is geared to capacity in turning out features in two colors, but with arrival of equipment orders can be doubled. Such studios as Metro have indicated their intention of making more features in Cinecolor, and company reports it is besieged almost daily with requests for commitments.

Charges, counter-charges and statements of other public figures breaking into the act, hypoed the headline grabbing.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: Half the actresses in town are crazy to play Kate, the American girl in "Arch of Triumph," with Katharine Hepburn, Joan Crawford and Gail Patrick supposedly under consideration. Ingrid Bergman has the lead, but it's the kind of role, combining an understated tragedy and courage, that could steal the picture . . . Second honeymoon plans made by Michele Morgan and Bill Marshall were canceled by immediate film commitments. They also have plans to make two pictures together, one in London, one in Paris . . . Over the ocean: Julien Duvivier is winding up his film "Panic" in Switzerland. Simone Simon and Danielle Darrieux are working in two other pictures being made on Swiss soil. Paris is temporarily blacked out as a film center, and most of the French producers have crossed the boundary line into Switzerland . . . Melvyn Douglas plans to divide his time between Broadway and Hollywood in the future. His first stage production "Call Me Mister" was a click. He came to Hollywood to play one of the leads in Metro's "Sea of Grass" . . . Louella Parsons is doing fine and will leave the hospital in about two weeks. She'll take as long a rest as her family and friends can devise before returning to her columning . . . The Los Angeles Daily News will soon publish a Saturday feature supplement. May have to wait for the paper shortage to ease.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Termed "Operation Hayseed" by the studio, RKO's "Katie for Congress" has ventured into the wilds of Petaluma. Company took over a motel for night shooting—easy with the innuendoes, Buster—and converted the office into a cocktail lounge for several scenes. Floods and spots were blazing outside as the players, including Loretta Young, took their places. Just then a local yokel pulled up in his Stanley Steamer and burbled: "Boy, what an opening! Klieg lights and Hollywood stars!" He loped in and said, "Gimme a beer" . . . Life of easel: Stephen Longstreet, who is also author and screenwriter, sold 21 of his paintings at a recent exhibition . . . Konstantin Simonov, the Russian war correspondent and novelist, and Viveca Lindfors, recently imported from Sweden, were shown around "Life with Father" set yesterday by Hungarian-born Mike Curtiz. "And I was born in West Middlesex, Pennsylvania," said William Powell wistfully . . . Horses and highballs dept.: Marjorie and Jack Reynolds with Mrs. Ann Costello; the John Hotys with Billy De Wolfe and Amy Arnell; Virginia Welles with Mrs. Eddie Bracken and her parents, sharing boxes at Hollywood Park. Add Chagin celebrators: Milt Holmes, who had $10 on his beautiful nose. Announcer Rod O'Connor tossed a party for the Red Skelton show. At the Bevhells Club: the Ken Carpenters and Carlton Morses, Hal Peary and Sidney Strotz. At The Kings: Paul Muni, Errol Flynn, Eddie Cantor, Ann Blyth, Joan Davis.

CALL SHEET: ANTHONY QUINN was eligible for a fur-lined Oscar yes-terday on the windup of "Sinbad the Sailor" at RKO. He was the only one of 482 males appearing in the picture to grow his own beard. The rest relied on makeup-men. MAUREEN O'HARA marked the end of "Sinbad" by giving girls who worked on the film perfume and the men gold necktie pins . . . JAMES WONG HOWE revival week, you might call it. Four of the films he photographed are now showing around town, "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Tom Sawyer" at the Laurel, and "North Star" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy" at other L.A. houses . . . HARRY JAMES will enter eight of the horses from his stable at Hollywood Park this season . . . EVA PERLBERG, secretary to Lew Schreiber, 20th-Fox casting director, is marrying Ernest Cohen, wholesale jeweler, in June . . . JACK CARSON went to the Hollywood police station to report the theft of his topcoat and other belongings, and was talked into appearing two nights at the Police Show . . . HARRY SUGARMAN is tossing a dinner party for 14 vets from Birmingham hospital at Beverly Tropics. Anne Sterling, Jane Greer, Myrna Dell, Anne Jeffreys and several other starlets will be their dinner companions . . . MARY DUBLIN, Cleveland sesquicentennial queen, is in Hollywood for a week, and visited Bob Hope, a hometown boy, on the set of "Where There's Life" . . . WILLIAM GARGAN'S Siamese cat, Benedictine the Seventh, won a couple of first prizes in SF shows last week.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: For three years Monte Montana has tried to teach Michael O'Shea how to make like a cowboy—ever since the New York actor came out here and became fascinated with roping and riding. Now the tables are turned. O'Shea is trying to instruct Montana to make like a radio actor for their appearance this Sunday on the KNX oat opera "Riders of the Purple Sage" . . . An RKO flack, chuckling fatuously at his own wit, phoned that "Jane Greer has been receiving a pair of nylons daily for the past five days from an anonymous admirer," and added in sober truth, "Of course, this would be a better item if she had five legs." Or if your first name were Jesse, Mr. James . . . Wallace Beery, who has as much use for a tuxedo as a camel has for a spitoon, will go formal Saturday night for his daughter Carol Ann's piano recital at the Bevhills hotel . . . Margo and Eddie Albert planed in yesterday from their belated honeymoon in Mexico City. He was introduced to her 86 relatives while there . . . Frederic March looked through the record books and found that "Best Years of Our Lives" is his 50th picture since coming to Hollywood in 1929 for—not as—"The Dummy" . . . Curtis Bernhardt and his fortunate co-workers will shoot a considerable part of "The Secret" near Lake Arrowhead . . . Maxie Rosenbloom, sharpening his wit in Boston, writes that he saw a man beating his wife and before the cops arrived the Mexican League had signed him.——D.D.T.

REP MEET ENDS; WILL DOUBLE AD SPENDING

Republic's three-day western regional confab concluded yesterday, with Herbert J. Yates tossing dinner for delegates at Eaton's Rancho and company chief heading party of high company execs who left late last night aboard Stratoliner for Chicago. Mid-West regional meet will start tomorrow at Blackstone Hotel in Windy City and last through Sunday.

Accompanying Yates east were James R. Grainger, sales chief; Edward L. Walton, assistant sales manager; Allen Wilson, head of studio production; William Saal, aide to Yates, and William Elliott and Allan Lane, western stars.

At yesterday's final session, presided over by Walton, further discussions were held on subject of higher film rentals, Yates having indicated such a move the day before.

It was also brought out that company plans to double its expenditure in newspaper advertising during forthcoming year. Yates pointed out that number of high-budget films either in production, planned or ready for release necessitated vastly increased spending for advertising.

At cocktail party and dinner last night for western sales reps, most of studio player roster turned out to welcome guests, who return to their cities today.

LEVER DROPS 'BIG SISTER' TO PROCTER

New York, May 22.—Lever Bros. is rapidly retreating out of radio in the wake of fat shortages. "Big Sister," one of its brace of CBS daytime strip shows, is being dropped, which represents $800,000 retrenchment in time and talent costs.

Within few hours after Lever let go, Procter & Gamble bought "Sister," also getting the CBS time. Despite fact firm won't show profit on soaps until 1948, P & G will broadcast more widely next autumn than ever, retaining top billings of $17,000,000 in talent and time. Expansion is predicated on feeling that to surrender choice web time-franchises would be mistake in view of inevitable change in situation as regards soap scarcity.

Lever Bros. will drop the Bob Burns NBC show and had planned to abandon the top-budgeted Joan Davis program, but instead will keep layout, which airs over less expensive CBS hookup.

Another calling quits is Lewis Howe Co. (Tums), which is dropping "Amazing Mrs. Danbury" Sunday night CBS show, which has been costing $550,000 yearly, exclusive of talent and production costs.

Dunninger Skedded On "Andy" Program

Dunninger yesterday definitely was set to broadcast the four weeks in June for Amos 'n' Andy, commencing June 4. Mentalist will air from NY, and following his bow-off, the Lever Bros.' NBC show will stay off air for 13 weeks. Ruthrauff & Ryan agency, however, insists A & A will return next season, despite repeated rumors that soap account will fade.

Name 'Jenny' Stars

Walter Brennan will star in Republic's "Heaven for Jenny," slated as Allen Dwan production to follow his "Calendar Girl." Understood Gail Patrick and William Marshall also are set for top featured roles.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By RALPH EDWARDS
(Hitchhiking for Jack Hellman)

Just before Jack left on his trip he suggested that . . . being what might be termed the granddaddy of audience participation shows . . . I could trace the history of such shows and predict what might happen to them in the future.

Until Truth or Consequences came along all the shows with audience participation had been quiz shows. Truth or Consequences took the question-and-answer phase out of audience shows and injected the stunt (or penalty) element. However, it has taken six years for the critics (are you sure you're in New York, Hellman?) to distinguish between the two types of shows. Only in the last trade paper polls have they distinguished stunt shows from quiz shows.

So, it is really the development of stunt shows that we're talking about. Quiz shows, with the old fashioned spelling bees, true or false, and out-and-out question and answer formats, are as old as radio itself. And tracing the development of stunt shows is to trace the development of Truth or Consequences.

For the first two years we had the field to ourselves. In those two years we tried out every type of act. I don't believe I have ever heard an act on any of the numerous stunt shows today that we had not in some way touched upon in those first two years of Truth or Consequences.

One of the types of acts done in that period is what we call the "Good Gesture." This is the Cinderella act . . . giving a deserving contestant the moon. The influence of this type of act is felt in 3 shows which hit the airways in 1944.

EARLY in the history of Truth or Consequences we proved the value of a telephone in radio. In 1942 the networks blossomed out with a participation show built entirely on the gimmick.

In 1940 Truth or Consequences sent a man around New York looking for certain prizes—a lady's garter, a cake of ice, a left-handed monkey wrench, etc. Not long after, a "Treasure Hunt" type of participation show met with a certain amount of success, but for the most part, this phase of audience participation development has not gone very far.

One of the earliest and perhaps the strongest types of consequence is what we call the "Frame consequence." There are at least a dozen types of "Frames" but the strongest is probably that which takes a contestant out of the studio on some specific errand which leads him into so many traps or pitfalls before he is finished that he usually wishes he had stayed home. This form of participation joke was given full format in a well produced program which hit the networks in 1942.

The real and most prolific contribution of Truth or Consequences to the stunt field—is out and out party prank itself. Truth or Consequences proved you can throw a pie, squirt a seltzer, have the wife select her husband's bald head from a field of three sparsely tufted domes, or give a cow, an elephant, a camel, a flock of sheep and many another animal its day in radio. All these props had their hey-day on Truth or Consequences in the first two years of our show. We have left most of these stunts to some 12 of the 33 audience participation shows on the networks.

We knew we could not have the field all to ourselves forever. We did believe however that when the frontier in stunt shows was developed that the new settlers would come along with fresher material. I honestly feel there are too many participation shows living off old Truth or Consequences stunts. If the producers of these shows really accept the "Frontier spirit" of this new field of radio humor they can bring a freshness and at the same time a dignity to a field of humor that without proper handling can well become stale and undignified.

THERE is one firm rule I believe those of us in the audience participation game—producer and emcee—must strictly adhere to. That is not to make the air listener a step-sister to the stunt. VARIETY in its first review of truth or Consequences was amazed to find how "oral" our type of show could be made. To accomplish this we never "narrate" an act. If there has to be a running commentary of what is going on, the air audience is then getting it second best. I heard one program the other afternoon in which a married couple was putting wall paper on a wall. The emcee—a darned good one, by the way—was explaining with great vigor what was going on as the studio audience died laughing and the air audience felt like the poor step-sister. Until television comes in let's don't forget we are putting on a radio show.

Now what about the future? I believe our type of show can emerge the greatest single factor—if you feel like carrying a banner, and I do—in the national problems that are now facing us—those problems that will always be a part of a thriving country's make up. We have the front parlor humor. The warm, robust humor that is real America. Without being preachers, we can inject those bits of front parlor philosophies that will help our listeners. In stunt form we can laugh at a lady saving used fat and sock home the message at the same time. We can make a prank out of the serious business of food shortage and leave the message we want in the listeners' minds. We don't have to make the returning veteran feel we are opening up the horn of plenty to him but we can steer him toward it, in proper rehabilitation stunts. All this can be done without jeopardizing our first duty—to entertain. Stunt shows for the first time have brought into play the listener's imagination—the third dimension of radio. Let's take advantage of this broader target and hit our aduience with showmanship acts that will take the adolescent qualities out of stunt shows and make them emerge a true radio representation of the humor that is real America.

Ad Agencies Trimming Down on Personnel

New York, May 22.—Ad agencies and networks are commencing to apply axes to personnel following wave of recent commercial cancellations. On the occasion of its Silver Anniversary Columbia acknowledges with deep appreciation the contributions of those who were responsible for the growth and progress of our company during its early and formative years. The majority of them are still with the company, a service record that is unique in this or any other business.

To them, and to the others who have joined our studio staff more recently, I wish to express the thanks of Columbia Pictures for their loyalty and support.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. AUGUSTUS W. BENNET

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, February 18, 1946

Mr. BENNET of New York. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following letter:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 18, 1946.

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORP.,
New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: When I was a small boy I remember very well being taken to see the early moving pictures which were then regarded as more or less of a toy.

Still later, when my father was in Congress, I was privileged to attend some of the earliest performances where pictures and sound were combined usually with very weird results.

Through subsequent years I have watched the progress of this infant industry to the point where it has become an industrial and business giant contributing mightily to our country's prosperity and providing countless jobs for skilled Americans.

This progress is a tribute to the perseverance of the early pioneers such as Harry Cohn and Jack Cohn, heads of Columbia Pictures, who overcame great odds, and to the vision, energy, and business judgment of their successors.

It is hard to imagine what our communities would be like today without the motion picture and it's almost equally hard to see how great projects of public education, campaigns for charity, and similar efforts on a national scale could succeed without the help so generously and cheerfully given by the motion picture companies such as Columbia Pictures and the others, and the people who work for them in various ways.

I wish for Columbia Pictures Corp., an outstanding member of this great family, in the year of its twenty-fifth anniversary of progress, continued and even greater success.

Sincerely yours,

A. W. BENNET.

INDUSTRY GIVEN PRICE'S NOD ON FOREIGN FILMS

"Production and distribution matters connected with foreign films are a responsibility of the industry itself, not of a government agency," Byron Price, vice president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said yesterday in a meeting with members of the Hollywood Foreign Correspondents Association.

Price said that Hollywood producers are aware of their responsibility to see that their product shown both here and abroad tends toward increased international understanding.

"Freedom of the screen is analogous to freedom of the press and radio," he said. "As with the press and radio this freedom is limited to all expression that is not libelous, indecent, or harmful to others. It carries the responsibility, too, of making sure that films produced for foreign showings are accurate representations of American democratic living. Motion pictures are an effective means of spreading information — information that will not offend the sensibilities of foreign audiences with propaganda, or attempts to impose American beliefs upon them."

FORUM

Editor, Daily Variety:

I often have an opportunity to see return runs of the better films here in San Jose, but am occasionally disappointed with the quality of the prints used. It seems that producers completely forget a picture after it has made the first and second runs and allow the exchanges to distribute prints that have practically all the ills to which celluloid is subject. Of course, the returns on the latter runs are comparatively low, but the few thousand dollars needed for new film ought to be worth while for at least the better pictures.

"G. I. Joe" and "Double Indemnity," among others, played here in "butchered" form. I can still remember the tense scenes between MacMurray and Stanwyck being interrupted by jumps on the screen and loud clicks from the sound track. At one point a word in MacMurray's voice was heard when Stanwyck was seen speaking!

Very truly yours,

PARE LORENTZ HAS PLAN TO USE GI LENSERS

Washington, May 22. — Use of hundreds of GI's trained in motion picture photography during the war should be made to produce documentaries about the country for exhibition here and abroad, Pare Lorentz said here today.

Documentary producer, recently mustered out of Army Air Force after two and one-half years service, told Government film workers there was considerable need for regional fact films. He pointed to fact there is now a reserve of skilled craftsmen to handle the job.

Lorentz, who is doing some film work for Department of the Interior, plans to establish his own documentary film company when he completes the chore. He declared Hollywood and the Government are not big enough to do the documentary job needed and suggested that work be done by many small companies situated in various parts of the country. Producer predicted such companies could pay their own way.

Set Building Quints

Warners has quintet of carpenters who can attest to the amount of building it takes to keep a studio in production. During 20 or more years they've been hammer-and-sawing, they've had a hand in constructing over 36,000 sets. Carpentering vets are William Echman, Irvin H. Ford, Clifford Foulger, Arthur B. Jenkins and I. B. H. Nyby.

FIRST RUNS DROP 20G IN STRIKE

First run film business tumbled estimated $20,000 last night as complete tie-up of public transportation kept theatregoers at home. Downtown streets were virtually deserted during evening hours. Plenty of auto traffic featured both Wilshire and Hollywood boulevards, but pedestrian traffic was extremely light. With the weekend and new film bills in majority of theatres, exhibitors look for slight pickup, but trade is expected to remain way under normal. Neighborhood theatres, however, reported their business on the increase.

Einfeld Returns Heavy With Release Bids for Enterprise

New York, May 23.—Charles Einfeld and Joe Rosenberg planed out of here today for Hollywood. Latter, a Bank of America vice-president, was here on biz that included possibility of Enterprise Productions releasing tieup. Einfeld is taking with him number of distribution propositions for Enterprise. They will be discussed by the company group in Hollywood. According to Einfeld the company has deals for distribution from all companies but "Metro and Paramount." Possibilities of tieups are hottest with Universal and Columbia.

Harry Cohn, Columbia prexy, who sat in on negotiations with Enterprise execs, left for Hollywood today after five-day stay. With Cohn on the plane are Milton Pickman of his New York office and Doris Fisher, who writes songs at the studio.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

RCA-VICTOR album of Cole Porter ditties, made two months ago by David Rose, shortly will be issued and tied in with Warners' "Night and Day," the Cole Porter biog film. Into each album will be inserted a four-page piece devoted to 20th anni of sound pix, plus a fan of stills from picture. This isn't first time such a tie in has been made, nor even first time RCA has issued an album of Porter tunes in book tagged "Night and Day." Thing was issued last winter, with Allan Jones doing the ditties vocally, minus, however, direct Warners tie-in. Meanwhile, there still seems to be some hesitancy on part of discery anent release of album of Irving Berlin tunes, tied in with Paramount's "Blue Skies." Item was prepped six months ago, with Dinah Shore chirping. Shortly after, Miss Shore quit Victor in a huff and transferred her tonsils to Columbia, arch rival. After her exit Victor ceased plugging her platters which still remained in stock.

NEW apparatus that synchronizes sound, dialogue and action tracks and makes possible the editing of a film while being projected on a full-size screen has been perfected by Robert Hansard, chief projectionist, and James Stewart, chief engineer, for David O. Selznick. The machine takes the place of the small projector, tiny screen and separate sound projector now in use. Film can be stopped at any time and sequence re-run, synchronized with the three sound tracks. Film editor operates the machine simply by pressing buttons. One advantage claimed for reversible projection machine is that it can hold a frame of nitrate film for at least 15 seconds and acetate film indefinitely. It is estimated that use of the machine cut the time of editing "Duel in the Sun" by at least one-third.

BOTH Walter Wanger and Paramount have slated pictures based on the life of the same person, Mrs. John Fremont. Wanger has "So Gallantly Gleaming," an original by Peter Ordway, and Paramount chunked out some heavy coin for Irving Stone's "Immortal Wife." Both yarns are biogs on the wife of the California pioneer. It was learned yesterday that Wanger intends to beat Paramount to the starting gate. Script was finished yesterday by Sonya Levien and it's understood that producer is negotiating with 20th-Fox on loan-out deal for Dana Andrews to co-star with Susan Hayward. Wanger wants to get going in early September.

DON Ameche will cut two experimental records in mid-June, which will be shipped to Cincinnati for Drene Shampoo execs to spin and decide what type of program they want next season. One will be a variety show rigged around Ameche, the other a situation-comedy. Ameche recently was signed by advertiser to replace the Rudy Vallee layout which fades off NBC with June 27 broadcast. Starting date for Ameche isn't definite, but probably will be Aug. 29 in same network niche. The programs being submitted as samples to Drene are being prepared by Jim Wright, veepee and Coast chief of Kastor, Farrell, Chesley & Clifford ad agency.

LONGEST dialog takes on record are currently being filmed by Robert Montgomery for Metro's "Lady in the Lake." Every scene in the production runs from three to eight minutes in length, due to the unusual directorial treatment. Each of the estimated 120 scenes in the film cover from four to seven pages of script. Scene filmed yesterday, covering seven pages of script, will run slightly better than eight minutes.

TRADE is chuckling over trade newshawk who sought pre-hearing quote from National Broadcasting Co., on what it thought of its local outlet also applying for one of seven available television outlets. Scribe also sought advance dope from official sources on what pitch each would make. He was reminded that was a tipoff akin to asking a criminal lawyer what his defense was going to be.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

One of the main arguments of Marxian Communism is that class warfare is inevitable in a capitalistic system. According to Marxian dogma, we have arrived at the expected situation in our system. That should be received as a challenge. Somehow, someway, if our system is to go on, we have to maintain machinery that enables Labor and Management to settle its disputes without wrecking the economy of the whole nation. We had returned well on the way to peacetime production, arriving at a higher level than most of us realize because we are used to the high production levels of wartime. But in January, according to the Federal Reserve Board's index of production, we had arrived at 159. That's not so high as the wartime high of 250 in October 1943, but it is over the 120 of June 1940, when our defense program began, and over the 110 of 1929, the year we usually figure as our peacetime top. These gains were made despite the other strikes, but the railroad strike is different. It's as if the blood ceased to flow through the circulatory system of the huge giant that is U.S. production. A trickle will continue by bus, truck and plane, so that our system will not completely die, but in time the whole industry will be affected, and our food. We shall no longer be able to stretch willing hands across the waters to the emaciated starving overseas. And the question is not whether a strike is unjustified, but what are we going to—what can we do about it? If it drags on, what will happen? The possibilities are not pleasant to contemplate.

Freddie Steps Out

(Musical)

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producer, Sam Katzman. Associate producer, Maurice Duke. Director, Arthur Dreifuss. Production manager, Mel Delay. Original screenplay, Hal Collins. Photography, Ira Morgan. Art direction, Paul Palmentola. Set decorations, Harry Reif. Musical director, Lee Zahler. Dance director, Jack Boyle. Editor, Ace Herman. Musical arrangements, Joe Sanns, Herschel Gilbert.

CAST—Features Freddie Stewart, June Preisser, Ann Rooney. Supporting players, Warren Mills, Noel Neill, Jackie Moran, Frankie Darro, Milt Kibbee, Belle Mitchell, Edythe Elliott, Murray Davis, Claire James, Douglas Fowley, Charlie Barnet, Emmett Vogan, Terry Lee Carlson, Neta Geddes, Chuy Reyes.

PREVIEWED at Campus Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., May 23, 1946.

"Freddie Steps Out," second in The Teen Agers series, is a tuneful medley of boby-sock entertainment which should hit bulls-eye for market intended. Featuring Freddie Stewart in a dual role, film has sufficient bounce and movement to hold its audience, plenty of musical numbers being inserted for melody satisfaction. Arthur Dreifuss keeps ball rolling with his direction and Sam Katzman as producer rates hand for showmanship job.

Action unfolds for most part in Whitney High School, where boys and their chicks are swing minded. A famous crooner walks out of a radio program in Hollywood, disappears, and most of plot thereafter concerns a high school lad, who is a double for warbler, trying to make everybody believe he isn't crooner, and crooner's wife and baby who appear on scene aren't his. Story is somewhat muddled at times, but it gets off to its goal.

Freddie Stewart takes his dual assignment in swing, and has pleasing voice and personality which gets over. June Preisser, as gal friend of high school lad, displays energetic presence which is climaxed with her doing acrobatic dance at finale, and she sings nicely, too. Warren Mills offers cleverly-timed comedy, and both Ann Rooney and Noel Neill add to film with lively portrayals. Frankie Darro is standout, Murray Davis has good role as fat girl-shy soda-jerk.

Picture carries eight song numbers; "Patience and Fortitude," cleffed by Blackie Warren and Billy Moore, Jr., probably being most effective. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" is well delivered and there are two numbers played by Charles Barnet and his ork. Chuy Reyes is in for singleton, "Cuban Rhapsody."

Hal Collins' original screenplay is designed to meet younger audience appeal and suffices as showcase for youngsters' antics. Production credits generally contribute to film's worth.

KFI Knifes Affiliate in Video License Hearings

Expected fireworks of California Committee for Freedom of Radio protesting video licensing of KFI and Don Lee was postponed yesterday at Federal Communications Commission hearings. But unexpected sparks flew when independently owned affiliate KFI made event hot for its half-sister National Broadcasting Co. Louis Caldwell, KFI attorney, knifed into net operations, separate operations of net-owned KPO, San Francisco, and otherwise pushed position of KFI at expense of its own net affiliate while questioning Sid Strotz, NBC western v-p.

Also highlighting day's testimony was announcement that Sam Balter, commentator, would appear today to refute testimony given Tuesday by Earle C. Anthony, owner of KFI, who it's claimed maligned him while explaining dismissal of all commentators from station. Balter and Freedom Committee will be heard this a.m.

NBC tele v-p, John Royal, concluded his testimony from preceding day with statement that Hollywood would very probably be largest of NBC's operations in video, outranking New York. Mark Woods, prexy of American Broadcasting Co., in testifying for ABC's own video project here, duplicated Royal's claim, and said that ABC would be in television here whether or not FCC granted net a license. Meaning was that ABC would continue to produce, as currently in the East, telecasting productions through associates, or through an already licensed affiliate.

Backed by well-documented evidence of present Eastern video operations, experience and activity, NBC pitched for its own outlet here on basis of being better equipped and more able to develop talent. That tack led to piercing questioning by Caldwell who attempted to draw comparisons between what KFI has done and can do, independent of NBC, and which line led to commish rep Harry Plotkin ultimately asking for precedental airing of NBC's financial statement, plus breakdown by stations. Also brought out was fact of NBC seeking same channel, number four (66 to 72 megacycles), as KFI and Hughes Tool Co.

CITE 'SUPERIOR RIGHT'

Anthony has flatly refused to sell KFI to net, Strotz admitted, but KFI side charged net with air of "superior right" to outlet. While stating it couldn't operate as well as it likes through an affiliate, Strotz quickly added he had no complaint with cooperation received from KFI in all phases of existing operations between two. KFI took stand that money made in and from a community should not be taken out of it by a net and that affiliates did more for nets than nets did for stations, forcing declaration from Strotz that situation was the reverse. Caldwell also tried to disprove net's claims to developing talent, and pointed up alleged KPO failures as net-owned station to parallel KFI's public interest broadcasts.

Regarding commercials, Strotz pointed out there are such things as sponsored public interest subjects. This was reply to FCC'ers asking what percentage of programming would be sponsored. No definite policy has been laid down but net would not exceed limit of 70 to 30 ratio, generally accepted by other applicants to date. Stigma should be taken off commercial programs, he added. He and Royal agreed commercialization is three to four years off, as is networking.

PROGRAM ESTIMATE

Hal Bock would manage NBC's television station here under supervision of Strotz as overall western chief. Initial expenditure of $1,135,000 would be spent in installations, etc., and 28-hour per week programming in first year was estimated to cost $110,059, according to Royal. Deals are also in works for films to supplement live programming. Studios would be located adjacent to present Sunset and Vine radio location. Net would employ four kilowatt transmitter on Occidental Peak in Mt. Wilson range, transmitter having effectiveness of 15 kilowatts with antenna modifications. Ray Guy, facility engineer, and Noran Kersta, television director for net, also appeared.

ABC, which is also looking for five-city net, embracing New York, Chicago, L.A., San Francisco and possibly Detroit, got in opening pitch before day concluded. With liabilities, capital and assets of $13,085,906, plus new stock issue to be floated, it would spend close to one million in initial setup, and is prepared to spend another $1,500,000 annually in operation. "Television is a hazardous business but ABC is determined to be among leaders in it," Woods said. ABC's case resumes today and Televisions Productions (Paramount Pictures) comes up next.

Broadcasters Re-Elect All Officers and Directors

Southern California Broadcasters' Association held annual election yesterday and returned to office all officers and directors for another year. Bob Reynolds, KMPC, is prez; Clyde Scott, KECA, veepee; Lee Wynne, KGER, secretary-treasurer. Board embraces Cal Smith, KFAC; Pat Campbell, KHJ; Harry Witt, KNX; Larry McDowell, KFOX; also Scott, Reynolds and Wynne.

At the meeting yesterday it was decided to table any further discussion of Radio Council until complete review could be made of the operation of other Councils of sort operating in other areas around the country. Plan to move organization to new offices was submitted to board for study with report asked within next few weeks.

Only other activity at the get-together was reading by KFI's Bill Ryan of his report on National Association of Broadcasters' activities. It was decided that group would toss another party this fall, as was done last year.

Film Review

Blondie's Lucky Day

(Comedy)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Director, Abby Berlin. Original screenplay, Connie Lee. Based upon comic strip, "Blondie," created by Chic Young. Photography, L. W. O'Connell. Editor, Aaron Stell. Art direction, Perry Smith. Set decorations, Herman Schoenbrun. Musical director, Mischa Bakaleinikoff. Sound, Jack Goodrich. Assistant director, Carl Hiecke.

CAST—Stars Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake. Supporting players, Larry Simms, Marjorie Kent, Robert Stanton, Angelyn Orr, Jonathan Hale, Frank Jenks, Paul Harvey, Charles Arnt, Jack Rice, Bobby Larson, Margie Liszt, Frank Orth and Daisy.

REVIEWED at Hollywood Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, Calif., May 23, 1946. Running time: 69 MINS.

Latest in "Blondie" series falls into the familiar pattern of past offerings, another episode in lives of the Bumstead family providing enough humor and entertainment to pose film as strong supporter fare. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake assume their usual roles in their customary guileless way and Abby Berlin in his direction has managed to keep tempo fast-paced, although at times characters go overboard in characterizations.

Lake, as Dagwood, gets himself fired by his boss, Mr. Dithers (Jonathan Hale), through the well-meaning offices of Blondie, and attempts to organize his own construction company. Story revolves around his efforts to win over Robert Stanton, whom he thinks is head of a theatre company, to give him order for building a new playhouse. Finale has him going back to his old job, with the order, promised a bonus and raise by Dithers.

Story is lightly told and acted always with view to laughs. More emphasis than usual is placed on plot, and in addition to old familiar faces glimpsed regularly in series there are several new names which add considerably to interest. Stanton shows possibilities and Angelyn Orr lends an attractive presence as femme corporal whom Dagwood hires when his employer places him temporarily in charge of the office. Paul Harvey is new, too, playing Stanton's father, and Charles Arnt has brief part as mayor whom Dagwood drenches when he walks into office. Hale, as usual, is standout, and Daisy and her pups get some chuckles.

Connie Lee's original screenplay is up to par and technical departments show to advantage.

Night Club Review

Russ Morgan opened to a boffo house at the Biltmore Bowl last night. Morgan has a bookfull of tunes, both old and new that appeals to the Bowl trade, both old and young. Maestro emceed a nifty little show that starred Ben Yost's White Guards, a vocal group that delivered smash singing of everything from opera to musical comedy. Guards got encore after encore and finally had to beg off. St. Claire and Velova, a ballroom dance team, turned in something very new in ballroom terping with some sharp routines that warmed up as they went along. Tommy Trent, puppeteer, delivered a slightly gay and modern version of Punch and Judy which rated a lot of laughs. Lindsay, LaVerne and Betty gave their usual stock performance as acrobatic dance trio.

Sum was awarded theatre operators for damages suffered as a result of defendants' monopolistic practices after a Federal Court trial.

Defendants in the action were RKO, Loew's, 20th-Fox, Paramount, B & K Corp., Vitagraph, Warner Bros., Pictures, Warner Bros., Circuit Management Corp., and Warner Bros., Theatres.

age its investment in building up a strong listening audience over a several year period.

Mrs. Thackrey informed the commission she wanted to change from the old call—KMTR—because she is inaugurating an entirely new program policy.

In addition to the $22,000 she has already spent in advertising the new call for her station, the Los Angeles Daily News has put out another $6,000 publicizing its news slots as coming from station KLAC. The Bohemian Distributing Co. has shot another $4,200 in the same direction, to boost its sponsorship of the Pacific Coast baseball league games. Another flack campaign has touted the switchover of Al Jarvis' "Make Believe Ballroom" show from the Warner Bros. station to KLAC.

Since KLAC is at 750 on the dial and KFAC is way up at the 1330 KC band, there can hardly be any danger of somebody's dialing the wrong station, it was pointed out.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Ingrid Bergman went for a quiet shopping tour in one of the local department stores and was immediately followed from floor to floor by a mob of gaping women. Finally, she took refuge in a dressing room in the ladies wear dept., while a line of some 200 formed outside, waiting for her as if she were a pair of nylons. Ingrid, with her natural reticence to the spotlight, was terribly embarrassed by all the commotion she had created and her only thought was to get out as soon as possible. Turning to the saleslady, she told her to send the dresses on to her at the Drake. Whereupon, the saleslady, in dead pan seriousness, inquired, "Have you any identification with you?"

SCOOPING AROUND: Mary Martin and Paramount may not get together on "Alice Sit by the Fire" after all. Inability to find the right leading man is postponing production until after the original starting date, July 1, and Mary wants to be back in N.Y. by fall to complete plans for a musical satire on Texas (her native state), now in the discussion stage. Unless original date is adhered to, Paramount may have to come through with a goodly settlement. On strength of her contract, Mary rented her Conn. home for the summer months and asked the present occupants of her Cal. home to move in anticipation of her arrival. She also now has to rearrange the holiday plans of her two children. No wonder that Mary feels she's been burned before the "fire" has even started! . . . If Jan Clayton only has time for one picture at Metro, it's for a very special reason—she and Bob Lerner are "heiring" the nursery . . . Vivien Leigh's beauty will be captured again for her only two sittings this visit—a Cecil Beaton photograph for Vogue and Fellipo Halsman's color portrait for Life . . . After the curtain had rung down on his last performance in "Pygmalion," Raymond Massey gifted the entire cast with souvenirs from Cartier's—pins for the distaff side—tie-clips for the men, each emblazoned with a red fireman's hat and hatchet to remind them of the standing joke in the company, when the backstage fireman would never let Ray follow G.B.S.'s direction to "enter right, smoking a cigarette" . . . John Patrick is now putting the finishing touches to his new play, a far cry from the tender drama of his last success, "The Hasty Heart." This one is a comedy about seven ghosts who haunt the home of a large family, and the complications that ensue. Incidentally "Hasty Heart" will be given an L.A. production in August with Dick Cromwell and Freddie Bartholomew heading the cast. Wonder if John Lund and Richard Basehart, now "moon pitcher" stars will be on hand to applaud their successors?

FUN AT YOUR OWN EXPENSE: Gertrude Lawrence and Fred Astaire are two people with a divine sense of humor and no complex about age. So the other ayem, when Gertie read that she and Fred were to be co-starred in an Irving Berlin musical (which was Big News to both of them) she called Fred at the Ritz and quipped, "Don't you think that with us as co-stars, Irving should change the title to "Face Lifts and Toupees of 1947" and our love duet should be, "I've Got a Crutch on You!"

ON THE CUFFO NOTES: Joan Fontaine was not only a beaming bride, but a most gracious hostess at RKO's cocktail party, honoring her and her groom, Bill Dozier, in the Cottage of the Hampshire House . . . Congratulations to Anatol Litvak for capturing Broadway's finest young actress, Barbara Bel Geddes, to play the femme lead in his next picture, "Time to Kill" (a melo), which precedes "The Snake Pit" on his schedule . . . Few ringsiders at El Morocco recognized the tall brunette, with the updo hair sweep, and dressed in a simple black afternoon gown, nor her partner, who danced every dance with her—yet their names have been marqueed all over the world—David O. Selznick and Jennifer Jones.

ODE TO OLIVIER: The closing bill of The Old Vic, "Oedipus" with "The Critic," proved conclusively that Laurence Olivier is one of the greatest actors of his time. Certainly, the greatest I have seen in my lifetime. Held spellbound by his tragic "Oedipus" and an hour and half later, laughing uproariously at his "Mr. Puff," I can't thing of any other player who could alternate between stark tragedy and high comedy with such brilliance of characterization. And judging from the nine curtain calls, the cheers and bravos which continued even after the house lights went up, the rest of the $12 ducat holders including Eric Remarque, Irene Selznick, Eddie Duchin, Dwight Wiman, Lester Cowan, Francis Lederer, Lillian Gish, the Gilbert Millers, Libby Holman, Pete Yeager, Jack Kapp, Ruth Gordon, Moss Hart, Valentina, Robert Ross, Gar Kanin, et al, seemed to agree with me.

In Larry's dressing room afterward, Vivien Leigh, looking sooo beautiful in a medieval headdress with encrusted gold beads, was being told by everyone what a great actor her husband is. Whereupon, she whispered back, "Confidentially, I knew that eight years ago—the very first moment I met him!"

SHOW BIZ FACING SHUTDOWNS FROM STRIKES

ing a "pretty drastic" curtailment of electric service, particularly for the coal burning east. It would cause a 15 to 20 per cent brownout of commercial establishments, and probably would result in the shut down of all amusement spots, it was reported.

Many cities, including Washington, were preparing to anticipate the CPA order to conserve coal by placing new brownouts in effect and by deepening those already in operation. Theatres looked like the first group to feel the crackdown in many cities.

NEW COAL SQUEEZE

Today's rail strike infinitely worsened the national picture—principally because it meant that such coal as is being mined under John L. Lewis' two-week truce cannot be moved from the mine heads to the industrial centers where it is needed. Thus the effect of the coal squeeze will be felt sooner than otherwise.

Second, and equally important, the rail strike threatened to jam up the shipment of motion picture film in all parts of the nation. Following an executive order issued by the President, the Office of Defense Transportation issued orders to provide priority rating for shipment of essentials via bus, truck, plane and boat. This would include such things as food, medicine, etc.

Thus, shipments of film to and from the exchanges may be cut off in many places entirely. In the larger centers, shipments may have to go by private automobile in some instances.

Ironically enough, daylight saving time, the bete noir of many theatre operators, is liable to come to the aid of theatres in places in which film houses are permitted limited operation, although the outsides of buildings will be darkened. The extra hour of daylight it was pointed out, is likely to bring out early evening show audiences who would prefer not to come into town in the darkness.

Skouras, Sargent, Zabel Heading East

Charles P. Skouras, accompanied by Mrs. Skouras, airs to New York tonight or tomorrow. Also heading east over weekend will be Ed Zabel, National Theatres chief film buyer, and Thornton Sargent, public relations chief. Both will join Skouras in New York on business.

Rail Strike Hits Pic Industry

LOCATION TRIPS HALTED BUT CAMERAS STILL ROLL

Hollywood took a wallop from the rail strike yesterday but, for the most part, was prepared to roll with the punch.

Trips to or from location were held up in a few instances. Some shooting schedules were upset. And a few stranded execs traveling here and there were making frenzied bids for plane or automobile transportation.

Arrangements for local transportation of studio personnel, some of them already worked out in anticipation of the strike were hurriedly put into effect. Indications were that production for the time being will continue as usual.

Theatre men figured to take a beating at the box office right now, with last night's attendance cut down by stoppage of P.E. cars and bus lines.

'KATIE' UPSET

Location difficulties included complete upset of the shooting schedule on RKO's "Katie for Congress." Company was due to finish filming at Petaluma Tuesday and get back to studio Wednesday. Delay of two days or more in getting the troupers back here is now expected.

The airlines, looking to possibility of being taken over by the government, would make no promises regarding transportation of location companies or equipment.

As a result, Twentieth-Fox home office in New York is arranging for fleet of automobiles for use in filming of "13 Rue Madeleine." Picture calls for shooting on 158 different locations, including Boston, Washington, D.C., and Quebec.

Part of cast is already in Washington, D.C., and actors and crew, scheduled to train back there Saturday will go on chartered plane instead, studio officials said.

AIRLINES COOPERATE

Airlines, queried regarding transportation in connection with motion picture business, said they have voluntarily agreed to government program asking priority for mail, food and medical supplies. The lines are asking people not to request reservations. When reservation is asked for applicant must have good emergency reason to obtain one.

Enterprise, in anticipation of the strike, has under charter a DC-3 cargo plane to transport cast, equipment and material to "Ramrod" location in Zion National Park. Company also has rented two smaller planes for shuttle service between location and studio.

Republic has two location companies temporarily stranded by the strike. Al Santell's "That Brennan Girl" troupe, due back from San Francisco over the week-end, is still arranging for transportation, and the "Helldorado" company was due back from Las Vegas yesterday and failed to make it.

The Goldwyn Studio reported six Goldwyn Girls stranded in Pocatello, Idaho, enroute to Chicago. Girls were traveling in a special lounge car and so are just held up on a siding with all the comforts of a hotel.

NT EXECS STRANDED

Efforts were being made last night to find transportation for eight National Theatres division executives here for the annual meeting just completed.

Circuit had made rail reservations for them to head back to their respective headquarters, when rail reservations suddenly became meaningless.

Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, with a few technicians, are in Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies, readying location for Paramount's "The Emperor Waltz" company, were slated to return Saturday but now expect to be held up.

Hal Wallis called off his scheduled preem of "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" aboard the eastbound TWA Constellation last night because of the transportation emergency.

At last reports a party of 30 Metro home office executives due to convene in Chicago was still trying to get out of New York last night. Their reservations on the Twentieth Century Limited were cancelled and it was understood convention would be postponed unless they succeeded in finding means of travel.

FEW ON ROAD

Strike found few radio personalities on the road. Tom Lewis, Young & Rubicam's director of radio, was reported stranded in Kansas City enroute to New York. Stewart Dawson, chief of Chicago radio for Foote, Cone and Belding, was on a train that halted in Needles, Ariz. Members of "Duffy's Tavern" ork got a bus at the last minute to make their date at Las Vegas, where show aired last night.

Party of 11 connected with Art Linkletter's "G.E. Houseparty" and "People Are Funny" were scheduled to train to Detroit where shows will air all next week. Last night John Guedel agency and Young & Rubicam were scouting for flight reservations for them. Linkletter was due to plane out today.

Bands were reported not disturbed by the strike. Music Corporation of America has had all its orks riding chartered buses for more than a week. General Artist Corp. stated it had no properties on the move.

Distribution of sheet music and records ceased when freight trains halted. Cost precludes use of air transport.

Transportation of studio personnel presented little difficulty. Republic turned over its complete transportation system to the job of getting employes to and from work. Location buses were put on point-to-point runs, picking up employes at specified corners.

Universal reported its employes supplied with transportation, the car pools organized during gas rationing being still in effect there.

General Service is having rental cars pick up key employes. The car pool is being put into operation at Columbia.

'Home' Indeed

Oklahoma is an alright place to live for folks who like it, but a quartette of Republic location hunters want back in Hollywood—in a hurry. Group including director William Witney, assistant director Lee Lukather, unit manager John Grubbs and location manager John Bourke are stranded "somewheres in Oklahoma" where they went to scout locations for the Roy Rogers starrer, "Home in Oklahoma." Director Witney phoned the studio late yesterday afternoon and wailed "We're through with our work here, but can't get out—no planes, no trains, no nothing. Please do something—even if you have to send Trigger."

OPERAS HIT ROAD IN VANS AS RY. STRIKE BEGINS

Civic Light Opera, due to the rail strike, will hit the road literally Sunday when "Vagabond King" and "Roberta" change places, "King" going to the Curran in San Francisco and "Roberta" driving South for Philharmonic bow Monday night.

Scenery and baggage of both productions will be put into moving vans immediately following Saturday night's performance. "Roberta," having 12 van loads, and "King," having eight, will meet in Fresno, with exchange of loads being made, there, cutting down on truck dead-heading.

Casts of both shows will leave at eight Sunday morning, via bus for their respective destinations. Three buses for each cast have been chartered for the Coast run. Civic has stated, however, that should the rail strike end prior to the cast departure, effort will be made to put the performers on trains.

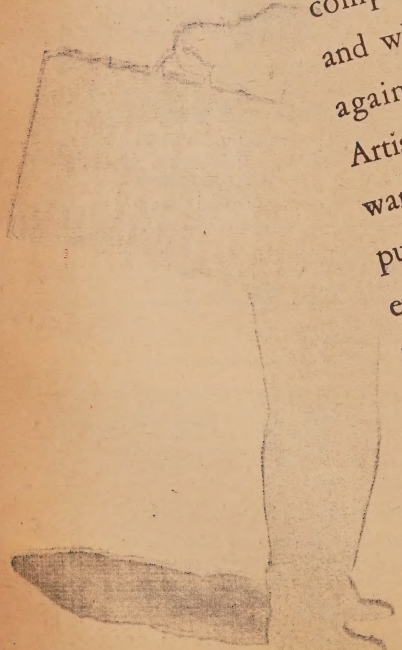
United Artists

Since 1919, to foster the best independent combinations of producer, cast and story, and with superior sales manpower, to offer for distribution, motion pictures for the best possible boxoffice success

A TRADITION

A POLICY



THERE is an instinct—call it second sight, if you will—that enables certain producers, certain companies to know what the public wants—and when. It is noteworthy that time and time again, the independent producers of United Artists have brought to the screen a particularly wanted story, a great film personality, and in putting them together, have assured America's exhibitors the best possible box-office success. So it is that David L. Loew cast, with United Artists' hearty enthusiasm, the Marx Brothers in "A Night In Casablanca". So it is that David L. Loew releases thru United Artists.

HOTSHOTS BREAK OFF BARN DANCE AFTER 13 YEARS

Hoosier Hotshots break off a straight 13-year association with the National Barn Dance after the July 6 broadcast in favor of picture work and residence in the valley. Hillbilly musical group, made up of Ken and Paul Trietsch, Gabe Ward and Gil Taylor, have just been inked by Mitchell Hamilburg to a two-year film deal at Columbia, calling for four pictures a year. Negotiations are also under way for a Coast radio show.

Hotshots, who have teamed together for 18 years, planed out for Chicago last night after completing "Singing on the Trail" at Columbia yesterday. Film is not included in new pact. Break with the Barn Dance will not be absolute, as Hotshots are to be remoted from the Coast from time to time. All four have purchased valley homes, selling their Chicago residences.

Canada in Bid for World Pix Mart, Inks H'd Talent

Canada is launching a strong program to develop its film industry. Backed by powerful financiers and aided by various government agencies, Canadian film toppers are going to make a determined bid for the world film market. Details of the new post-war development north of the border was brought here yesterday by Paul L'Anglais, prexy of the recently formed Canada Productions, Inc., of Montreal.

The new outfit will operate on the several-hundred acre Valcartier Canadian army camp near Quebec. Several of its larger structures already have been converted into sound stages. "Rendezvous at the Chateau Frontenac," an original story by Fedor Ozep, is the first on CP's production slate. Film will get under way early in July.

"My company will produce bi-lingual films," L'Anglais declared yesterday. "We are going to film an English and a French version, using the same sets and the same actors. Besides recruiting technical talent, I am here also to negotiate for leading name players who speak French. Various deals are already under way.

"I am also negotiating for a distribution setup for the United States. We already have a releasing structure for England and France, as well as the French colonies. One factor in our favor is that there are no quotas on Canadian product in any country in the world. As to the production picture, there are only two types in the world—the Hollywood technique, which is flawless, and the European type, which though lacking in polish and technical skill, has a sensitive style of its own. Because of our blending of French and English culture, we hope to strike a happy medium that will create product satisfactory to the motion picture-going public of both continents."

Through his Hollywood rep, Paul Kohner, L'Anglais has signed several Hollywood names for his initial production. They include Fedor Ozep, who will direct; Rian James, to do screenplay; Gilbert Mandelik, assistant director and Eugene Shuftan, cameraman.

PAR PIX THREATENS SUIT ON RECORD FIRM'S NAME

Last night Blumofe indicated that if plattery does not cease use of tag, the film company will take matter to litigation. Paramount Records, headquartered here, is operated by Ivor Kallen and Joe and Jack Cascales.

JOAN LESLIE FREED FROM WB PACT

Joan Leslie was released from her Warners contract over the weekend on Superior Judge Alfred Paonessa's decision on a demurrer filed against the injunction granted the studio preventing her from leaving its employ. Judge Paonessa decided that Miss Leslie's original contract, signed while she was a minor, was duly approved by the Superior Court but such approval was not obtained when succeeding options were lifted "and therefore, no contract existed between Warners and Miss Leslie." Warners announced last night it will appeal the decision.

New York, May 26.—Decision has been reserved on Howard Hughes' request for a temporary injunction to prevent Motion Picture Association of America from revoking its seal on "The Outlaw," following Federal Court hearing. A temporary restraint, imposed on MPAA some weeks ago to prevent such action until a decision on the injunction, continues in force.

Judge John Bright lifted that portion of the restraining order, though, which prevented MPAA from giving any publicity

RAFTERY TO QUIT AS PREZ

New York, May 26.—Edward Raftery has decided to abdicate the presidency of United Artists at its annual meeting in two weeks, it was understood over the weekend.

Decision to return to his law firm is due to the fact that one of his partners, Capt. Dennis O'Brien, has been inactive during the war, and his other partner, Arthur Driscoll, has indicated a desire to retire from practice. The law firm will continue to act as legal counsel for United Artists and Mary Pickford.

Every distributing company in the film industry, except Warners, Metro and Paramount, is understood to have put in its bid for release of Enterprise product. Einfeld and Loew return to New York Friday on deal.

Par To Boost Rentals On Shorts In Pace With Costs

San Francisco, May 26.—Oscar A. Morgan, Paramount short subjects and general sales manager, served notice today at a regional sales meet, that rentals would be increased on shorts.

Although costs have increased substantially, short subject rentals generally have remained static for past several years, Morgan emphasized.

"It is apparent that the situation offends every principle of sound economics and could not continue indefinitely. Therefore, it becomes essential that we increase our rentals in proportion to the increase of our costs."

Attending the conclave were Del Goodman, West Coast District Manager, and sales reps from Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle and San Francisco. Conference was last of ten meetings Morgan has been conducting across the country.

FILM BIZ WEATHERS TRACTION TIE-UP

The film industry weathered the week-end transportation crisis in good shape. Studio-wide survey, over the week-end, disclosed not a single production halt, because of the strike, on the 52 feature films currently before the cameras.

Studio toppers reported absenteeism practically negligible in all departments. Car pools, hastily formed during the strike, and vehicles manned by studio personnel, successfully helped film workers take the strike in stride.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., birthplace of Dorsey brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, will have face-lifting, or reversion to days of 1916, for Charles R. Rogers production, "The Fabulous Dorseys," based on lives of band leaders. Portion of picture will be filmed there by Director Al Green. Rogers will send engineers and experts to that eastern hamlet to try to revamp some of scenery so that camera will catch town as it existed when brothers were wearing short pants. Producer figures it is less costly to send troupe east and have work done on town, with full approval of city fathers, than reproducing Shenandoah as a set.

And now the screen is cluttered up with gorgeous costume stories
And handsome wolves of bygone days arrayed like morning glories.
Although they often fool around with phony human passions,
The films are educational—they sway the country's fashions.
And some fine day the modern wolves may strut in public places
Arrayed in satin coats and pants adorned with frills and laces.

TRADESHOWN at studio, May 24, 1946. Running time: 102 MINS.

Music by Jerome Kern and a large cast of top names assure both excellent entertainment and high grosses for "Centennial Summer." Filmed in color and imbued with the musical idea and treatment, picture has been lavishly turned out and effective use made of the period.

Scene is Centennial in Philadalphia in summer of 1876, with all its picturesque background vividly displayed as drop for romantic stories of Jeanne Craine, Cornel Wilde, Linda Darnell and William Eythe. Action centers around family of Walter Brennan, a railroad man who for years has been trying to invent a new type of clock. Misses Crain and Darnell play sisters out to get the same man, Wilde, who portrays young Frenchman in charge of French exhibit as representative of his country, and Eythe is young doctor unofficially engaged to Linda.

Narrative permits plenty of opportunity for interpolation of eight Kern song numbers, as well as plenty of amusing moments contributed by cast in general. Otto Preminger, as producer-director, has handled action invariably with a light touch and much of footage is truly delightful.

Highlighting songs is "Up With the Lark," with lyrics by Leo Robin. "All Through the Day," lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II, also is standout, and "Cinderella Sue," novelty number with lyrics by E. Y. Harburg and sung by Avon Long, is catchy affair.

Characterizations without exception rate highly, players contributing highly colored performances. Both Miss Crain and Darnell are lovely, Dorothy Gish as their mother is convincing, and Wilde and Eythe first-rate. Brennan draws a rich portrayal. Outstanding impersonation, however, is delivered by Constance Bennett, as Miss Gish's sister, playing a smart, man-knowing sophisticate who helps Brennan sell his clock to president of his railroad. Supporting roles are atmospherically filled.

Script by Michael Kanin, based on Albert E. Idell's best-selling novel, is done with craftsmanship hand and Ernest Palmer photographed. Lyle Wheeler and Lee Fuller collabed on creation of artistic sets, interestingly decorated by Thomas Little, and costumes by Rene Hubert are colorful. Rest of technical credits stack up accordingly.

Theatres Win An Equal Rating In Coal Crisis

Washington, May 26.—Settlement of the railroad strike over the weekend broke a bad log jam threatening the motion picture industry, but the situation continues serious for exhibitors in many parts of the country because of the coal shortage.

Ted Gamble, of the American Theatres Association, conferred over the weekend with George Doying, of the Civilian Production Administration, and obtained an agreement that, in any CPA orders issued in connection with the power shortage, the film houses will rate with other commercial business. Originally the CPA had listed theatres as "non-essential" to be cracked down on earlier.

PROHIBITIONS READY

CPA had an order ready to be issued in the event that the rail strike, preventing the transportation of coal, were to continue after the President's Saturday 4 p.m. deadline. The order, which would have become effective in 21eastern coal-burning states, would have called for: (1) a dimout of all exterior lighting and a prohibition against the use of air conditioning; (2) a 15 per cent cut in commercial power consumption by commercial establishments where electric utility companies were down to a 20-day supply of fuel; and (3) a 50 per cent power cut when the fuel supplies fall to a 10-day supply.

While the order was not issued yesterday, there remained a chance that the CPA might be forced to take some action because of the dwindling supplies of coal. In addition, in local communities, where coal stocks are low, city and state officials are expected to put through restrictive orders to conserve fuel.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Don't breathe too easily yet. The railroad strike may be settled, but John L. Lewis is still holding out, the miners are not back at work, and the Senate will argue today on whether or not to grant the emergency powers asked by the president. Labor is reacting violently against Truman and the week-end delay has given it time to amass forces to affect the Senate action. Stassen again is taking political advantage. He's making hay while the clouds gather, attracting management by attacking the provision in the asked legislation that would give profits under government operation to the government, and attracting labor by saying the measure would force involuntary servitude. Stassen says the executive already has enough powers to settle a strike. To some the point is that although labor has a right to strike, no right is unlimited; it is limited when it affects the rights of others. That applies to freedom of speech, press, religion, everything. Every right is dependent on acceptance of a responsibility. If that were accepted, no legislation would be necessary.

CINECOLOR WILL TRIPLE CAPACITY; NOW IN BLACK

Current operations of Cinecolor are on a profitable basis and company is booked solid with orders through 1947, according to the annual report for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1945, released over the weekend. Report shows a net loss of $25,606.61, most of which is attributed to fire in the processing division that caused five months shutdown of the plant.

The report states that acceptance of new commitments is being deferred temporarily pending completion of an expansion program that will triple capacity of the plant. Present commitments include high budget features for major studios and extensive orders for short subjects in two-color and three-color. ' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Los Angeles bench and bar isn't too happy about Metro's picture of Los Angeles justice in "The Postman Rings Twice." District attorney, defense lawyer and judge are shown conniving away like legal counterparts of "The Hucksters" . . . Norman Alley, News of the Day cameraman, who was in most of the war's hot spots including the sinking of the Panay and the bombing of Rotterdam, has been cited by Secretary of Navy James Forrestal for outstanding achievement as a war correspondent . . . The Brothers Shubert are interested in cutting in on Mae West's new play "Ring Twice Tonight," which is trouping through the Pacific Coast tanktowns. J. J. (himself) has been in earnest conference with Jim Timony, Mae West's manager and producer . . . The hottest art collection in town is on view at one of the major studios, which has its walls decorated with stills given the taboo mark by the Johnston Office . . . Buddy Rogers says Mary Pickford is bringing an orphaned boy back with her from France. He'll be their third adopted child . . . Dick Simmons, featured in "Lay in the Lake," is being given a Metro buildup angled at the bobbysox draw . . . F. Hugh Herbert has signed a long term contract with Campbell Soup to turn out "Corliss Archer" scripts for radio, but what's he going to do when his teen-aged daughters (who provided the "Kiss and Tell" material) grow up? . . . Romance currently at summer temperature involves Maria Montez's sister Lucita and Archduke Felix of Austria.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Presumably the housing situation isn't getting any better. Ad from the "for sale" columns of the Valley Times reads: "One DC2 fuselage suitable for living quarters or house trailer" . . . Completely recovered from his appendectomy, Wayne Morris has resumed his Naval Reserve flying at Los Alamitos air station . . . Is your kangaroo pregnant? Elizabeth Taylor, Metro's teen-aged actress, is looking for a baby kangaroo to add to her 12-animal menagerie . . . Henri Charpentier, the famed chef, is passing around copies of his new tome "Food and Finesse, The Bride's Bible" . . . Billy MacDonald, who books the one-night stands for Frederick Bros.' agency, must keep spilling his sales talk even under ether. He entered Good Samaritan hospital last week for an appendectomy and two days later called up his boss, Tom Kettering, to report he had booked Al Jahns' band for the annual nurses' dance at the hospital June 14 . . . Society Dept.: Marilyn Maxwell and Marshall Thompson at Billingsley's. The Al Sacks, Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan, Patricia Morison and Wynn Rocamora at Russ Morgan's opening at the Biltmore Bowl. George White with Sammy Ledner, Vance Breese and Ann Roberts, at House of Murphy. At the third birthday party of Rosalind Russell's son, Lance Brisson, were the children of Ronald Colman, Rex Harrison, Harry Cohn, Walter Wanger, John Farrow, Lee Bowman, George Murphy.

UNDER THE BIG TOPS: Mike Todd was host of the swankiest and most lavish party of the year Saturday night. On the grounds of Joe Schenck's residence, he had two circus tents erected, one of them serving as covering for the dance floor. Music was furnished by Jan Savitt's orchestra with a Hawaiian ensemble helping to keep the music going round and round. Motif of the party was Hawaiian, with Don the Beachcomber doing the catering. Guest list hit the 200 mark. And the ladies braved the chill evening air in formal gowns . . . Al Jolson will journey to New York via Constellation next Sunday with high hopes for the Columbia film based on his life, "The Jolson Story." He caught a sneak preview Saturday night at which the audience gave the film an ovation. Harry Cohn was so elated he declared Sidney Skolsky, film's producer, "is a miniature David O. Selznick and deserves a pint-sized Oscar."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Paramount whispers it will transport Gloria Saunders, who will wear the $1,000,000 bathing suit studded with 64 precious stones for appearance at the Ambassador tomorrow to ballyhoo studio's short subjects program, in an armored car . . . Years of anxiety ended for Bronislau Kaper, Metro musical director, with the arrival by plane of his 70-year-old mother, Mrs. Maria Kaper, from Poland. She had been unable to communicate with her son since the Nazis invaded Poland in 1939 . . . Natalie Schafer, Arlene Francis, Arlene Whelan and Doris Nolan, all of whom played leads in "The Dough Girls" on Broadway, held a reunion over lunch at the Players . . . Plenty of confusion on the set of Pine-Thomas' "I Cover the Big Town," with the wardrobe man named Henry West and the dog trainer's name being Henry East . . . Arnica Dept.: Rita Hayworth, Larry Parks and Marc Platt strap on their roller skates today for rehearsals for a ballet-on-wheels in "Down to Earth" . . . Dick Massaman, best man at the wedding of Marsha Hunt and Bob Presnell, Jr., found himself homeless recently, moved into the newlyweds' guest house . . . An extra on "Beginning or the End" refused to appear within camera range, explaining to the assistant director that he had been a captain during the war "and I should be cast in as high a rank as I held in the Army." He quickly learned an assistant director outranked him.——D.D.T.

PROTEST SENT AFL PREXY ON MACHINISTS

Protest over threatened studio work stoppage slated for Wednesday has been made to William Green, American Federation of Labor prexy, by the motion picture stewards council. Stewards protest that notice sent out last week by Central Labor Council forbidding AFL machinists to work with non-union machinists is without the sanction of international union heads and without strike votes in the unions affected. Wire to Green follows:

"The Los Angeles Central Labor Council has notified our employers that members of more than 30 American Federation of Labor unions are ordered to stop work in studios next Wednesday in behalf of federal chartered machinists.

"This action, without your sanction for strike by federal local and without sanction of international presidents for strike by their locals, also without strike votes in any union affected, contravenes all existing American Federal Labor procedure as we understand it.

"We strongly protest such arbitrary action and urge that manipulation of Los Angeles Central Labor Council in interest of certain unions without regard to rights of others be investigated by American Federation of Labor's executive council."

Wire was signed by Helmer Bergman, IBEW Local 40, and Ed Gilbert, BPDPA Local 1421, co-chairmen of motion picture stewards council.

SONGWRITERS TRY TO WOO GILBERT BACK INTO FOLD

Committee of songwriters here has approached L. Wolfe Gilbert with request he rejoin Songwriters' Protective Association. Gilbert quit in huff two years ago, at which time he was vee-pee and top-ranking Coast member of organization, climaxing a series of tiffs with other members over policies and actions of SPA. Committee making pitch included Jimmy McHugh, Allie Wrubel, Harry Ruby, Bernie Grossman, Herb Magidson, Sammy Fain, Charley Newman.

Sigmund Romberg, SPA prexy, stated over weekend he expects John Schulman, SPA attorney, and Fred Ahlert to arrive from NY this week. Pair will bring with them terms to be incorporated into new ten-year contract due to be signed this autumn by writers and publishers.

SUMMER MEETING

Romberg said he is not calling a general membership meeting here until mid-summer, which indicates there will be no general hubbub over new pact, but that Romberg will talk it over with Schulman and Ahlert and reach agreement. When the SPA prexy gives the nod to whatever terms are put into it, pair will return to NY and prep pact for signatures which will make it binding for the next decade.

An informal meeting of group of songwriters was held here last Friday at which forthcoming pact was discussed. Majority present pressed that two present items be changed. They felt that the minimum figures at which a song can be sold to films should be upped, and also that Clause Seven should be changed.

PRICES FOR FILM TUNES

At present the minimum to films is $25 for background, $50 for instrumental use and $75 for vocal. Clause Seven permits a writer to retrieve a composition if a publisher does not bring it out within one month after notification from writer that he wants it published or returned. Writers felt that the one-month period should be eliminated.

Bonnie Baker Show

Bonnie Baker is toplined in new quarter-hour air package being auditioned at NBC on Wednesday. Format has Miss Baker splitting song-spinnings with Ernie Newton, backed by Chick Floyd's ork.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

OPERATION BIG TOWN: If what lengthens down this pillar of type sounds suspiciously like the diary of a busman on holiday or a report to the nation on the state of the hardened artery that is Broadway, Manhattan, Gotham or what you will, then our sentimental journey down the main highway of show biz, particularly radio, is in the proper groove. After a defection of 20-odd years, this observer was on the town for a few days short of a fortnight and it was touch-and-go during the waking hours, which made up most of the 24. Impressions are fleeting things in such a crowded calendar as was ringed by a host of hosts but many left an imperishable imprint. With the aid of a few notes, mental and cuff scrawled, we shall set down in this allotted space what remained with us after The Chief pounded into Pasadena; that is, trade-wise and apropos. So, to the . . .

Agencies: Panic and pandemonium. In the better grottoes dark talk about the commission houses losing millions in billing and laying off employes by the hundred. Denied by one agency and shifted to another. It's according to whom you happen to be bending the elbow with. None, however, minimizes that a serious situation faces commercial radio this summer and may well throw its shadow into autumn. Network bosses more than a little worried amout the shift in shows and accounts and the portent of open time for the first spell since the big ruckus. Amid all this gloom the dark clouds part of the youthful exuberance of Stu Sherman, Art Marquette, Carl Brown and "Mickey" Hart. Business as usual and the outlook never brighter. Joe Rines bounces in from the Coast with glad tidings and beaming at the prospect of becoming a grandpop. Another papa-to-be, Thompson's publicity chief, Al Durante. He claims to be related to The Schnoz but his serious moments are few.

Ayer's Hay McClinton traipses by with Wauhillau ("Little Eagle") LaHay, in our book the best femme flack in the biz. Never stays put and invariably on the road personally contacting the radio eds. How many others do it? Lloyd Coulter at McCann & Erickson reminds us to tell the boys on the Coast that Russ Johnston is doing a whale of a job. Harry McCann around and gracious as always. Main Thompson office exhibit Bob Colwell's antique decor. John Reber behind grilled gates and Joe Bigelow all over the place. He's the flit kid and when bugs develop on a program he's called in to put them on their backs. No matter where you go it's the same old story—everybody wants to come to Hollywood and they'll unhesitatingly tell you that's where all big time radio is headed for. We knew it all the time, didn't we?

TELEVISION: Everyone agrees it's going somewhere but when does it start? J. Walter Thompson's first hour commercial for Standard Brands easy on the eyes but productionally small time. Battle of the giants between NBC (black and white in this corner) and the color champ, CBS. In-on-the-knowers can tell you what's behind it but no two agree. Set sales, patents and plain economics are heard most frequently. CBS color demonstration very impressive with the use of film. Caught it with a roomful of biggies including Owen D. Young and Collier's Thomas Beck and they seemed to enjoy the new art but guarded their comments. George Muskovics, late of KNX and now commercial manager of CBS television, and Ernie Martin, being indoctrinated for his new job as program chief on the Coast for the network, pitching superlatives with prodigal abandon.

NEW YORK IS THE PLACE WHERE:

They apologize for rainy weather the same as we do. The rudest people in the country give you the subway treatment—no holds barred. Every stage show is a hit but few could pass muster with our set. On rainy nights taxis line the streets of the tonier cafes where the tips are bigger. The symphony of seven millions—tip, tip, tip, tip. French restaurants charge $1.50 for a meal but it goes up to $1.75 if liquor is not ordered. Bonded bourbon and imported Scotch are ambrosial. You'd do better with cabs if you carried a doorman's whistle. Agency secretaries are so efficient they become officious and it takes everything but a saliva test to reach one of the biggies. They'll tell you the Yanks haven't a chance and boo Joe DiMaggio every time he comes to bat. Everyone languishes in a hotel lobby the first day regardless of reservations. Variety is listed in the phone book as "a pub" but the British know better. Variety's Jack Pulaski (Ibee) is still headman of the legit critics and thousands outside show biz go by his sayso. Toots Shor looks down his nose at you unless you're a big shot. They do everything but frisk you at the Stork. A $60 dinner tab for four is no novelty.

CHICAGO: The lair of Bill Hunt, the Pump Room and Chez Paree. The whole town looks like it needs a good scrubbing. A large cut-out of Frank Sinatra out front of the Chicago theatre smeared with lip sticky sentiments and some clean. Howie Mayer, whose memo pad carries entries in lettering smaller than the Lord's Prayer on a pin head. Hal and Millie Rorke, who should be on the payroll of Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. Danny Thomas wowing 'em at the Chez but can't understand why he was passed up by radio. Likes to talk about the big picture deal being lined up by Lastfogel ("I'm not selling you an actor but my boy.").

HIGHLIGHTS AND LOWDOWN: Les Atlas, midwest boss of the Columbia skein and one of the smartest hombres in the radio trick, credits Don Thornburgh with building the CBS Coast operation into the chain's best and most profitable. Within easy reach of Ed Kobak in his Mutual hdq. is a black snake whip, coiled and ready to strike. Says he hasn't had to use it since he left the old Blue. C. E. Hooper completely relaxed and not a word about ratings. Takes his libation at the Algonquin, where reading a book makes you just as acceptable as writing one. NBC's press chief, Sid Eiges, using up the better part of a day to spike reports of a certain comic slurring a minority. Dave Taylor and his program aides at CBS broadening their A's and bagging their pants to better catch the spirit of the "Old Vic" troupe of Britishers airing on the chain. The chorus is swelling: "Hollywood, he we come."

NAB PREXY HITS PETRILLO SNUB OF PEACE PLAN

Washington, May 26. — Recent brushoff by James C. Petrillo and his American Federation of Musicians' exec board of projected National Association of Broadcasters' plan of getting together with the musicians has aroused a stiff retort from NAB prexy Justin Miller. In an open letter to Petrillo, Miller states:

"I am surprised and disappointed by the front-page editorial which appeared in a recent number of the "International Musician." I have repeatedly requested that a joint committee, representing the AFM and the radio broadcasting industry, be set up for the express purpose of discussing our differences and providing a basis for peaceful settlement. By recommending to our respective groups the adoption of such solutions as may be mutually agreed upon we have met with you on three occasions for this purpose.

"So far as the radio broadcasters are concerned, we are ready to continue at your convenience. We have no desire to use oppressive or unfair methods. We wish to avoid the wasteful procedures of strikes and lawsuits. If such methods and procedures are used, it will still be necessary eventually to sit down around the table and reach agreements by methods and discussion and adjustment. Surely fair-minded people can do this now."

'Sad Sack' Summer Sub for Sinatra

"The Sad Sack," a William Morris agency package, was bought over weekend by Old Gold as summer replacement for Frank Sinatra program. Situation-comedy debuts June 12 over CBS, produced by Ted Shredeman. Herb Vigran, who heretofore has played only bits on air, will essay title role, built around cartoon character created by George Baker.

Atwill for 'Rose'

Roy Atwill, famous comedian of an earlier day, has been signed by Producer-director Eddie Sutherland for a role in "Abie's Irish Rose."

CHOOSE 12 OLD-TIME PIX FOR SCHOOL

Twelve old-time films have been selected by Great Films Society for showing at Beverly Hills High School next Fall. Society met over weekend, and set up three committees to handle its annual program, devoted to exhibition of what it regards classical films.

Among pictures to be exhibited in Fall will be "Greed," "Orphans of the Storm," "Ten Days That Shook the World," "Grass," "The Last Laugh," "The Navigator," "Public Enemy," and assortment of Chaplin comedies.

CIVIC OPERA HIT FOR 10G IN RY. STRIKE VACUUM

Los Angeles Civic Light Opera reported the heaviest dent in legit grosses, amounting to approximately $10,000, as result of the local rail strike. Ken Murray's "Blackouts of 1946" felt the strike only mildly in its Saturday and Sunday matinees, going light about $200 for each performance. "Oklahoma," at the Biltmore, dropped only its lengthy line of hopefuls at each performance, cutting queue of 150 to about 50 of those standing around waiting for cancellations. Otherwise the Guild musical hit house record of $38,000 for the third week. "Tobacco Road," which is only a week old at the Mayan, did a gratifying $8,000 gross, with management reporting that the only manner in which the strike might have hurt is in keeping advance down.

Light Opera dropped from $200 to $300 per performance all through the week on its gallery sales, but it was felt by the management that the main losses came from advance sales. Returned tickets were not in evidence, inasmuch as customers who were able to return them felt they could come to the performance just as easily.

Schine Asks Federal Hearing on Circuit

New York, May 26.—Schine chain of theatres has filed notice in Federal Court here that it will ask Judge Knight for the appointment of a special master to hold hearings and take testimony on the operations of the Schine circuit under present-day conditions. At same time Schine will ask the court to postpone adoption of reorganization plan pending outcome of the proposed hearings.

Kraft Show Drops Five Points As Crosby Quits

The big revelation in the Hooperatings for May 16, is that Kraft Music Hall plummeted 5.1 to wind up with 12.3. Drop coincided with departure from program of Bing Crosby the week before. Abbott & Costello grabbed off the lead, although 14.9 was off 1.1. In place, Rudy Vallee's 12.8, off 0.5, nosed out Kraft.

Here are the leaders: Dinah Shore, 11.8; Suspense, 10.1, off 2.1; Burns & Allen, 9.7. Miss Shore and Burns & Allen had combined the week previous. Gabriel Heatter gained 2.1 at expense of Kraft to nab 7.6. Andre Kostelanetz's 5.0 was a gain of 0.6. Hobby Lobby's 5.4 also was a nudge up, of 0.5. Data on Bob Burns, Jack Haley and Mr. Keen was unavailable.

PEOPLE ARE FUNNY TOPS

On Friday, May 17, People Are Funny shoved Aldrich Family out of lead by gaining 1.9 for a 13.8; while Aldrich sagged 0.4 for a 12.6. Other leaders: Duffy's Tavern, 10.9, no change; Kate Smith, 10.1, up 1.3; Mystery Theatre, 10.7, up 0.6; Durante-Moore, 9.4, down 0.4; Tommy Riggs' debut for Borden nabbed a 7.1; Waltz Time's 7.2 was off 1.2; Bill Stern, 8.2, up 0.9; F.B.I., 6.4, down 0.3; Alan Young, 5.5, up 0.4; Supper Club, 5.8, down 1.1; The Sheriff, 6.8, off 0.4; News of World, 5.1, up 0.1; Maisie, 8.4, down 2.6; Lone Ranger, 6.7, up 0.6; Jack Smith, 6.9, down 2.2; It Pays To Be Ignorant, 6.3, off 1.5; Highways in Melody, 7.0, up 1.3; Gabriel Heatter, 5.3, down 0.2. Danny Kaye gave his Pabst time to Herbert Hoover's talk on European famine and the exprez batted a 9.2.

ON TOBOGGAN

On May 18 the Hooperatings show many more skids than spurts. Truth or Consequences continued to dominate, getting 13.0, which was no change. Can You Top This? ran second with 11.9, a drop of 0.3. Hit Parade, 11.8, up 0.3; Academy Award, 5.4, down 1.2; Dick Haymes, 6.5, off 1.0; Gangbusters, 8.0, off 0.2; Judy Canova, 11.4, off 3.6; Mayor of Town, 9.9, down 2.0; Barn Dance, 6.6, up 1.0; Serenade, 9.1, up 0.6. TELL PROD PLAN ON HUGHES on the advertising ban, with approval of Charles Poletti, Hughes' counsel.

'FIGHT FOR FREEDOM'

Poletti asserted Hughes was not coming into court to get approval of an indecent film, but was fighting for the fundamental rights of freedom of expression. He called the MPAA arbitrary and said he would establish a prima facie case that it operated in the restraint of trade.

Judge Bright indicated he did not see how Hughes could claim MPAA violated the anti-trust laws, since he had been a member himself and had agreed to abide by MPAA rules to which he now objected.

Samuel Rosenman, representing MPAA, admitted the organization intended to expel Hughes if the restraining order had not been issued. As for the revocation of the seal, he said MPAA must keep in its own hands the right to determine whether a picture shall have a seal or not.

CHEAP TO DRESS RUSSELL

Rosenman said the damage to Hughes would be nil if he'd comply with the advertising code administration ruling. He said the expense to Hughes of "dressing up" Jane Russell in ads would be nothing compared to the damage to MPAA members if Hughes is permitted to continue the type of ads he has been using.

Rosenman reprised such ads as skywriters making circles and dots and "Tussel with Russell." He added that Hughes insisted on using untruthful ads in saying the picture is being shown as originally filmed, since both the MPAA and local censors had made cuts.

Poletti cited "The Southerner" and "Summer Storm" as major company pictures where unapproved ads were used, but no action was taken against the distributor by MPAA. Rosenman immediately batted down both cases. On "The Southerner" he pointed out that only one exhibitor used the material and that was without the knowledge of the producer. On "Summer Storm," one exhib got hold of rejected material without the permission of the distributor, but was stopped before he was able to use it.

SEC GETS SQUAWK ON LONG TERM WARRANTS

and acquisitions of biggies in Hollywood is likely to result.

A holder of a large block in one of the most prosperous film lots registered the beef. He pointed out that at present three of the major studios have outstanding warrants issued freely to officers and production officials in large blocks.

The protestant to the Securities and Exchange Commission wants a ruling setting a shorter period on which warrants may be exercised, thus ruling out sure thing profits on a buck jumping market. He points out that as matters stand now executives are permitted to hold their warrants for several years and thus play the market without putting up a cent of their own cash.

In the corporation in which he is interested, he pointed to the length of time fortunate recipients of the warrants are permitted to hold their "bonus certificates" before putting up coin to take over the stock. In all cases the price for the stock to the warrant holders is extremely low. In the case of the studio on which the particular beef was registered, a warrant holder was able recently to buy for $12 stock selling at $61. Having made the purchase, he immediately sold at the same price, thus automatically picking up a profit of $49 a share. Several officials of this corporation are reported to have large blocks of warrants issued to them in addition to their high salaries for their services.

In the case of another studio, the annual report pointed out that some of its officers had warrants for stock at eight dollars a share although the securities were selling at three times that amount. A third studio has issued warrants to toppers both in its home offices and its production lot at from $9 to $12 a share. Many of these are still outstanding with the current market price four and five times the warrant prices.

An indication of impending trouble in the film industry has been noted by market observers in the recent softness of high grade motion picture stocks in a market otherwise strong.

session of legal bickering nearly three hours.

American Broadcasting Co., and Television were forced to plead their cases late when attorneys for KFI and Don Lee haggled all day with California Committee for Radio Freedom, ex-Congressman Thomas R. Ford, rep of Hollywood Council of Guilds and Unions and others protesting licensing of Lee and KFI.

Charging that applicants were biased, Committee attempted to prove unfitness of both without much success. Offering little admissible evidence, they caused day to degenerate into legal battle. Little or no proof of complaints came of disorderly session, and protestants were ordered to submit exhibits for subsequent inclusion in record.

BALTER ON STAND

Day opened with commentator Sam Balter appearing to refute alleged maligning by Earle C. Anthony, owner of KFI, who earlier in week testified that "Balter could be bought." Labeling Anthony "intolerant" and referring to him as "another Colonel McCormick," Balter pictured himself a persecuted champion of people's rights and fair play. He holds a "record of three bouncings in two years" he said. "Adhering to my principles has cost me my jobs."

He was accused of seeking publicity by KFI'ers, and replied that only Anthony's remarks occasioned his presence. Balter dragged in ABC, KFWB, Mutual-Don Lee, KLAC and virtually all of radio industry in relating how he had "gone from top to bottom." He challenged any and all to prove he'd ever catered, and ended with declaring KFI to be "unfit to operate a medium devoted to public interest." In retaliation Louis Caldwell, KFI attorney, questioned qualification of a "sports commentator to comment on international affairs."

PROTESTANTS SCORED

Attorneys for applicants deftly brought out admissions that protestants were not concerned with, nor seldom listened to, others excepting those they espoused and championed. Fulton Lewis and his alleged blasting of Screen Office Employes Guild was target of HCGU in protesting Lee plea. Neither Council rep nor others could offer anything with which to substantiate their claims of bias. Emil Corwin, brother of Norman Corwin, stated regret that the largest local station (KFI) should be doing poorest job in public interest.

Late in afternoon ABC demonstrated itself to be one of the "doers" in television while pushing its case resumed from previous day. Though without any station of its own, ABC has been actively engaged in programming, production and experimentation through associates. Paul Mowrey, video head of net, and Harry Marx, engineering head, testified. ABC presented comprehensive exhibit of surveys, ratings, costs, etc., in its prospectus.

Television Productions lists assets, capital and liabilities (separate from parent Paramount) of $1,285,246 with which to operate in video. Over $120,000 has already been invested in equipment alone, new equipment would take another $261,000, and estimate for initial year's operation is total $896,000.

NO THEATRE THREAT

In its operation Tele would make filmed records of video productions for telecasting by others, stated Raibourn. Home showings do not require attention necessary in theatres, nor is home television as relaxing as going to a show, it was said. Absence of competition was further illustrated with statement that surveys, both by Par and Gallup, have shown that film theatre goers are preponderantly in the 15 to 30 age bracket, while others are homebodies by choice or other reasons.

Cost of big feature films will make them prohibitive to video, says Raibourn, a vet Par veepee. And even in case of "oldies," Par has estimated research cost alone at $3,000 to $5,000 per film to check availability to telecasters.

Howard Hughes is now in the East but will definitely be unable to make appearance in the current hearings.

But now with the railroad strike being settled he was informed that the situation would be clarified. Leserman will remain around for couple of weeks before returning to the coast.

Gardner Asking $200,000 For Wednesday Nite Time

Ed "Archie" Gardner has set a price of $200,000 on promised Wednesday night time on NBC which may now go to Joan Davis. Bristol-Myers, sponsor of both Gardner and Eddie Cantor, entered into an agreement with Gardner whereby the boniface of "Duffy's Tavern" would be moved into Cantor's Wednesday time when it became available. B-M was willing to deliver the time segment but a sudden interest in Joan Davis developed.

Miss Davis is reported sympathetic to a change from Lever Bros. providing a stipulation is made for the Wednesday night spot, which would open up this fall if she accepted, thereby enabling Cantor to start for Pabst next season instead of in '47 as originally proposed. Lever contract with Miss Davis has

THERE is an abundance of socalled whispering reports about a wholesale exodus of Paramount executives and producers. The talk has been that Sol Siegel and Harry Tugend have resigned, due to dissatisfaction with management, and that Richard Mealand, story head, quit for the same reason. However, at Paramount front office, no resignations have been accepted from either Siegel or Tugend. Former has year to go on his contract and latter year and half. Front office boys will tell you that it is just one of those things due to "economic" situation in the industry. Everyone wants a part off the top, in addition to pay, and the company does not want to give any more slices of percentages to producers. Both Seigel and Tugend had asked to be relieved of jobs of executive producer, and make own pictures, studio says, and it consented. Then Tugend held studio responsible for story printed that "he had been kicked down stairs," which studio knew nothing about. Tugend, when making this squawk last Wednesday, submitted his resignation, but it was not accepted. Now neither he nor Siegel will discuss possibility of severing employment connections at the studio. Mealand on the other hand asked for his release more than month ago as he wanted to go to Connecticut to write a book. To sum it all up, arpirin seems to be quite proper in the front office.

FLOCK of radio and ork friends of late bandleader Glenn Miller have grouped together to stimulate some attention for him on June 5, which was his birthday. They are drumming up idea of a "Glenn Miller Day" on which musicrews would do tunes prominently associated with him, and ether programs would salute him. Four name-band batoneers who played under Miller, Tex Beneke, Hal McIntrye, Charlie Spivak and Claude Thornhill, are at work on project along with batoneers who worked with or over Miller in his younger days, such as Benny Goodman, Dorsey brothers and Gene Krupa. Numerous vocalists are thumping for the thing, too, and Paula Kelly and the Modernairs have cut a new disc for Columbia, "Salute to Glenn Miller," which is being rushed by waxery so it will reach disc jockeys and retail stalls by the anniversary.

LATEST studio trick to save time is keying of make-up mirror lights to coincide with lighting used for actor before the camera. The new make-up mirror, developed by Joseph Ruttenberg, is fitted with lights identical to the key lighting of the set on which the star being made up is to work. This will eliminate necessity of changing set lighting because make-up doesn't appear the same on the set as it did under the dressing room illumination. First of the new mirrors will be used in production of "A Woman of My Own," Greer Garson starrer.

TWENTY years ago today the industry witnessed the musical scoring on the first feature film to contain a complete synchronized musical score. On that day, Henry Hadley, conducting the New York Philharmonic, began scoring "Don Juan," John Barrymore starrer. Score, which was penned by Dr. William Axt, was arranged by Major Edward Bowes, David Mendoza and Axt. Warner Bros. music staff is currently digging into more research to be used for studio's 20th anniversary of sound celebration.

FIRST actual formation of music publishing firm by group of ex-servicemen is Songwriter's Publishing Co., which Ben Brown, George Brown, Bob Sherman, Bert Pellish and Stanley Cowan, each of whom recently doffed a uniform, fully own. First song prepped is "Ibbidy Bibbidy," written by Pellish and Bob and Ray Sherman. Others coming up are "Pixie from Dixie" and "I Never Loved Anyone." Firm already has applied for ASCAP membership.

NEW technique for movie snow storms was given a try-out for production execs at RKO lot other day. The snow is made from a chemical which is pumped high into the air from a high-pressure hose and falls in perfect imitation of the real thing. The synthetic snow is lasting, has no odor and will not harm clothes or scenery. Added advantage is that it can be laid down on roofs, or other elevated spots without use of high ladders.

IN line with increasing trend towards cutting authors in on participating deals, Taylor Caldwell got herself a pretty nice cut on her "This Side of Innocence." Besides the $100,000 Story Productions paid for her novel, Miss Caldwell, it is understood, will in addition receive 10 per cent of producers Hal Horne and Armand Deutsch's share of the film's net take.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

At night you hear the crime tales on the air,
The yarns of lowly crooks who rob and kill,
Of murder on a darkened thoroughfare
And dirty work behind the lumber mill.
The culprit triumphs for a fleeting span;
A little while he revels in his power,
And still the keen detective gets his man
And Justice wins in less than half an hour.
You hear the solemn words: "Crime does not pay,"
Projected on the airwaves high and low,
But felony goes on by night and day—
The crooks don't listen to the radio.

"Nevada Lawyer," a tale of Las Vegas, will be filmed, probably as "The Unhitching Post."

Hollywood will be represented by flocks of stars at the Louis-Conn fight. They all fall for colossal productions—a quaint old Hollywood custom.

Spotted by Ethel Meglin on the Rampart theatre marquee:
"I Love a Bandleader."
"There's Magic in Music."

Time was when film actors worked in Griffith Park. Now Phil Arnold sleeps there—in a Quonsett hut.

Up comes "Golden Hills," and you know instinctively that the tale is about early California. Regardless of all the changes in the financial world, early California pictures are always on the gold standard.

Mary had a little lamb
But pushed the meat aside.
"I'd rather have a slice of ham
Or sirloin steak," she cried.

To hear those scientists talk about the new weapons of war, you would think they were writing screenplays for Bela Lugosi.

In the "Razor's Edge" cast is Harry Pilcer, reminding you of Gaby Deslys, who was a front page figure when Hollywood was a field of oats. A young Gaby could write her own ticket in Hollywood today.

Billy the Kid probably would have tossed away his six-gun and walked the straight and narrow path if he had realized all the ruckus he was destined to stir up in years to come.

And what about "Flight to Paradise"? A pretty good location if you can get a reservation.

Art and Labor walk hand in hand. Boo La Von, Main street artiste, has invented a new dance, called the "Transit Strike Strut."

Lamped by Billy Wilson on the Aero theatre marquee:
"Harvey Girls."
"Dangerous Partners."

In simple days that now have went
The agents drew their ten per cent,
Or some such legal rate,
But now the stars decline to play
Unless the film producers pay
Percentage on the gate.

CIVIC OPERA ROAD COST UPS BUDGET SECOND 10G

Another loss of approximately $10,000 was reported yesterday by the Civic Light Opera, when it was revealed that a second $10,000 for transportation of scenery and troupes boosted the budget of the "Vagabond King" and "Roberta" between here and San Francisco. Earlier, it was estimated that the rail strike had nipped the Civic for $10,000 in potential advance sales.

Transportation costs, brought about by late settling of the railway strike, will put "King" and "Roberta" way off any expected profit that might otherwise have accrued. "Roberta," which was produced for nut of $100,000 will go into the red, Civic management announced, despite heavy local sales. "King," which was staged for $70,000 will just about break even. Earlier it was estimated that both shows would show a profit, but it was stated that this is now impossible, even if both companies do SRO for the three weeks allotted them at their respective stands.

Skouras Lauds Film Aid to Greek Relief

Washington, May 27. — Motion picture industry's participation in the Greek War Relief campaigns in the U.S. were given high praise tonight by George P. Skouras. Speaking on behalf of the Relief Association, Skouras related that 64 committees were organized in the industry and 16,000 film theatres collected money for a four-week period. Skouras also cited a March of Time short and another subject made by Metro showing the Greek fight against Nazi oppression and appealing for relief funds.

Par Inks Robinson

Edward G. Robinson has signed with Paramount for a star role in "The Wayfarers."

LEGIT OPENING

"ROBERTA"

A new star flashed on the Coast last night when Luba Malina hit the Philharmonic boards in "Roberta." Comedienne is something new and vibrant in show business and sells beauty, sex and corn in equal parts to reveal that there is something new under the sun. But luscious Luba isn't the only one in the Civic Light Opera production, which is about the smartest, most colorful and capricious Edwin Lester production in many a day. Jerome Kern's score, Sterling Holloway's direction, Robert Kalloch, S. Murray Lange and Walter J. Israel costuming, Aida Broadbent's dance routines . . . all of these are smash showmanship and beauty . . . to say nothing of the gals, both principal and chorus.

Heading the cast besides La Malina are Beverly Whitney, George Britton and Tom Ewell in the romantic and comedy spots. Walter Long and Sondra Barrett have the juvenile and dance key chores which they turn in masterfully. Others who dress up major thesp spots are Nana Bryant, Gilbert Russell, Betty Blythe, Evan Thomas and Barbara Billingsley. Civic has done proud in a show that should have stayed around for months and not weeks.

Downtown First Runs Drop 100G in Rail Strike

Writing off an estimated $100,000 loss due to the 25-day transit strike, downtown first run theatres are optimistic about an upswing in grosses now that trolley tie-up is off. Downtown houses bore the brunt of losses during the strike period, although theatres in the Hollywood and Wilshire areas were nicked slightly during short Pacific Electric walkout late last week.

First runs are looking to estimated $285,000 overall gross on the current week, and figure would have bettered $300,000 had strike been settled last week. "One More Tomorrow" is heading up new bills with bright $57,000 in the three Warner houses, but "So Goes My Love" is way off at $26,500 outlook, even with week-end trolley shutdown at the Pantages and Hillstreet. Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra and the Slim Gaillard Trio clocked very fine $27,500 estimate for week clased last night at the Orpheum.

Holdovers are all sturdy. "Postman Always Rings Twice" finished third frame at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz last night with estimated $39,500. "Do You Love Me" at the State, Chinese and Uptown is coming through with $33,500. Eighth frame of "The Outlaw" in the four Music Halls and second week for "The Virginian" at the two Paramounts is shaping up to approximately $30,000 for each. "The Spiral Staircase" is still sock on third frame at Guild, United Artists and Wilshire, with $27,000. "Seventh Veil" in fourth week at the Vogue is sighting $4,000 and "Dark Corner's" second frame at the Four Star is heading for $5,000.

Story To Set 3 Properties for Pix

Story Productions will have at least three properties in final screenplay form before starting its first picture, "This Side of Innocence," Hal Horne, veepee and chairman of Board, announced yesterday. Script of "Innocence" already is finished. Horne planed in Sunday to resume negotiations for stage space and permanent office quarters.

'Candle-Light' Opens

"Candle-Light," first production of the Los Angeles Repertoire company, opens tonight at the Masque theatre. Michael Mark is directing the play which stars Eva Gabor and features Wilton Graff, Alex Rand and Hans Schumm.

HUTTON AND RCA AGREE ON SONGS

Apparently Betty Hutton and RCA-Victor have reached a reciprocal arrangement on types of ditties she will disc. Songstress quit Capitol last mid-winter and moved over to present affiliation because at Cap she was being confined to novelty selections only, and wanted to do ballads. Recently, Miss Hutton cut her first two sides at Victor studio here and both were novelties; next two, however, will be ballads of her selection. Miss Hutton made her rep warbling novelties and swingy items and at the time she broke with Capitol her rendition of "Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief" was national top-seller.

Metro To Build H'd Blvd. of 1918

Metro will reconstruct Hollywood Blvd. as it was in 1918, for "Merton of the Movies," Red Skelton starrer. Street will go up on one of back lots, and will be faithful replica of boulevard as it stood in that day, period of picture. Studio has number of pictures of street and art department is working from these. It will be avenue of one-story buildings, vacant lots and nickelodeons, all "as was" when film industry really was in its infancy.

As It Looks to FLANNERY
(Famous CBS Commentator)

Yesterday's cheers have such short echoes. Saturday, when the nation's health, welfare and economy were threatened by the railroad strike, President Truman, who proposed drastic action, was a hero. It was said he was the man of the hour and he'd be the man of '48. But after the railroad strike had ended and we were back to what seemed like normal—the coal strike was just being resumed and not yet a new crisis—the President was roundly attacked. He has enough powers now. What he proposes is fascism, slavery, the result of hysteria—it's declared. The chances are that the proposed emergency powers will not become law, especially if the coal strike is settled within a few days. If it is not, we'll be back again demanding action, and ready even for the same bill now being denounced. There is some question of the idea of drafting men into the Army if they refuse to work, because of making the Army a punitive organization, because the action may be inadvisable, and what's more impractical. Think of trying to court martial 400,000 miners!

Valley Of The Zombies

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producers Dorell and Stuart McGowan. Director, Philip Ford. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Screenplay by Dorrell and Stuart McGowan. from original story by Royal Cole and Sherman Lowe. Art direction, Hilyard Brown. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr. and Allen Alperin. Music, Richard Cherwin. Sound, Fred Stahl. Costumes, Adele Palmer. Makeup, Bob Mark. Film editor, William P. Thompson.

CAST—Robert Livingston, Adrian Booth, Ian Keith, Thomas Jackson, Charles Trowbridge, Earle Hodgins, LeRoy Mason, William Haade, Wilton Graff, Charles Cane, Russ Clark, Charles Hamilton.

PREVIEWED at RCA Studios, Hollywood, Cal., May 24, 1946. Running time: 56 MINS.

"Valley of the Zombies" is a bid for chills and thrills with a character who classes as part zombie and part vampire, retaining the standard horror features of both. Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, in dual chore of scripting and producing, have succeeded fairly well in the tough job of rendering the fantastic basic idea plausible and have turned out a show adequate to its market.

Story starts with doctor missing blood from his refrigerator. In checking up he is confronted with Ian Keith, as the zombie — considerable a shock as the doctor recognizes him as an insane patient of the past, dead these five years. It seems that Keith has consigned himself to living death by drinking a mysterious potion from the Valley of the Zombies. He can activate himself only by blood.

The doctor's refrigerator supply proves inadequate and the result is that the doctor himself is found dead a short time later. The body is found by Robert Livingston, as a young physician, and Adrian Booth, as a nurse. They furnish the romantic interest of the piece and collaborate in police inquiry.

Story ends with the trapping of the vampirish zombie and his final liquidation in a death that is guaranteed to stick.

Livingston and Booth give a satisfactory performance and Keith is generally convincing as the horror creature of the piece.

Philip Ford's direction works the script for what suspense and thrill it contains, pacing the show well.

The McGowans have exhibited showmanship in the use of low-budget materials. Camera work by Reggie Lanning is of standard quality and keyed to the horror motif of the yarn.

Roeder's Regular Visit

THE GRAPEVINE: Hal Wallis is more than reluctant to screen "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" around the studios. He's trying to sign Kirk Douglas, Broadway actor who plays one of the leads and goes over big, to a long termer and doesn't want competition to boost the bidding . . . Columbia is proceeding with its suit against Norman Krasna on "Dear Ruth," which studio claims Krasna wrote on its time and turned into a hit still piling up dough for its author. Paramount, which bought the play for screen adaptation, is going ahead with plans for its production regardless of the suit . . . Blood chilling moment in Mike Lyman's yesterday—William Powell, the Thin Man, and Morgan Conway, RKO's Dick Tracy, sat in adjoining booths opposite Lawrence "Dillinger" Tierney . . . Metro's "The Beginning or the End" has a record number of living personalities portrayed, 35, K. T. Keller of Chrysler and James A. Rafferty of Union Carbide the added starters . . . The biggest night club tab of the weekend, running into four figures for a big Saturday night dinner party, was torn into little shreds by one of the co-hosts, a prominent film colony figure, who was deep in his cups . . . Beautiful blonde who stole the show at Mocambo with a spectacular rhumba with the self-anointed pundit, Walter Winchell, was Frances Henderson, of the New York stage . . . Should the shortage of Liberty magazines afflict you, blame it on Arnold Pressburger. He bought up 3000 copies of the issue, which contains a nice review of "A Scandal in Paris," to mail to exhibs and friends.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: A bandleader who just wound up a Beach engagement won't find it so easy to run out on obligations from now on. One creditor is preparing legal action to nail him . . . Eddie Albert, who played in musical comedy on Broadway and sang over his own radio program, is going to get his first chance at singing for a soundtrack in Walter Wanger's "Smash-Up" . . . Exit Hollywood: Hedda Hopper leaves for England June 10, Harry Crocker takes off for New York Friday. Vacations for both . . . Helen Walker's younger sister, Margaret, couldn't follow in her footsteps much closer without tripping. Latter is playing in the same Worcester, Mass., stock company which gave Helen her start and is playing the same role in "Jason" which Helen played on Broadway . . . Mrs. Eddie Sutherland, wife of "Abie's Irish Rose" producer-director, wired him yesterday she had arrived in New York after being stranded in La Junta, Colo., by the rail strike. She left last Wednesday. Oh, for the good old stage coach lines.

CALL SHEET: BOB MAUCH, ex-child actor who appeared in Warners' films with his twin brother Bill, is now a cutter at the studio. Twins last appeared as actors in the A.A.F. production "Winged Victory" . . . ARTIE SCHWARTZ has rented a 50-foot boat and will cruise a party of pals over to Catalina to catch Jimmy Grier's opening at the Casino on Memorial Day . . . DICK COMPTON, ad agency head, pulls in for a vacation next week . . . HARRY SHANNON gives Hollywood as his legal residence but that's about all it amounts to. For the last five months he's been moving from one location spot to another without more than touching home base. Just finished in "No Trespassing" at Sonora and now is en route to "Katie for Congress" on location at Petaluma . . . ETHEL MEGLIN claims that a radio comic who laughs at his own jokes is an egg-otist . . . CHARLIE RICHARDS, Cagney Productions casting director, is entering his racing car, an Offenhauser, in the Indianapolis auto races . . . BILL EDWARDS, Paramount player, is off to the High Sierras on a fishing trip . . . STEVE DARRELL, whose film life is one villainy after another, usually on horseback, is playing a heavy in "Cheyenne" . . . DICK POWERS, who once rode the Hollywood ranges as a western star, has been signed to play the romantic lead in Al Rosen's legiter, "Mary Had a Little."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Today we wander hand in hand into the realms of science. Dr. Jack Rossen, a dentist, has patented a camera device which projects 16m film onto the ceiling to divert child patients. And Art Black, veteran assistant director to Frank Capra, has a lucrative sideline. He has eight portable bidets which he rents out to film companies going out on location at $50 per day . . . That isn't all vacation Lucille Ball is on in New York. She's making 11 p.a.'s tonight and tomorrow at Loew neighborhood houses in conjunction with "Ziegfeld Follies" and plugging "Easy to Wed" . . . Merle Oberon's appearance at Mike Todd's party was a stunner. She wore a 1900 pink satin gown from her "Bella Donna" wardrobe . . . He may not have the polish of a Stokowski or Toscanini, but Wallace Beery will lead a Salvation Army band in a Bowery scene in "The Mighty McGurk" . . . Jim Davis, Metro actor, arrived yesterday after sundry adventures in the rail strike. Returning from his home town of Dearborn, Mo., where his father is mayor and undertaker, he got caught in the strike and decided to drive back to Hollywood in his father's hearse. Strike ended when he reached Kansas City, so he proceeded by train and left the hearse for his father to pick up . . . Wit cracked out of a colleague yesterday who inquired, "Are the people who stand outside radio studios and wait for tickets likely to be termed 'The Yucksters'?"——D.D.T.

A family comedy series with the stars actually portraying their real life roles is the fall entry for Fitch in the NBC Sunday time now held down by Cass Daley. Topping the domestic doings will be Phil Harris and Alice Faye in their respective roles of band leader and film star, with intermittent guest visits from Jack Benny in the preceding niche. Following approval of the Harris-Faye combo by NBC Pexy Niles Trammell, Benny and American Tobacco, contracts are being drawn up for signing before the week is up. Show tees up in September, with Fitch still shopping around for an NBC summer standby. Dick Powell continues on Mutual for Fitch through the summer and into the new season.

Chain breaks . . . It's a race to the wire in the Crossley sweepstakes with the photo sign already up on "The McGee's" (21.3) and Bob Hope (21.2). Knox Manning was picked from an aspiring field of music commentators for the Ford summer show. One of the dowagers of the Ford clan is said to have made the choice from a recording . . . Gardner Asks 200G for Time another year to run but the sponsor would be agreeable to a termination of the pact.

Lee Bristol is reported to have told Gardner that inasmuch as he had been promised the Wednesday night time it would be delivered to him. But Gardner, cognizant of his sponsor's eagerness to land Miss Davis for the product to be relinquished by Cantor, has intimated he would be willing to release Bristol from his promise for a cash consideration of $20,000 a year for 10 years. Understood that Gardner does not want to hold Bristol-Myers to the full amount and has suggested that the drug firm, Pabst and Cantor contribute to the pool. Bristol is said to have rejected this payment plan.

William Morris agency, which handles all three principals in the project —Miss Davis, Gardner and Cantor— has a firm offer from Bristol for the Joan Davis package but no mention is made of a Wednesday night time. Paul Warwick (& Legler) has had conversations with Cantor and both are agreeable to an earlier start for Pabst than called for in the recently signed contract.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Cole Porter and his Linda, accompanied by their best friend Howard Sturgis, saw a private screening of "Night and Day" in the Warner Bros. projection room. And in spite of the fictional embellishments of the truth plus the disregard of chronological events, both Cole and Linda expressed their satisfaction with their fair and Warner treatment.

When this biog of a live hero was first announced for production, one of Cole's intimates called up another intimate and asked, "But how can they make a film of Cole's life? What, aside from his wonderful music, will the story angle be?"

"Why, that's very simple," came back the answer. "First, they'll show him in Peru, Indiana, with a gold spoon in his mouth. Then, they'll lap dissolve to Yale, where he writes the class song and decides he doesn't want to be a lawyer but a composer. So, he becomes a composer and every song he writes immediately turns out a hit. Then, he marries the most beautiful girl in Kentucky—all this, and millions too. Then, his grandfather dies and he inherits his estate. Why, man, just think of the conflict!"

ADD ARRIVALS: Jules Stein at the Waldorf . . . Lizabeth Scott at the Gotham . . . Edith Head at the Sherry-Netherland . . . Earl Carroll at the Astor . . . Jacques and Aileen Leslie at the Biltmore . . . Selena Royale is the houseguest of her mother, Mrs. Edwin Milton Royale.

DISSA AND DATA: Archie Mayo, who has confined his activities to Hollywood for the past two decades, may take a fling at Broadway. He's tres interested in the Jacqueline Susann-Beatrice Cole farce, "The Temporary Mrs. Smith," and if negotiations now under way materialize, Archie may be deserting his new home on Walden Drive to put Luba Malina, Mischa Auer, Millard Mitchell and Fania Marinoff through his directorial paces for an Aug. 7 rehearsal tee-off . . . Gregory Peck has stolen a march on Burgess Meredith and will do "Playboy of the Western World" at the Cape Playhouse this summer, while Faye Emerson will revive George Oppenheimer's "Here Today" at the same strawhat, the week of Aug. 12 . . . Roger Stearns is shuttering his popular "123 Club" for six weeks and motoring to the Coast as the Santa Monica houseguest of Chuck Walters . . . Stuart Barthelmess, handsome son of Dick and Jessica, who has just doffed his Navy braid after five years in the Pacific, heads for the Coast next month to learn the "moom pitcher" business as an assistant to Howard Hawks. Dick, incidentally, who recently bought a new home on Roxbury Drive in anticipation of making his future headquarters in Hollywood, has changed his mind and will remain east . . . At "21" the other lunch hour, the place was jammed with familiar faces all recognizing each other—Gertrude Lawrence, Faye Emerson, Elliott Roosevelt, Sonja Henie, Leo McCarey, Irving Asher, Pansy Schenck, June Clyde, Dorothy Lamour, Kitty Carlisle, Ruth Saucier, Richard Aldrich, Buzz Meredith, Joy Hodges, Mary Constant, Georgie Jessel et al, but at one table sat two gentlemen, unrecognized by most, in spite of the fact that they were the most outstanding celebrities in the room—General Wiedemyer and Wild Bill Donovan.

BREVITY IS THE SOUL OF . . . : June Lockhart, back in New York for the first time since she was the itinerant child of her trouping parents, Gene and Kathleen, was determined to see everything like the average gaping tourist. So, very systematically, she made out a baedeker for herself, and heading the list was this capsule memo: "Carnegie—Hattie and Hall."

"Oh no! Haven't you heard?" Dottie retorted. "We sold it at a handsome loss!"

MOVIE-ING ALONG: Margalo Gillmore will follow the success of "The BOWS" with a solo literary effort—a "Life with Her Father," Frank Gillmore, who was Pres. of Equity during most of their life together . . . It's a baby girl, Angela, for the Johnny Krimskys at the Harkness Pavillion, Medical Center . . . Judy Holliday's grandmother won't go to see her in "Born Yesterday" because she's heard that she doesn't play a "nice" girl . . . And the other night when Charles Frederick's Reverend father came to see "Show Boat" for the first time, the rest of the cast eliminated the few swear words as a "beau geste" to Charlie . . . Bertha Case is reported to have made her beloved husband, Frank, the sole inheritor of her estate, valued at $200,000 . . . Now that Bianca and Jimmy Stroock have launched their youngest chic, Geraldine (Brooks) on a screen career, keep your eye on their eldest eyeful, Gloria, who has just joined them at the Bev-Hills hotel, after winding up six weeks as femme lead with the Blue Ribbon Stock Co. in Louisville, Ky. . . . Michael Arlen, Lawrence Reilly, Bill Eyth, Charlie Russell, John Martin, Oliver Jensen, Sonja Henie and Mrs. Noel Bush came to Buffie Cobb's cocktail party, hosted by her mother, big Buffie . . . but Margaret Whiting was conspicuous by her absence.

KEEP THE BALL ROLLING: The annual AFRA Ball, held in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf, was a great success this year, due mainly to Jack Benny's emceeing of the program. He couldn't have been funnier if his sponsor had been paying him his Sunday night fee, nor could he have heard more appreciative applause than that from his fellow members of AFRA, who included Minerva Pious, Ben Grauer, Bert Lytell, Nan Wynn, Cy Howard, Joe Bigelow, Selena Royale, Frank Parker, Ed Herlihie, Claudia Morgan and Helen Mencken. I wish I could repeat Jack's gag about mistaking Fred Allen for Jane Russell, but Mr. A. U. has the same censorship rulings as American Tobacco!

AUTONOMY IS SOUGHT BY PLUGGERS

What commenced as a placid, routine meeting of board of governors of Coast group of Music Publishers' Contact Employees Association (songpluggers' union) ended in a burst of fireworks yesterday when a decision generally was reached to hold no more meetings until members here are given some measure of autonomy by NY headquarters.

The MPCE holds a national charter from American Federation of Labor, and as a single chapter actually, all powers are vested in NY. Of approximately 700 members, 117 are on Coast, and though localites have a board of eight governors and a regional director, Nat Winecoff, decisions cannot be reached on such matters as "payola" violations or even acceptance of new members. However minor is a matter of purely local complexion, it must be submitted to national prexy Bob Miller in NY for action.

Yesterday, after numerous motions by board members were tabled, dissatisfaction with situation increased and when Winecoff bluntly announced he would call no more meetings "for a year if necessary" until pitch for autonomy is made to headquarters, all members present agreed and meeting broke up. One obvious factor irking the board is fact that, although Miller recently nodded approval to suggestion Hollywood songpluggers hold a benefit, all funds would revert to NY for disbursal to needy members.

Meanwhile, no report has been made on charges leveled last week that certain music publishers were paying vocalists to plug their tunes on Nils T. Granlund's CBS program, "You're in the Act."

Buzz! Buzz!!

They had a bees-tly time of it yesterday on the set of "Bella Donna". While Merle Oberon and Charles Korvin were playing a love scene in the International film, bees, attracted by flowers decorating the set, buzzed down from all corners until an apiarist smoked them out. Swarm's hives on the catwalks were raided for honey by juicers in retaliation.

EAGLE-LION PLANS 100G FACE LIFT

First step in Eagle-Lion's reconstruction policy will be outlay of nearly $100,000 for face-lifting, with further building to go as soon as material and equipment are available. Present plans will include construction of new wardrobe building, dining room, dubbing room, consolidation of two of smaller stages into one large modern stage and refurbishing of other units to make for greater efficiency. James T. Vaughn, production manager of studio, will supervise program.

Joan Leslie Pic for Nasser Announced

Joan Leslie's first picture following her release over the weekend from her Warner Bros. contract will be "Personal Column" for James Nasser and Harry Kesler, they announced yesterday. Yarn is a psychological mystery by Norman Reilly Raine.

Hopalong Winds

"Devil's Playground," first of new "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns under William Boyd's own production aegis, wound up yesterday at General Service.

Chandler Bares Plans for Radio Comeback in Video

Evidently intent on rectifying a major mistake of 19 years ago when it sold KHJ to Don Lee, Los Angeles Times wants in on ground floor of television. Yesterday at Federal Communications Commission hearings on applications, Norman Chandler, publisher, stated Times would throw $4,340,000 into initial expenditures if licensed.

Another $40,000 would be spent monthly in operations, with no profits from video forthcoming sooner than four or five years, said Chandler. (Times has been only paper printing news of hearings to date). $3,000,000 of large total would go into a new, 10-story building. Meanwhile Times is underwriting construction of a suitable structure on grounds of Playhouse. Latter would repay loan necessary while Times paid rent, and had amateur student thesps for exclusive video rights.

DENIES POLITICAL TIE-UP

Opposition attorneys prodded into Times' curtailment of log space to radio, call letter non-mentions, etc. During questioning Chandler stated operation of paper and video outlet would be completely separate. Editorial policy of Times would never be reflected in television operations, nor would politics, excepting paid and balanced stumping, be permitted.

Times, apparently, plans to bank heavily on Playhouse tie-up during minimum five-year ticket with option for maximum of 15 years. Commish reps questioned advisability of nonprofit group such as Playhouse tying up with anyone, and it was disclosed that Thackrey, KFI and Hughes interests had made pitches, too. Lee was not considered because initiative was left to them and they never asked, it was said.

Revelation that the Times had exclusive with Playhouse automatically dissolved affection of 13 years between actor group and Don Lee. For past two years Playhouse has been dickering with Times and working out financial arrangements — while actually telecasting over Lee's W6XAO since 1933.

HOOTCHY-KOOTCHY ANGLE

Question of who "outlawed" who was raised at hearings when, in an attempt to return slaps at "Outlaw" of Paramount, attorney Frank Albertson accused Klaus Landsberg, g.m. of Television Productions (Par) of having skirted decency with telecasting a "hootchy-kootchy dancer" over experimental station W6XYZ.

Barbs resulted in disorder necessitating order call. That and revelation of Times-Mirror Co. of exclusive talent tie-up with Pasadena Playhouse highlighted meeting that ended Par's case, and the Times' plea, including appearance of publisher Norman Chandler. Today will see close of sessions with case of finalist, Dorothy Thackrey (KLAC).

Howard Hughes interests also tried to bring out testimony that Par acted contrary to FCC's freeze orders during war in proceeding with its plans before obtaining necessary construction permit.

WRIGLEY LIFTING CATALINA FACE IN BLDG. PUSH

Chicago, May 27. — Face-lifting, subdivision and rebuilding of St. Catherine Hotel are among Philip K. Wrigley's immediate plans for Catalina Island. The gum magnate, whose family owns the island, proposes to turn it into a second Malibu Beach, and is currently rushing this program into effect:

All business enterprises on the island are to be renovated, plane service and high-speed boats are to make the island more accessible to the mainland, a complete new sewage system is to be installed.

Another phase of the plan to boom Catalina is the assignment of Cliff Johnson, veteran CBS-WBBM announcer, to Catalina to do 11 broadcasts a week, seen as the first step in application for a license to operate a radio station on the island and hypo the real estate buying.

Ex-Sailor Music Aide Sues Dinning Sisters

Chicago, May 27.—A $24,350 damage suit was filed against the Dinning Sisters trio in Superior Court here by Arthur L. Fcscinato, their former music arranger and coach. He claims they ignored a clause in contract which gave him his job back after his discharge from the Navy.

Patten in 'Beanstalk'

'Ambler' to Blumenthal

Richard Blumenthal's first producer stint at Paramount since returning to lot will be "Gary Ambler." William Holden and Jane Wyman will co-star.

All In The Family

Announcement was made yesterday of new indie production company planned by Merle Oberon and her husband, Lucien Ballard, and Veronica Lake and her husband, Andre De Toth. Under proposed plan, two actresses will co-star in story currently being written by their husbands, who in turn will co-produce, with De Toth directing and Ballard handling cameras. Articles of incorporation are in process of being drawn up.

NAT'L THEATRE SWEET TAKE and sees the $10,000,000 gross goal as a cinch because of general easing of sweets and corn supplies.

Addition of records to products available to filmgoers will be an innovation for theatres, but latter are considered a natural outlet since about 70 per cent of the popular tunes on the market today originate in pictures. Record sales experiment will be tried out in five show cases spotted around the country before being generally adopted in the circuit's 640 theatres.

Idea originated with Andrew Krappman, who recently moved over from spot as Fox West Coast Southern California division supervisor to NT's merchandising department.

Circuit is negotiating with RCA Victor on the possibility of obtaining platters for theatres. Understood that Jack Kapp of Decca was approached on plan but was not receptive due to shortage of disc raw stock and fact it would be competition for established music stores. RCA, however, is reported most receptive to the idea. If suitable handling can be worked out, NT may even add ice cream and soda pop to wares available in theatre lobbies.

National Theatres derives a net of approximately 35 per cent from its candy and popcorn sales. From profits theatre managers and other personnel are cut in for 25 per cent, adding considerably each year to their regular salaries.

company. He had been working in the Jack Gross unit and just completed "Bedlam."

At time Charles Koerner made his deal for RKO production with J. Arthur Rank in London, it was planned to have Lewton make the initial pictures. That plan evidently changed as Adrian Scott has been assigned to make a picture which is now in preparation.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

WILLIAM Morris agency is attempting to clear the way for Victor Records to wax Slim Gaillard rendering his novelty hit, "Cement Mixer." The singer-guitarist did the trick in February for Cadet label, local indie waxery, and the item proved white-hot seller on Coast, only area where Cadet had distribution. Now Victor, with whom Gaillard was signed only fortnight ago, would like a repeat for national spread, so Morris office has made a pitch to Musicians' Local 47. It is understood that there are a few angles in the Gaillard-Cadet contract which may open up a path, such as fact agency did not represent singer in the singing, although Gaillard was bound tightly to agency at time. It was through that loophole that Morris snapped the waxing pact which Gaillard made himself, sans knowledge, with 4 Star Records and which was broken after representations to Local 47 so performer could be pacted by Victor.

In addition to extra benefits, vacation plan also permits employes with at least two weeks coming to divide the time off, taking one week early and the other at any time up through December. Employes with 52 weeks continuous service as of April 1 this year, get one week's paid vacation; those with 104 weeks service, two weeks with pay; 156 weeks, three weeks with pay; 208 weeks or more three weeks with pay plus an extra week's salary.

JAMES A. FitzPatrick and Metro have both scheduled series of musical shorts based on lives and music of famous composers. Former, who originally negotiated with Metro for films until deal fell through, already has closed with Werner Janssen to record series with his Los Angeles Symphony orchestra, and has definite commitment with Technicolor for use of their process. Metro has assigned Jerry Bresler stint of turning out its series. FitzPatrick several years ago made similar series as silent films, then when sound became universal put in musical score. Both parties have screenplays in preparation, Metro announcing it expected to put first before cameras in from 30 to 60 days.

MINORITY group of studio tecnicians are calling for immediate innovations in set construction. Leaders state that new plastics, plywood, adhesives and glass products should all find their way, as soon as possible, into motion picture making. They claim that the industry should give manufacturers of these products a more complete and satisfactory statement of studio requirements in that direction. By doing this, it would make the manufacturing of the needed product more certain, more modern and more profitable.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Molotov's blaming of the United States and Great Britain for the failure of the Paris conference was headline news over here in the United States. We don't have to conjecture as to what kind of space Byrnes' reply will get in the Russian press. It would be healthful of course, if the statements could be carried in full, as they develop, in the press not only here but there. The Molotov statement was to have been expected, if only in the routine of answering Byrnes for the record. That does not mean that Molotov is not sincere. The United States and Britain have worked pretty closely together, and that is suspicious to the Soviet, but we start out with similar principles, and with a reciprocative suspicion of Soviet motives. The discouraging angle is that attempts to determine upon some pattern of working with Russia are rebuffed, as in the proposed 25-year disarmament pact for Germany. Stalin, as Byrnes insists, may have said he would "wholeheartedly support" such a treaty, but Molotov, who is more anti-capitalist than Stalin, is a man of power in Russia, too. Byrnes now extends his hand again, with the proposal of a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation. A few successful affirmative actions would help us get into step, and move with more trust toward what are actually our common objectives in peace and security.

Politics Shoved Out of Tele Quiz of Dorothy Thackrey

Politics ducked in for first time—and was booted out of—multi-million dollar video hearings yesterday when counsel for Howard Hughes asked personal "political philosophy" of applicant Dorothy Thackrey. Question raised storm of protest in which virtually all opposition counsels joined Thackrey attorney, forcing withdrawal of question. But "lib . . . " was her reply, cut short by outburst. Event marked last attempt of militant Hughes side to detract from various applicants. From start KFI and Hughes carried torch.

Plea of Thackreys (KLAC) was last of session—and least contested to date. There was little cross examination of witnesses who included Ted and Dorothy Thackrey, Don Fedderson, g.m., and Paul Schultz, chief engineer. Testimony revealed Thackreys were prepared to spend over half a million dollars for initial operations, plus $335,000 annually thereafter. Sums are to come from total assets, liabilities and capital of $8,092,817.

CITE PRESENT OPERATIONS

Qualification was based largely on present radio stations operations here and in New York, plus public interest reflections of New York Post operations. However, statement was made editorial bent of Post would not be carried over into new medium if licensed. Like others, Thackreys offered exhibit replete. They were sole indie station applicant among networks, affiliates motion picture company, newspaper and industrial applicants.

Latter portion of day was given over to introduction of late exhibits and evidence from Hughes and Don Lee. Latter answered charge of irregularities in relations with affiliates, supplied equipment contracts, and refuted union claims resulting from broadcast of Fulton Lewis. Hughes furnished breakdown of video expenses to date ($141,000, mostly in salaries and real estate).

Engineering hearings which close pleas will be held in Washington, D.C. on June 20. Television Productions (Paramount) hurdle on Scophony anti-trust action will then be heard, plus Lee station relations matter, still in works. About two months after engineering reconvening decision of commission may be expected, it's understood. Dissatisfied then have 20 days to apply for re-hearing.

FORESEE '47 OPERATION

All applicants expressed likelihood of being in full operation by early 1947 if licensed. Mt. Wilson is transmitter site of majority. Commercialization will not exceed ratio of 70 to 30 most aver. Equipment delivery will regulate operational expectancy, and disclosure was that Radio Corp. of America will supply four of eight. General Electric has three and Dumont (Par) its own affiliate. Films will probably average good 50 per cent of planned productoin, it was brought out, percentages varying from 30 to 60 among applicants. It's estimated grand total of approximately $10,000,000 will go into initial expenditures if seven are licensed. Operations of all in first year are figured to cost approximately another five million, according to prospects submitted. Indications are that Television and Lee would get jump on others due to already operating experimentally, and former is best generally equipped due to newer equipment and Par affiliation which could be an important assist in production.

In testimony, Thackreys also stated they would go limit of their resources if necessary when pushed as to extent of their willingness to stand losses. In reply to question of absentee ownership they cited location here of general management, and their intention to share time between eastern and western interests.

Herbert Aller, of Local 659 of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, repping motion picture cameraman was, was permitted to make a pitch for use of filmsters in video, and Thorus Le Croix, of National Association of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians, also spoke for his engineers.

CBS Gets OK on Color Tele Stations on Mount Wilson

CBS has been given the green light by Civilian Production Administration to erect two buildings atop Mt. Wilson for experimental color television. Construction starts at once on the project to cost around $25,000. Larger of the structures will house the video transmitter, scanners and projection equipment. Other building will supply the power with Diesel generators. Facilities for color transmission are now under test in the east and will be shipped here when the buildings are completed. CBS now has an application before Federal Communications Commission for license to experiment with color similar to its New York venture, which has been operating since last February.

The staff is slated to work almost entirely abroad, supervising work of other MPEA employes in the various countries. Maas, second to Murray Silverstone in handling affairs for 20th-Fox International, has been loaned to MPEA for a period of three years.

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Barry Fitzgerald is taking off for his long-planned return to Ireland. He will spend at least two months down where the Liffey flows—that's a river running through Dublin. He won't work in any picture for at least six months . . . Governor Jimmie Davis of Louisiana, Southern Music's most prolific cleffer of hillbilly tunes, has knocked down approximately 34 grand in royalties in the past year. That's nearly three times his gubernatorial salary. What price statesmanship? . . . Group of Catholic professionals plans to troupe a company across the U.S. with a repertory of plays based on the lives of Saints, with "St. Catherine of Siena" already approved by Archbishop Cantwell as the first production . . . Shirley Ross was called back for encore after encore when she appeared at the Good Shepherd Convent Guild benefit at the Cocoanut Grove . . . Disgruntled whisper around town is that two young actors who returned to Leo the Lion's cage after overseas service were told there were so many stars on the lot that no roles were available for them . . . Alexis Minotis, husband of Katina Paxinou and now embarked on his own film career with a top role in "The Chase," is working with a skinfull of penicillin. He's been taking the shots for blood poisoning which resulted from scratching himself on a rusty nail while working in his garden . . . Dept. of Generous Gestures: Four hundred orphan children were entertained yesterday at a matinee performance of "The Ice Capades" through the good offices of John Harris, producer of the show and "Big Boss" of the Variety Clubs of America, and Charles P. Skouras, chief barker of Tent 25 . . . Henri Charpentier stages a double premiere tonight and tomorrow night of his swank new restaurant Henri's, located on the former Sunset Strip site of the Colony Club. Charpentier at one time operated famous eateries in Cannes and Paris. New spot will stress Continental cuisine.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: When Gail Patrick and Bob Cobb were divorced, one of the terms of settlement was that Miss Patrick be given four seats at the Hollywood Stars ballpark for life. She had chipped in with Cobb and Vic Collins to buy the club's franchise . . . Fred Schiller, who with the late Miles Mander and Thomas Dunphy wrote "Ring Twice Tonight," the Mae West vehicle now rolling up the Coast, writes that the Shuberts, not Jim Timony, are backing the play. With a neatly-contrived comedy (one of the few she hasn't written for herself), Miss West is heading for another tapping of the theatrical Mother Lode, if Chicago and New York go for the show as heavily as Coast town audiences. Time Magazine is doing a story and Life is preparing a picture layout on the unexpected revival. Odd facet is that her new vehicle is not loaded with the sex melodrama which carried her to fame . . . Warners flackery primly reports that "Errol Flynn returned from San Francisco where he participated in the state amateur tennis tournament." And a few headlines . . . Nitery notery: Lloyd Pantages and his sister, Carmen Pantages Considine; the Murphy Hirschbergs with a party, at the House of Murphy. Sidney Miller and Virginia Weidler, Louis Hayward and Peggy Morrow, at the Beverly Tropics. Bob Hutton and June Haver holding hands in the Strip night spots. Dorothy Claire, songstress at Slapsy Maxie's, says a patron asked her if Be-Bop is any relative of Bo-Peep's.

CALL SHEET: BILL WILLIAMS and BARBARA HALE plan to be married next month, about the time RKO's "A Likely Story," in which they are co-starred, will be released . . . CATHERINE McLEOD, Frank Borzage's discovery for "I've Always Loved You," has asked the Republic flackery to skip the cheesecake and romance treatment. She wants to be known as an actress, or maybe an idealist . . . ROSALIND RUSSELL put in long distance calls the other night for Sister Kenny, in Brisbane, Australia, and a friend in San Francisco, to tell them about the rave reactions to "Sister Kenny." Just to show how the world is shrinking, the Australian call came in first, seven minutes flat! . . . VERONICA LAKE got a double lensing from Life photogs this week, one for a feature layout, the other for a series of 12 "surrealistic" portraits of Hollywood stars . . . SHERIDAN GIBNEY, having finished the screenplay of "The Royal Family," is heading for a NY vacation with his wife . . . MRS. RUTH MESERVEY, mother of Robert Preston, has entered the record-manufacturing business . . . BONITA GRANVILLE has opened a second beauty salon in Bevhills . . . SIGNE HASSO is looking for a beach house, but it better be closer than the last one offered—it was 800 miles down the Coast in Mexico.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Max Steiner is starting his 10th year as music director at Warners. During the past decade Steiner has written the scores for 72 feature films, and won Academy Awards for the music in "Now Voyager" and "Since You Went Away." Currently he is scoring "Cloak and Dagger" . . . A wit on the set of "Lady in the Lake," observing the film's leading lady, Audrey Totter, being introduced to Bill Teeter, recently tested for a Metro contract, suggested that they be co-starred because Teeter-Totter would be a natural for theatre marquees. (We've come to terms with the gentlemen who assemble this paper that it IS "Lady in the Lake," and they won't try out any new spelling systems if we won't try to set type) . . . International News Service will syndicate a weekly column on new records to be written by Owen Callin of the L.A. bureau . . . "Beggars Are Coming to Town" was a flop on Broadway but Hal Wallis believes the script now being whipped into shape by Robert Smith and John Bright will put it over for film audiences. He's pouring more money into the "Beggars" budget than any of his previous ventures for Paramount release . . . After viewing the first two weeks of shooting on "Dishonored Lady," Hunt Stromberg is trying to sign Bill Lundigan, one of Hedy Lamarr's leading men, to a long termer . . . Recent plans for a re-do of "The Scarlet Letter" have brought the suggestion that they use the title once offered by Jerry Hoffman—"How Hester Won Her 'A' "——D.D.T.

'CANDLE-LIGHT' IN WEAK OPENING AT MASQUE

Candle-Light opened the Masque theatre on Wilshire Boulevard last night and revealed all the flaws of Little Theatre with a deadly performance that was more in keeping with tragedy than comedy in its pacing. Michael Mark, who directed as well as produced, allowed the show to move along at a snail's pace which killed whatever humor might have been lurking in the Wodehouse-Geyer script.

Eva Gabor, Wilton Graff, and Alex Rand had the lead roles and did what they could by them. Others in the cast were Jane Adair, Hans Schumm and Paul Graham.

Show is not good commercial theatre nor good commercial Little Theatre unless it gets a shot in the arm. The new house is a pleasant little building and deserves better fare than this.

Lou Breslow has finished the screenplay on the Elliot Paul original and production is slated to start in mid-July.

BUD ABBOTT

Born William Abbott under a circus tent in Asbury Park, New Jersey, he was the son of a circus advance man and a bareback rider. His first job was in Coney Island's Dreamland Park where he did a kid-prank in the Crystal Maze. When the customers would get lost in the maze, Abbott would appear and lisp: "Are you lost, mister? I'll take you outside for a dime."

At sixteen Abbott occupied the box office of a Brooklyn burlesque theater. He had just got this job when he walked into a waterfront café and woke up to find himself stoking coal on a Norwegian freighter bound for its home port. Back in Brooklyn he re-entered the box office field, and later with his brother operated theaters in six cities.

One night in a Pennsylvania town he was rushed on stage to replace an ailing comic. He never left the stage. In 1936 he joined a sad-faced little clown named Lou Costello in a Minsky burlesque unit in Chicago.

▶ In January, 1938, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello were doing a five-a-day act at Loew's State Theater on Broadway. Ted Collins, Kate Smith's business manager, was in the audience and spotted them. They appeared on the Kate Smith Hour. Soon they were regularly engaged on this show. In July, 1940, they moved to NBC as a summer replacement for Fred Allen. The following April they began a regular spot on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show. In October, 1942, under the sponsorship of Camel Cigarettes, they began their own show on NBC. It immediately became one of the top Hooper-rated shows.

Back of their fun-façade, Abbott and Costello take life seriously. They pride themselves that in all their years in burlesque they never used a profane word. Concerned with the growing juvenile delinquency problem, they have established a national youth-serving agency to promote the

LOU COSTELLO

Born Louis Cristillo in Paterson, New Jersey, his first love was basketball. He attended high school only during the basketball season. When his teacher made him write on the blackboard 100 times, "I'm a bad boy," he never forgot it. Years later it became a trade mark known to millions—"I'm a Ba-a-a-d boy!"

Lou hitchhiked to Hollywood, arriving with 65¢ in his pocket. During his first six months in the film capital he was constantly on the verge of starvation. Helene Costello, starring in an early talkie, "Trail of '98," was required to dive out of the second floor window of a Klondike hotel. Dressed in a flowing black wig and a can-can dress, Lou took the dive. Later he also took her name—out of gratitude when she saved his job for him.

After two years of stunting and bit parts he hitchhiked back east and landed a job in burlesque in St. Joseph, Missouri. Then he was off to Minsky's and a fateful rendezvous with Bud Abbott.

health and good citizenship of boys and girls. Known as the Lou Costello, Jr. Youth Foundation—named in memory of Costello's infant son who died in 1943—its headquarters will be a building costing more than $200,000, financed entirely by Abbott and Costello.

Abbott and Costello would be the first to tell you that their real success came with radio. Once on NBC they skyrocketed to fame and fortune. It is a familiar story. Opera stars or burlesque comedians, concert singers or boogie woogie idols—it makes no difference. Given that indefinable something known as showmanship, backed by genuine talent, they achieve their greatest success on NBC. For NBC impartially opens to showmanship and talent of all kinds its superlative facilities which lead to the world's greatest audience and the association of other great programs heard on NBC.

MAGNETIC SALE OF 'DREAMLAND' ENDS FEUD

Edwin H. (Buddy) Morris Music Co. yesterday bought the pop song "Dreamland Rendezvous" from Magnetic Music Co., thus ending the minor feud within latter firm as to whether the ditty should be sold or not. Magnetic is partnership of George Jessel, songwriter L. Wolfe Gilbert and arranger Ben Oakland. Fortnight ago several companies wanted to take over "Dreamland" and fireworks flared when Jessel wanted to sell and Gilbert didn't. Oakland didn't take initial sides in long argument, but it was he, incidentally, who arranged sale yesterday and talked Gilbert into letting ditty go.

Gilbert had refused to consent to peddling piece because it was sole item in Magnetic catalog and he pointed out that with loss of song, which trio had authored, firm might as well be out of business. Jessel's contention was that bigger publishing house would make more of a dent with ditty by wide exploitation.

By JACK HELLMAN

The time has come for knuckling down and those who believe the gravy train is still rolling are in for a rude awakening. Agents and packagers alike will feel the impact of the retrenched dollar and the day of boxcar figures has been consigned to limbo. In one of the bigger commission houses the summer budgets have been trimmed by half and it is not implausible that this state of strained finance will overlap into the new season. Salesmanship, a forgotten commodity during the war years, has reared its lusty head and those who can make a case for their show or client—and at a price—will share in the lean pickings. Quality, another badly abused virtue of the bonanza years, is due for its just desserts.

Also rising to plague the sellers of shows and talent is the mounting number of programs made available for divers reasons, not the least of which is the absence of the tax-ridden bankroll. It would not be surprising to see stars double up next autumn, a necessary maneuver if the solo toppers are to keep the kilocycles warm. Hardest hit on the price line will be the film guestar, whose fee became almost standard at $5,000. Budgets won't permit such extravagance and a show will have to rise or fall by its own merit or lack of it. If all this sounds like wolf-cry or gloom-tipped pessimism it's because the portents point that way. It's the only realistic viewpoint that can be taken in the light of the recent upheaval and what seems to be unmistakably shaping up for the future. In the agencies there is no attempt to blow down what's in the wind. They not only know it's coming but they're preparing for it.

Chain breaks . . . Dema Harshbarger has three deals on the front burner for Hedda Hopper, with Procter & Gamble (Camay) getting most of the flame for a dramatic series similar in format to Lux. HH would preside in the DeMille manner . . . A squirrel ran up Bob Redd's leg and nipped him, requiring cauterization . . . Mark Woods, ABC headman, and Paul Mowrey, chain's television director, train back to N.Y. tomorrow after appearing at the FCC video hearings . . . Jack Runyon and MCA have parted company . . . Myron Kirk back in town for another try, no doubt, at romancing Bing for Texaco . . . Santa Fe will hold up the Super Chief at Pasadena for a quarter hour Friday to take on board Jimmy Durante, Garry Moore, Phil Cohan and Roy Bargy for the season's finale in N.Y. June 7 of their Rexall series. They're dropping off three weeks early and returning that much sooner after 13-week layoff. Show has been renewed for straight 39 . . . Russ Johnston around for a few days and then flying back east in his own ship . . . Bob Crosby has been renewed by Ford into October. Likewise "Date with Judy" for summer and fall . . . Charles Smith, CBS market research counsel, will talk to agency reps Tuesday at KNX on daytime spending.

Let there be no qualms about joke shows and their chief protagonists, who have been punching the Hooper line all season for smacking gains. Showing the way to the Top 15 in "Hoop's Handicap" are the funny fellows who have lorded it over the list since the opening gong. Bob Hope is in the commanding position with a take of 27.5 against negligible opposition, and slipping past "The McGee's" at 24.2 is Red Skelton, who practically monopolized the sets in use on that time segment. "Fibber's" 23.5 allowed for the opposing "This Is My Best" to post 6.2 and Fred Allen sheared off 19.8 against 7.4 for "Crime Doctor." The others and their opposish trailed along in this fashion: Screen Guild Players 19.7 (Secretary James Byrnes 8.9); Lux 19 (Telephone Hour 9.5, "Information Please" 8.4); Charlie McCarthy 18.8; "Mr. D.A." 18.4 (Bob Crosby 8.2); Jack Benny 18.3 ("Thin Man" 7.6); Walter Winchell 17.4 (Manhattan Merry Go Round 10, "Corliss Archer" 5.8); Kay Kyser, Jack Haley 16.3; Phil Baker 15.5 (Phil Spitalny 9); Abbott and Costello 14.9; Amos 'n' Andy 14.5 ("Inner Sanctum" 9.4).

Hardest hit in the individual ratings was "Gildersleeve," who took a 4.2 thumping to pull up at 11. PETRILLO FORCING LEA BILL ISSUE IN RADIO

Chicago, May 28.—James C. Petrillo today called out three WAAF musicians and bluntly stated he was expecting prosecution under the Lea bill for thus instigating a strike. The trio of studio librarians were thumbed off their jobs by the American Federation of Musicians' prez because WAAF recently refused to employ three additional librarians.

The Lea bill, made law last month, provides up to one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine for any union compelling broadcasters to hire more musicians than they want. "The union appreciates that its action is contrary to the restrictions of the Lea bill," Petrillo said after his action. "However, as president of my union I am, upon advice of able and experienced legal counsel proceeding in the firm and sincere belief that the Lea bill is a violation of the fundamental law of the land, the Constitution of the U.S."

Signing with Roach has been delayed, due to illness of studio head.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 28.—One item appearing in the official bulletin of the Spanish Government and soon to appear in a Department of Commerce publication shows clearly the trend of the film industry in that country.

On Feb. 7, 1946, a decree was published in Spain relating back to the law of Nov. 1939 "for the regulation and defense" of the motion picture industry. New decree requires that all phases of the film industry be domestically held. It states specifically that all shares in film studios or in companies engaged "in related activities" must be held in the name of specific Spanish nationals and may not be transferred to foreigners. Ruling seems a move to bring the industry more directly under State control in Spain.

However, our State Department officials point out that there is a certain leeway possible for foreign capital in a clause within the decree which says that the Council of Ministers may modify the law "for reasons of reciprocity" or when it is for the common good. What it actually means will become clearer when and if our negotiations with the Spanish Government reach a conclusion.

Suicide here last week of Alan Nathaniel Steyne, prominent State Department official, deprived the motion picture industry of a friend. Steyne, who served from 1937 to 1943 as consul and first secretary of the American Embassy in London, sat in on the monetary negotiations between England and the U.S. His influence was exerted during the war to help American film people obtain foreign exchange from the countries into which they sent films. As a result of his negotiations, film funds were kept from being frozen. Steyne, a close friend of many leading American film people here and abroad, had been in ill health.

When Spyros Skouras was in these parts, UNRRA director general Fiorello La Guardia sold him a bill of goods to do a short on European food relief. 20th-Fox is now collecting material for the pic . . . "Seeds of Destiny," screened for Si Fabian and Bob Coyne in N.Y. last Thursday, should get the green light any day now . . . Fabian, incidentally, was due in here Saturday to talk over the situation for theatres with CPA officials, because of the coal shortage. He could not leave Manhattan because of the railroad strike, but Ted Gamble made it by plane the night before . . . "Out of the Ruins," UNRRA three-reeler on Greece, giving a comprehensive picture of that country, is being completed in Canada now. It will probably be offered to art theatres and will also go on the 16m circuit throughout the world . . . "Open City" was screened at the Italian Embassy prior to a brass hat preem at the Little Theatre in D.C. for the benefit of Italian relief.

New film to be used by the Famine Emergency Campaign on the non-theatrical circuit is a 4-minute short, "Our Children," narrated by Gene Kelly . . . The Cereal Institute, which financed the production of Walt Disney's "Something You Didn't Eat," has offered to take care of replacement of damaged footage for Agriculture Department which lists the film as a "best seller."

Paul Robeson will speak and sing at a Win-the-Peace rally in town June 13 . . . Washington Visual Workers, which meets weekly to discuss film problems and hear speakers from the field, has inspired similar film groups in New York, Atlanta and Pueblo, Colo. There is the germ of a real good will stunt in this for the motion picture industry to support and foster . . . D.C. theatre managers are counting the grey hairs acquired as a result of the coal and rail strikes . . . Washington is due for another midtown showcase house as soon as the building restrictions are eased. Trans-Lux, which has a newsreel theatre in town, will build it and may operate it. RKO would jump at a chance to lease the house when and if completed, because of the firm's heavy backlog of product for screening in Washington. It will be at least a 1500 seat theatre, small as downtown D.C. houses go.

GUILD MEETS ON AIR SPONSOR CUT

Radio Writers' Guild has whistled up emergency meeting of general membership tonight for floor discussion of recent proposal advanced by ad agencies, asking that sponsors get percentage of outside profits derived from scripts initially used on their airshows. This is latest bone of contention in eight-month-long negotiations between union council and committee repping agencies, and council is bringing matter before rank-and-file members for discussion to get their reactions.

Agencies' proposal would mean that original sponsor-buyer of any air scripts would get slice of any subsequent profits author realized through sale to stage, screen or other radio use. To date, in negotiations, RWG council has held that the original sponsor be given only a license to a single air performance.

ALL BARS ON U.S. PIX IN FRANCE OFF JULY 1

French loan delegation here. Pact, a separate protocol attached to the loan agreement, further provides for complete lifting of all restrictions, except those applied to French films, during life of agreement.

Pact provides a formula for the entry and exhibition of our pictures, while at the same time protecting the French studios now fighting to get back on their feet again. Any number of American pictures can be imported into France.

MAY LIFT ALL LIMITS

A screen quota system is set up under which French exhibitors are required to show French-made films for "not more than four weeks per quarter." The other nine weeks, the exhibs can buy from anyone and our people are confident they can win a major share of that booking in competition with other countries.

If, over any two-year period, French-made pictures have been able to win a total of five week's playing time per quarter, then the French government will drop the quota ceiling from four weeks to three weeks, on this proof of the strength of the French studios in turning out competitive product. If, during any two-year period the three-week quota is in effect, French films still hold an average of five weeks playing time per quarter, France will completely abolish the quota system and restore full free competition of films.

QUOTA TEMPORARY

Thus the protective "screen quota" system is a temporary measure although there is no indication how long it will last. It could not be abolished for at least four years, under the pact, and may last much longer. The agreement says about the institution of free competition:

"The French government has agreed that, in the period following that during which the screen quota remains in force, it will impose no restrictions whatever on the importation of American films into France, and no restrictions other than the screen quota on the exhibition of American films in France, except such restrictions as are also applied to French films."

ESCAPE CLAUSE

Deal also has an escape clause. In case the arrangement does not work out to satisfaction of either side, it provides for negotiations toward modifying or terminating the deal. In the event such changes are not agreed to within six months, "the terms of the reciprocal trade agreement which is then in effect between them shall apply." Escape clause is more advantageous to the French as there is still in effect the reciprocal trade agreement of 1938. Under that one, the French are guaranteed 40 per cent of their own playing time. The new deal gives them less.

Utah Reception for Sherman Troupe

State of Utah will toss reception and luncheon Friday in Salt Lake City for Harry Sherman and members of his "Ramrod" troupe, with Acting Gov. E. E. Monson hosting, Company will remain there for two days before proceeding to Zion National Park, for start of first Enterprise film.

6 Miniature Sets Of H'd Preemed

Hollywood, for all the world to see, was offered in miniature form last night, at preview showing of six miniatures representing different cross sections of the film capital. Exhibition was staged by Hollywood in Miniature, Inc., corporation headed by Don Hartman and Nat Goldstone, with John Arthur acting as operator.

Six miniatures are replicas of Malibu Beach, Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Wilshire Brown Derby, Hollywood Bowl, a typical motion picture studio and finally, City of Hollywood. Plans, preliminary arrangements and construction by 50 technicians, artists and others covered 10-year period, it is announced, at reported expenditure of $250,000. First five exhibits measure approximately five feet across; with Hollywood itself 12 by 12. Tiny vistas are built to scale, with painted backdrops, an impressive study in miniature work with its thousands of small structures.

Project is to be taken to New York in Fall, for year's showing there, then will be taken around country on junket. Principle here is that for all those who can't come to Hollywood, Hollywood will go to them. Portion of proceeds in New York exhibition will go to charity.

350G SLATED FOR 6 STARLIGHT BOWL OPERETTAS

Budget of approximately $350,000 has been set for the slate of six operettas to be produced by the Hollywood Starlight Bowl Association in the Griffith Park Greek Bowl. $125,000 of that sum will go into preproduction expenses, it was revealed yesterday by Gene Mann, managing director. Group will charge $3.60 top for the shows, which will play two weeks each during the 12 week season.

Slate of shows, opening July 8 with "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time," includes "Firefly," "New Moon," "Wizard of Oz," "East Wind" and "Rosalie." Signed to comedy chores for "Two Hearts" yesterday was Chick Chandler. Other inkings include Marion Bell, Metropactee, and Vera Marshe, for "New Moon."

James Westerfield will direct the shows and Val Raset, who did the choreography for "Cover Girl," will take over terp chores. Costuming will be done by Brooks Costume Co. of New York.

Mann stated that the plan is to take "Two Hearts" to New York after the close of the season here. He said, provided the local response is promising, Starlight will ink Metopera and Broadway names for the season next year.

Silk Hunts Unknown To Play Claudia

Funeral services for Mrs. Molly Beirstein, 77, mother of Flo Browne, film agent, will be held today in the Hollywood Cemetery Chapel at 4 p.m. Mrs. Beirstein died in her sleep yesterday. In addition to Flo Browne, she is survived by four other daughters.

JOURDAN TELLS FRENCH PIC COST

French motion picture production is virtually at a standstill with little hope of developing for some time to come because of prohibitive costs, according to Louis Jourdan, French actor just brought here by David O. Selznick. Combined with high production costs is release outlet so limited that producer has little chance of realizing a profit, or even getting his money back, Jourdan said.

The actor reported a strong French demand for American pictures with Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" and Selznick's "Gone with the Wind" topping the list of those the people want to see.

NOW ADVERTISERS SPEAK

During the past several weeks we have been showing CBS color television to key advertising executives. They represent the group television must inevitably look to for financial support. From the typical comments below you can gauge the extent of their enthusiasm for color.

. . . says a merchandising authority

"I think your film did demonstrate that black-and-white television is far, far inferior and very unsatisfactory compared with color television. This you proved without a shadow of a doubt."

WALTER HOVING, Former President
Lord & Taylor

. . . says a very large advertiser

"I was profoundly impressed by the CBS color television demonstration. I can not see how any family will be content with anything less than full color on its television sets."

H. W. RODEN, President
American Home Foods, Inc.

. . . says an agency executive

"Absolutely terrific!"

PHILIP YOUNG
N. W. Ayer & Son

. . . says a sales promotion director

"It is my opinion that if the public had the choice it would accept nothing less than ultra-high frequency color television. . . ."

WILLIAM TOBEY, Sales Promotion Director
Abraham & Straus

. . . says an agency executive

"I do not believe that the public will accept monotone television once color television programs and receiving sets are available. I am also of the opinion that the impact of commercial messages in color will be several times that in black-and-white."

E. F. HUDSON, Vice-President
Ted Bates, Inc.

. . . says a media expert

"I was very much impressed by this demonstration. The color and definition were beautiful. As a source of entertainment and education in the home it has enormous possibilities. . . ."

CHARLES BROCKER
Vice-President in Charge of Media
Geyer, Cornell & Newell, Inc.

. . . says an agency executive

"Your presentation constituted a very excellent and convincing argument for the use of color in television. In my opinion CBS has shown both courage and foresight in jumping the intermediate hurdle of black-and-white images, with its eventual obsolescence, to perfect what everyone must inevitably want for home reception."

TOD REED, Vice-President
Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc.

. . pick color television as sales medium

. . . says an advertising manager

"The color television looked excellent to me. My personal reaction was 'Why bother with black-and-white if color can be done as satisfactorily at present.' I was very impressed."

W. A. DRISLER, JR. Advertising Manager
Cannon Mills, Inc.

. . . says a merchandising manager

"My personal reactions to color television are feelings of pleasure, excitement, and thrills. Certainly color over black-and-white is much to be desired."

WALTER J. ANDREE
Manager-Merchandising Department
Sinclair Refining Company

. . . says an agency President

"...One point sells me—the clarity of subject achieved by the use of color-even in the 12 inch screen, for that may be the screen of the mass market for the first few years of video."

LAWRENCE L. SHENFIELD, President
Doherty, Clifford & Shenfield

. . . says an agency executive

"Frankly I can't imagine any other type of television now that I have seen your(s)...It is one of the most impressive developments in science that I have ever witnessed."

ANGUS D. MACKINTOSH
Young & Rubicam

. . . says an account executive

. . . says an agency executive

"In its pioneering of color television CBS has extended the communication of ideas to the furthest point yet achieved. There is no doubt that it will serve, as each successive forward step in communication has, to extend the consumption of goods and the use of services and at the same time further reduce the cost of distribution."

PUBLIC, TOO, WANTS COLOR

The public has recorded its opinion of color television in an impartial consumer study. The findings indicate an overwhelming preference for color television over black-and-white on the part of the audience television must create for itself. You are welcome to a copy. COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FELT BARES TIE BETWEEN J-T, 20TH-FOX

Irving Felt, prez of Jefferson-Travis Corp., yesterday stated that "to the best of my knowledge" 20th-Fox is not trying to obtain corporate control of J-T, or its subsids, Musicraft and Guild Record companies. Thus are somewhat scotched rumors which have persisted both here and in NY the last few days.

However, Felt announced a "very close relationship" between his company, its subsids and 20th-Fox and revealed that George Skouras has become a large stockholder in the discseries. Further, it is known that John Dillon, 20th board-director and member of exec committee, has invested in the platteries and now is on the board of Musicraft.

For some months now, many quarters have sensed that 20th-Fox has been surveying the pop-platter business, but no overt moves have been observed, such as Metro's announcement of last year that it planned fostering a label to be known as Lion. Felt primarily is on Coast to set up offices for Musicraft and check operations at the large pressing plant, Olympic Record Corp., which is controlled by J-T. He also, along with Peter Hilton, Musicraft prez who accompanied him here, is looking over the field of film names to signature some for discings. None has been signed as yet and there is nothing to indicate that only 20th-Fox contractees are under consideration.

Young, Vaughan Go Over to Eagle-Lion

Two PRC toppers yesterday shifted over to the newly-formed Eagle-Lion organization. Ray Young, former PRC studio general manager, has been named personnel director of all employment outside sphere of production. He will function under studio production manager, James T. Vaughan. Art director Edward C. Jewel takes on similar berth with the Bryan Foy outfit.

Meet was called to map out new policy in tapping new frontiers never before used, exec said, and new program is drafted to benefit by fast worldwide air schedules now in operation. Prexy Spyros Skouras and other execs attended.

WB Pioneering Sound by Wire

Use of wire recording of sound for pictures is being pioneered by Warner Bros. under the supervision of Col. Nathan Levinson, head of the studio's sound department, it was announced yesterday.

Levinson, the announcement said, has worked out a practical method of using wire recording of sound effects and re-recording on film.

Test was made successfully this week on sound effects for "Life With Father," using wire equipment weighing but a fraction of the weight of normal apparatus. Method is to be incorporated in forthcoming Warner Bros. productions.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 28.—Frank Strayer and cast of RKO's "Holiday in Mexico," with doubles for Franchot Tone and Shirley Temple, have invaded Hotel Reforma and vicinity. Yesterday they locationed in Xochimilco (floating gardens, clouds made to order, local color). Alfonso Sanchez Tello, acting as production manager, was extra busy receiving congratulations on birth of his fourth daughter. Dozens of flower-decked boats awaited the RKO crowd while they lunched at "Maria Candelaria." Mariachis played the Bamba.

RKO will also produce "Morning Glory" and new version of "Beneath The Bridge" at Churubusco Studios, with Ester Fernandez in stellar role. Margo starred in first version of this last.

Comedian Chicote's increasing popularity practically obliged Grovas to cast him in stellar role. Picture now shooting at Churubusco Studios with Chicote heading cast, includes Pedro Infante, Beatriz Aguirre and Delia Magana. Director is Rene Cardona and cameraman Victor Herrera. Story pokes fun at our "charro" films, with dashing, big sombreroed, guitar playing, quick to fight "charros" as heroes.

"La Devoradora" Maria Felix starrer is in its sixth week at the Alemeda. Screenplay is interesting, dialogue good, cast excellent. Only director Fernando de Fuentes seemed to fall asleep on the job. Several dramatic scenes were actually funny. Audiences snickered. There is no doubt that the name of Maria Felix will fill our cinemas, regardless of story, direction, etc.

REGIONAL ALLIED TACTICS WILL GO NATIONAL

Chicago, May 28.—Regional Allied "get-together" tactics will eventually be applied to the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, Jack Kirsch, newly-elected prexy, announced at inaugural dinner tossed for him at Palmer House.

Kirsch said that because the big advantage which a well-conducted regional has over a national body is that it can keep in much closer touch with its members, he intends to "apply to National Allied many of the principles that have served us well in Chicago." In this way, National Allied's work will be brought home to indie exhibs throughout the country who haven't jumped on the bandwagon.

Banquet was attended by 1,500 distributors and exhib representatives. Among these were Spyros Skouras, Thomas J. Conners and George Jessel, 20th-Fox; William F. Rodgers, Loews; Charles M. Reagan, Paramount; Peck Gomersall, Universal; Walter E. Branson, RKO; James R. Grainger, Republic; William Heineman, United World; Richard F. Walsh, IATSE; former Allied States prexies W. A. Steffes and M. A. Rosenberg. Carole Landis and Yvonne de Carlo were also on hand.

Kirsch admitted it would take a little time to work out regional application on nation-wide scale, but this would be policy of Allied henceforth.

'Outlaw' 8th Wk. At Hall, 31Gs

"The Outlaw" continues to grind out its long run locally in the four Music Halls, hitting hefty gross of $31,000 for its eighth week in the small-seaters. Figure is only $2,200 below the seventh week, which is boff considering fact Los Angeles street car tieup was complete during the eighth frame. Total take for the eight weeks has hit $392,500 and film is certain for a 10-week stay.

Holiday Biz Rallies After Lagging Early

New York, May 30.—Very summery weather keeping people outdoors is regarded as having affected business at Broadway theatres to a considerable degree today. Attendance was very slow up to one o'clock, but picked up on matinee business, although still less than yesterday afternoon. Trade reached heavy stage during evening hours. Only new bill was "Bad Man's Territory," which looks likely for record opening day take of $6,500. That figure is sighted despite fact there is no increase in admission scales.

First run theatres competed with sunny skies yesterday and came out the losers until evening, when trade picked up smartly to give a good ticket-window handle for the day. Memorial Day eve registered hefty trade, aided by city-wide resumption of public transportation. Lack of new bills in town held the holiday eve grosses below socko level but still good.

RKO Hillstreet and Pantages theatres headed up other film houses yesterday, being the only day-date

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

INDIE station managements feel they are getting a "war of nerves" treatment from International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Four weeks ago union submitted proposals for wage increases varying between 22 and 40 per cent for station engineers. Broadcasters counter offered 18½ per cent hike while generally agreeing to other new conditions in union's proposed ticket. Union immediately called vote of technicians concerned and announced management offer had been unanimously rejected. Since that time nothing has been heard from union, latter having not even officially notified broadcasters that their offer had been nixed. Broadcasters don't know if union is sticking to its original demand, has a new proposal midway between both or if it intends to strike. Situation has managers sitting on edge of seats thnking gloomily of possible operations interruption.

MIKE Todd is in Chicago en route to New York, to sound out members of his "Up in Central Park" stage troupe as to whether they would be willing to come on to Coast for presentation of show this summer in Pilgrimage theatre. It is known that several company members have had other offers, both stage and screen, while in cast of his show, and Todd definitely wants to find out whether they will remain with him. "Park" isn't yet definitely set for opening here, but it seems most likely choice for producer and he is considering this one seriously. Todd will continue east for opening of "Hamlet" next Monday night in New York City Center, and while there will plan two stage shows he plans for coming fall season.

BROADCAST Music, Inc., which, with "Laughing on the Outside," got its first national top-seller in outfit's history, is quietly prepping to attempt duplication of stunt. Item to get the buildup is "Whatta Ya Gonna Do," by Sunny Skylar and Patrick Lewis. To date, BMI pushers on both coasts have succeeded in lining up nine different waxeries to disc the tune and now the effort is on to get it into band catalogs and onto radio programs. In its initial success at getting a song atop the more numerous ASCAP titles, BMI dropped virtually all other activities and concentrated on the single item. Now that the first winner has touched the crest and started to recede, "Whatta" is in the works.

HAMP-TONE, new pop-plattery, is unique in that it is operated by Negroes solely, will present only colored talent, and be sold by them only. Money behind outfit is Jefferson-Travis Corp., which also controls Musicraft and Guild labels, but Hamp-Tone's prez and operations' boss is Gladys Hampton, wife of bandleader Lionel Hampton. A deal by the plattery has been made with two largest Negro newspapers in country, Chicago Defender and Pittsburgh Courier, through which project will receive vast editorial buildup. It is understood that before coming into the picture, both papers demanded that distribs and retail stores, which will handle product, be Negro-operated.

ON June 1 KGFJ discontinues breaking into programs with sports (mostly race) results and inaugurates new policy of handling such material. Five-minute sports flashes will be spotted before every half hour and hour throughout day, with Ray Dixon announcing. Move is in line with current trend among indies to houseclean operations that have caused much frowning glances from Federal Communications Commish. Indies have been tripping over themselves in efforts to follow more closely rules—and ideas—FCC has promulgated as preferred programming.

ROOF section of an Enterprise sound stage, 2,304 square-foot area, will be torn out to make room for a reproduction of the central arch of the Arc de Triomphe. Move is necessary to conform with script requirements for "Arch of Triumph," which calls for the opening shot to be filmed from the top of the main archway 95 feet above the ground. Since time of the sequence is late at night, temporary scaffolding will be erected as the framework for a canvas canopy to extend 45 feet above the 50-foot-high stage.

THE Johnston office, evidently needled by the recent "Outlaw" furore, is reported tightening up on titles, advertising, etc. Andrew Stone Productions, submitting the title "Stripped for Action" for forthcoming Eddie Bracken picture, were told it wouldn't do. Outfit then tried "Here We Go Again" and "Hot and Bothered," both of which shot back as unsuitable. Picture, due to start shooting June 24 is in work now under the tentative title, "Strange Bedfellows" which Johnston office hasn't ruled on as yet.

CHECK of talent rosters of both major and indie disceries reveals that there are twice as many male vocalists either soloing or featured on wax than there are female. It is only branch of amusement industry where the deeper tones hold such an edge. Inquiry reveals that platteries have discovered it is far harder to sell a femme and takes far longer to build one up into prominence. Steady perusal of best-selling lists and jukebox favorites will reveal soundness of the theory and ratio.

LIBERTY Films flackery prepared to make big doings of what they described as "James Stewart's first postwar film kiss" in scene with Donna Reed in "It's a Wonderful Life." Had Life, Look and other picture mag photogs lined up for action and expected a big play from the stunt. The whole thing snafu-ed when Producer-Director Frank Capra closed the set to the photogs and flacks.

CHARGES ARE READIED IN LABOR ROW

Unfair labor practices charges are being prepared for filing with the National Labor Relations Board following discharge of two studio workers Wednesday as a result of Central Labor Council order forbidding AFL union members to work with non-AFL machinists.

Incidents occurred at Warners, where Elmer Johnson, member of International Association of Machinists, Lodge 1185, and at Metro, where William Zimmerman, also member of Lodge 1185, were discharged when AFL men refused to perform duties while they were on the job.

Lodge 1185 is preparing the unfair labor practice charges against two studios and it is expected other "incidents" that are certain to occur will be added to original complaint. So far there has been no indication that the non-AFL machinists will throw picket lines around lots but it will be several days before results of the Central Labor Council's move against studios hiring the IAM members can be gauged.

LEGIT OPENING

"VOODOO ISLAND"

With a plot that resembles a low-budget B picture and a lot of native chanting that ineptly mingles jungle wailing with hepcat howling, "Voodoo Island" fortunately is only going to play at the Wilshire Ebell theatre through tomorrow night. Serrita Camargo, who is starred, does some dancing against a background of a chanting chorus, about a dozen dancers of little or no ability and a plot that resembles all the zombie stories that ever passed out of Hollywood. The show is not commercial nor will it ever be. Most of the first nighters spent the evening yawning or laughing outright at the absurdity of the entire presentation. Apparently "Voodoo Island" was hexed about the time the curtain went up and it needed more of a play doctor than a witch doctor.

Foy, Rank Reps Sign Pact For Reciprocal Releasing

Bryan Foy, currently in New York, has reached complete agreement with J. Arthur Rank reps on a reciprocal distribution program for Eagle-Lion product. The mutual releasing structure was set up following conferences between Foy, Robert Young, Pathe Industries topper, and Robert Benjamin, prexy of the J. Arthur Rank organization in this country.

Program calls for Eagle-Lion to distribute 10 top Rank pictures during 1946-47. Rank, in turn, will release six of Eagle-Lion's forthcoming productions in the British Empire. Initial Rank film, "Bedelia," Margaret Lockwood starrer, to be distributed by Eagle-Lion, will get a July release. Signing of the agreement precludes necessity of Foy making a trip to England at this time. The Eagle-Lion production head is slated to return to Hollywood within two weeks to prep three features for immediate filming. "It's a Joke, Son" is slated to roll July 15 with "Repeat Performance," Franchot Tone starrer, scheduled to go before the cameras shortly after.

From New York, Foy announced naming of D. E. Iszard as assistant production manager for Eagle-Lion. Just out of the Army Pictorial Service, Iszard, prior to his service, was production manager for Samuel Goldwyn.

LARAINE DAY IS RELEASED BY METRO

Laraine Day asked for and received release from her Metro contract. Pact still had five years to go. Her original contract with studio was signed in 1939 but Metro gave actress a new ticket in 1944. MORE COIN OR CHEAP PIX REP PLAN

New York, May 30.—Whether Republic should continue production of high-budget B pictures or go back to the old costing formulas was put up to its sales force by James R. Grainger at the concluding session of its regional sales meet today.

Grainger pointed out that exhibitors must increase rentals or Republic cannot maintain its present quality. This followed a similar statement made by Herbert Yates, company head, yesterday in which he deplored the exhibitors thinking which automatically places in B category this product, which doesn't get an A theatre booking.

With production costs way up, all along the line, in addition to greater intrinsic value being put in Republic product, Grainger and Yates stressed the need for additional coin to support its program.

There was frank indication of determination to return to the old corner-cutting if exhibitors won't come across. Further discussion is being held all week at the home office by district sales managers. Then determination will be arrived at for the 1946-47 production schedule and sales policy of the company.

THE GRAPEVINE: Rufus LeMaire's New York talent search was cut short on orders by Bill Goetz. He returned yesterday via the Constellation on the International boss' orders . . . On the same plane was Earl Carroll who had been working out plans for his $5,000,000 theatre with National Theatres toppers . . . Billy Selwyn, the Enterprise talent head, was another who didn't bask in the sun over the holiday. He was fretting over an assignment to find someone for "Arch of Triumph" with the following specifications: Right arm tatooed with the nude body of a blonde, on a 5 foot, 11 inch waiter, who is able to speak the kind of English enunciated by an Italian who had lived in Paris for 15 years. Which sounds like the search for the Golden Fleece . . . Bob Hutton and Lana Turner renewed auld acquaintance at Romanoff's the other night . . . 20th-Fox is all excited over the film possibilities of Polly Rose, sister of the fabulous Billy, who is the fiancee of Alex Gottlieb, Warners producer. She is beginning an acting career under the name of Paula Reid . . . Donald Crisp visited the Enterprise lot for final conferences on "Ramrod" with Harry Sherman—first time he'd been on the lot since 1915, when he directed the first screen version of "Ramona" . . . Dorothy Malone will get a Warners buildup following her appearances in "Janie Gets Married" and "Night and Day."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Here's a study in narcism for you. A top star lit into his freelance press agent because he didn't get a break in either Time or Life during his recent trip to New York . . . Kenneth Macgowan will write a book on anthropology during his time off from his Paramount producer's contract. He has been collecting material for years and says he wants to "write it for my own satisfaction." Probably nothing for pictures in it . . . The hero of James M. Cain's "Past All Dishonor" carries his pistol in a shoulder holster and now Clark Payton, RKO assistant director, has put lace on hoss opera gunbelts. He has written six originals for a femme star titled "Gunsmoke and Powder Puffs," "Rawhide and Lace," "Lariat Lady," "Lady Marshal," Dude Ranch Coed" and "Cattle Queen" . . . Scrabbling about in Warners' attic, the flacks found that John Barrymore, at the peak of his career, took second billing only once. For his first sound picture in 1926 the billing read: "Warner Bros. present Vitaphone and John Barrymore in 'Don Juan' " . . . Groucho Marx and Jerry Wald have been in deep and mysterious conferences for the past several days . . . Jack Alicoate, publisher of the Film and Radio Dailies, hit town on his first visit in eight years. He's en route to Bikini, where he'll cover the atomic bomb experiments, but will soak up some Palm Springs sunshine over the weekend in preparation . . . Marie Lampe, employed in the Metro production department for the past 17 years, was crowned "Queen of the Day" over the radio program. Elation died quickly when she learned what the prize was . . . a trip through Paramount studios!

CALL SHEET: ERNIE PAGANO, looking for suitable locations in Southern Utah for "Flame of Tripoli," yesterday wired his co-producer, Mike Fessier, at Universal: "You and your North African locations. Send at once four snowplows, Bourbon and St. Bernard." Pagano crossed the Utah state line coincidentally with snowstorm of near-blizzard proportions . . . PABLO CASALS, recognized as the world's leading cellist and now in Paris, is turning down all offers for a concert tour of the U.S. Seems that politics is rearing its head in the music field. He tells all agents and would-be impresarios he won't budge from Paris until the U.S. takes a firmer stand on the Franco situation in Spain . . . IONE NIXON, Miss San Antonio of 1945, tours Republic today as the guest of studio execs, with film offers in the offing . . . CAMERON SHIPP has signed up with Photoplay but will continue on the staff of Coronet and do other national magazine assignments outside the fan mags . . . ED GARDNER, leading assassin of the English language, has been invited to speak before the senior class banquet at the University of Minnesota . . . JOHN HOUSEMAN, whose last producer chore at Paramount was "The Blue Dahlia," is preparing "That Girl from Memphis," adapted from the best-selling novel, for RKO production . . . DORE SCHARY will take off for New York for the opening of "Till the End of Time" shortly . . . HUMPHREY BOGART disembarks from his yacht today for a wardrobe fitting for "Dead Reckoning" at Columbia.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has time on his hands, and everywhere else . . . he has 224 clocks in his home, including a three-ply cuckoo clock, which blats out the time in Hollywood, New York and London . . . Republic's new trademark, an eagle poised for flight, will make its first appearance on the credits for Roy Rogers' "My Pal Trigger" . . . Mitchell Kowal says he finally found out why it takes him so long to read a book—he's getting rid of his tortoise-shell glasses . . . Clark Gable will appear at installation ceremonies of the Los Angeles squadron of American Veterans of Aerial Combat June 6. Frank Lloyd, who commanded an A.A.F. combat photography unit in the South Pacific, is chairman of the program committee . . . Warners is using ten children as riders in a pony race sequence for "Stallion Road," all of them sons of Gower Gulch cowpokes. So apparently the film cowboy trade is being handed down from father to son . . . Charles Strong, greenery expert for Sol Lesser, discovered a bonanza while on location with the "No Trespassing" company, a thicket of giant grape vines more than 300 feet long. He brought it back to the studio for use in the Tarzan pictures which Lesser produces. Vines are worth about $2,000, since the vines are used in every Tarzan picture as his means of getting around the studio jungle . . . Lauritz Melchior came back from his Utah hunting trip with one mountain lion—but he had to kill one coral snake, a Gila monster and two tarantulas to draw a bead on Leo's kid brother.——D.D.T.

Ray Kellogg planned the services held at the Field Memorial farm at Reseda, and Captain A. J. Bolton, USNR retired, conducted the ceremony in the absence of Captain John Ford, USNR, who was absent on location.

Lesser Toppers Fete Pa, Gran'pa on Crew

Jacobson, crewmen on the picture, celebrating the fact that they became grandfather and father respectively with the birth of a son, weighing 8½ pounds to Mrs. Lester E. WALLICHS BY AIR TO MEXICO FOR DISC PUSH

Glenn Wallichs, exec veepee of Capitol Records, flips to Mexico City next week to set up distribution for firm's platters. Accompanying Wallichs will be Carlos Gastel, personal manager of string of singers and bands, and Ted de Azevedo, whom Cap hired recently to chart its south-of-border invasion. Gastel is financially interested, along with top Cap execs, in the corporation which will handle distribution of waxery's product in Chili-land.

Trio will be gone about ten days, and operation they will establish will center in Mexico's capital. For the time being all records of label will be shipped from here; there are no immediate plans for opening a recording studio or pressing plant across the Rio Grande.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 30.—Julio Bracho now directing Maria Felix in "La Mujer de Todos," will direct legitimate company at new Alameda Theatre, first play to be Rodolfo Usigli's "Corona de Sombras," the story of Carlota Amalia, Empress of Mexico, magnificently written by our one great playwright.

Although two films have been made on the short tragic reign of the Austrian Archduke and the Belgian Princess made rulers of Mexico by Napoleon III, both the home product and the Hollywood film were inadequate.

All Rodolfo Usigli's plays have been bought by cinema producers, yet not one has reached the screen. For the past two years Usigli has been living in Europe. Perhaps some day we shall see his brain children on our screen, instead of the atrocities imagined by Spanish refugees turned screenplay writers in Mexico, and Nineteenth Century novels dressed up to look 1946.

Walter Pidgeon promised Mayor Rojo Gomez that "Holiday in Mexico" premiere box office receipts would be donated to fund for undernourished children. From the moment Mr. Pidgeon landed at airport, donned sombrero and said: "Salud, amigos!" to time of his departure, he did and said exactly the right things. Excellent actor. And good diplomat.

Star Jorge Negrete signed contract with Radio Belgrano of Argentina, and, after series of farewell parties planed southward with the Trio Calaveras. They will spend a month in Buenos Aires, then visit Chile, Peru and Venezuela. By August, Negrete will return here for his next picture.

The Rodriguez brothers, who have been making quickies for some time, came to parting of ways. Evita Munoz, slightly overgrown child actress, under exclusive contract to them, left with one of the brothers, Jose, for Buenos Aires, to make personal appearances while her latest picture is being shown in Argentinian capital.

Reporter Lumiere swears it's true: that a gentleman registered as "Norman Trebor, painter" appeared at Reforma Hotel lobby in role of drunkard but minus makeup and clothing. The man later explained he is getting divorce from Hollywood star and feeling very unhappy. Highballs and altitude didn't agree with him.

Light 'n' Airy

by JACK HELLMAN

Preparing for any eventuality that may result from the opening of time on NBC and CBS next fall, ABC's Ed Noble and Mark Woods are taking protective measures against any possible exodus of talent from the network and at the same time strengthen their own position program-wise. Idea sprung from the proposed stock deal to Bing Crosby, which would make him a partner in the network, and similar proposition is said to have been broached to Ed Gardner. Assumption is taken that if Crosby and Gardner might be wooed into the ABC family why not others either on their chain or broadcasting elsewhere. Woods indicated that such a plan is beyond the conversation stage but being Noble's "baby" all stock deals would have to be handled by him personally.

Attorneys and tax experts are said to have given their blessing to such stock transactions even though it places the new partners in the capital gains bracket. Partnerships with performing stars is a new wrinkle with the chains but not altogether innovational. Some years ago KMPC sought to justify its slogan, "Station of the Stars," and made it good by selling stock to such thumping thesps as Paul Whiteman, Bing Crosby, Amos 'n' Andy and a few others. Deal differed from the proposed ABC arrangement in that the KMPC partners didn't perform on the station.

Chain breaks . . . One more guess can hardly injure our reputation as a prophet (?) so here goes with the latest on Harry Lillis Crosby: that he'll take only guest shots next season while in town making pictures or cutting records. He can bank more that way than at the head of his own show and still call his time his own . . . Outliving its imitators and setting a pattern for dramatic presentations, Lux Radio Theatre inaugurates its 11th year Monday night. Starting in New York, the show was moved to Hollywood 83 broadcasts later and Monday night's airing of "None But the Lonely Heart" will be the 445th from the home grounds . . . Don Belding, in Frisco for a board meeting with Fax Cone and Emerson Foote, put the quietus to rumors about a split in the agency by declaring "relationship between the partners was never better and the longer we work together the better we like each other." . . . Murray Bolen to N.Y. today for discussions on the Victor Borge-Benny Goodman exhibit, which takes up origination here Sept. 9. Dick Compton due in town the 19th from Mexico City.

Hitch hikes . . . Hoagy Carmichael show is being dropped at close of the current cycle due to product (mayonnaise) shortage. Cancellation notice has gone out and NBC gets the Monday night time back . . . Nils Granlund has CBS interested in a nostalgic bit called "NTG Talking" in which the veteran showman will interview names in show biz who were nonentities when he first knew them. Granny's "You're In the Act" takes an eight week hiatus for the summer . . . NBC is clearing the Wednesday night time vacated by Hildegarde for "Gildersleeve."

By RADIE HARRIS

PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT: Frederic Wakeman's gorgeous satire, "The Hucksters", with everyone guessing out loud the true identity of all the "fictitious" characters . . . the $20,000 advance mail order sale for "Henry V" at the N.Y. City Center . . . Olivia de Havilland's Academy Award performance in "To Each His Own," and Paramount's oversight in not buying up the handkerchief concession in the lobby of the Music Hall . . . the terrific slump in nite club trade . . . Laurence Olivier . . . the mutual dislike between Cary Grant and the N.Y. autograph hounds . . . Jack Benny's hilarious emceeing of the John Golden testimonial dinner . . . the black marketeering of "Annie Get Your Gun" tickets—more of a shot-gun holdup than any ever practiced by "Annie Oakley" . . . the W.K. Hollywood "Don Birnam," who, trying to navigate from his hotel to "21" mumbled, "All I need is a typewriter now, and Ray Milland could stand in for me!"

SCOOPING AROUND: Sylvia Sidney arrives here the 15th of next month to spend the summer at her farm in Flemington, N.J., which she hasn't occupied since her divorce from Bennett Cerf. Her six-and-a-half-year-old Jody will accompany her to be completely spoiled by his "Grandmother Bee" who hasn't seen him in two years . . . Aileen Leslie, whose etherizer, "A Date with Judy," has just been expanded into a three-act play for amateur use by Dramatic Publications, has authored a serious drama that already has hypoed Hollywood interest for a pre-production deal . . . Dick Watts' mother, Kitty, has her friends worried about her failing health . . . Leo McCarey and Irving Asher, their show-shopping schedule accomplished, "Constellation" back to "Rainbow" tomorrow. Incidentally, the one play they did NOT see was "Anna Lucasta," which Coast rumor has them interested in as a musical . . . Janet Fox will soon make Edna Ferber a great aunt, and Jeanette Sawyer, head of 20th-Fox fan mag department, will be a very young looking grandmother this fall . . . When Lucille Ball was criticized in one of the local columns for spending too much time ringsiding at the Copa to applaud Desi Arnaz, she cracked, "Why do they think I came to New York? To listen to Cugat?"

"THAT'S MY BOY, WHO SAID THAT!" Charlie MacArthur, returning home from Joseph Patterson's funeral, ran into a pal who asked him how his "Swan Song" was faring at the Booth.

"I can't answer that now," retorted Charlie. "I only attend one funeral a day."

HOW STORIES GET STARTED: Six months ago, Edna Ferber met Sylvia Fine at a N.Y. houseparty, and suggested that a revival of "The Royal Family" with Danny Kaye in the "Tony Cavendish" role would be a wonderful idea. Sylvia agreed, but felt it might be a better showcase for Danny as a musical. However, neither she nor Danny thought that his return to Broadway should be in a revival. And that was the extent of the conversation. The curtain now lowers six times to denote the lapse of six months and rises again on the Goldwyn lot, where Danny and Freddie are working on adjoining sets. Their paths cross, natch, and in the course of their yak-yaking, Freddie comes up with the suggestion about "The Royal Family" for Danny," and Danny tells him of Sylvia's previous conversation with Edna Ferber. And that was the extent of their discussion. The very next day, Danny, in Hollywood and Sylvia, in N.Y., were two amazed people to learn via radio, syndicate and publicity release that Danny was so sold on the idea that he was heading back to Broadway as soon as he finishes "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" to start rehearsals and he already had embellished the Ferber-Kaufman saga of the Barrymores with his own gags and routines! In the excitement of the scoop, someone must have forgotten that the screen rights to "The Royal Family" are tied up by Paramount and Danny still belongs to Goldwyn, who would have to pay a huge ante for it. Then too, the Kaye combo aren't stupid enough to do a Broadway show in which they wouldn't own a goodly hunk of the pre-production deal. So, just for the records, Danny's return bow will be in a brand new musical, tailored to him (a book show, not a revue) and don't be too surprised if the producer turns out to be Vinton Freedley, who gave Danny his stardom in "Let's Face It."

BROADWAY BALLYHOO: Lizabeth Scott spent her first night in town Barberry Rumor-ing it with David Schenker . . . Billy Seeman's Coast pals had better catch up on their sleep now. Billy and his TeaNTea vitality will be a Bev-Hills hotel arrival next month . . . Emerson Foote is AMPA's newest member . . . Leonard Spiegelgass, Lillian Waldman, Irene Kuhn, Mildred Fenton, Sid Weiss and Leonard Sillman were on hand to greet Manning Sherwin at Bob Broder's "welcome home after eight years in England" cocktail party, and everyone was delighted that, in spite of his long exile, he didn't return with a monocle in his throat . . . Dave Bader has chosen Gloucester, summer haven of the lit'ry and artistic colony, as his retreat to put the finishing touches to a new play and a tome on documentary films . . . Watch for an announcement from Charlie Feldman that he will resume indie producing with Gerald Kirsh's current best seller, "Night in the City" . . . The property that Gertrude Lawrence and Richard Aldrich have just bought at Sneeding's Landing is 200 years old, but the original owner must have been psychic. It's always been called "Lawrence Lane" . . . Archie Mayo, who held out for a pre-production deal on "The Temporary Mrs. Smith," couldn't get it, so instead of directing on Broadway, he'll go fishing in Canada.

With Andy Russell sparking the stage bill at the Orpheum, excellent holiday trade resulted. Other downtown spots were on the slow side for matinees but reported increasing business during evening shows. Wilshire and Hollywood boulevard houses were about the same.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

When the case of Siam against France, charged with seizing Siamese territory, comes before the United Nations, you'll hear one of the most amazing stories of the operation of Colonel Donovan's OSS, the Cloak and Dagger boys. When the Japanese over-ran the country, located between Indo-China and Malaya, and between Indo-China and Burma, and the government was put in charge of a Japanese cooperator, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Australia, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, South Africa, and New Zealand declared war. But the Siamese minister in Washington asked us to prove there were loyal Siamese. With the cooperation of the regent, who headed the Siamese underground, we sent in the OSS men along with Siamese who were students in our universities. We radioed out information about Japanese movements and positions, landed supplies for the underground, with even a landing base for our C-47's, and some of our crew men even landed at night in American uniforms on the Siamese part of the Bangkok airbase. Trygve Lie, of Norway, who was expected to favor small nations, demonstrated in his opinion on the Iran case, when he favored the Soviet, and in this case, when he said the Siam message was not a formal complaint, but a request for sympathy, thus favoring France, that he is at least playing them close to his vest.

PAR STOCK CHANGES VOTE

be held here June 18, according to notice and proxy statement sent to stockholders today.

In an accompanying letter, Barney Balaban, Par prexy, pointed out that except for the two for one stock split, proposals are all aimed at tidying up Paramount's capital structure. He pointed out that first and second preferred stocks, issued a number of years ago, have been redeemed. He added that "as there is no further need for the authorized and unissued shares of either class, I believe it well to eliminate them."

There are 44,211 shares of first preferred of Par value of $100 each and 5,919 shares of second preferred at par value of $10 each. If the stockholders vote elimination of these shares, the authorized capital stock will be increased to $9,000,000 and 4,544,200 new shares of common stock issued.

Should the stockholders not vote elimination, Paramount proposes an increase of authorized capital stock to $13,479,290 and issuance of 4,542,851 shares of common stock.

The stockholders will be asked to authorize a permanent board of directors of 16. Up to now, the Board has called for an indefinite number, being not less than 16 nor more than 18. However, the Board has consisted of 16 since 1935.

The statement to the stockholders lists salaries paid to executives and directors, headed by $189,083 paid to Henry Ginsberg, Barney Balaban received $156,000, plus pension trust benefits of $28,250, while Y. Frank Freeman was paid $130,000, plus $10,797 in pension trust benefits. Adolph Zukor, who is not eligible to pension trust participation, was given $159,400.

The largest stockholder among Paramount executives as of April 30, is Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee who then held 4,600 shares. Balaban is listed as holding 2,000 in addition to $2,000,000 of 2¾% convertible notes of the corporation.

CYCLE FILMS ARE RULED OUT BY BREEN

films having possible censorable material will be spaced out so that there will not be more than two films of such content on first run screens at the same time.

Breen, before he went to Europe, and the company executives established a set policy, which went into effect immediately after the Alcatraz prison break. At that time, six producers filed story ideas with the Breen office, all of them having prison escapes as their plot background.

Breen, while not withholding the PCA seal, told the producers that only two films with this background would be given the okay at that time.

Breen pointed out that enemies of the industry would like nothing better than to have all first run houses in their cities filled with pictures of some similar theme so that they can point out: "None of our first run theatres have any pictures which can be seen by children."

CBS PROMOTION WORKERS JOIN FLACKS GUILD

Sales promotion department personnel of Columbia Broadcasting System here voted itself into the Screen Publicists Guild Wednesday (29) via National Labor Relations Board election. Net is now virtually 100 per cent organized.

Directors recently went into Radio Directors Guild, while writers are currently negotiating new contract through Radio Writers Guild. Office workers have gone along with others of Screen Office Employes Guild into Office Employes International Union which recently absorbed SOEG.

Technicians have long been under International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, American Federation of Radio Artists renegotiates actor-announcer contract in November, and publicists department is in SPG with newly signed promotioneers.

Bateman in New Sales Manager Chore

Francis A. Bateman has been named western sales manager for Screen Guild Productions, Inc., by Robert L. Lippert, veepee in charge of distribution. Bateman, who recently resigned as Republic Pacific Coast division sales manager, will assume his new chores immediately. Pending naming of an eastern sales head, Bateman, in addition to his current duties, will supervise sales in that region.

$ Million Dinah

Dinah Shore's Columbia disc of "Doin' What Comes Naturally" has hit the one million mark, which means that Dinah has chalked up something of a record in sales. Since signing with Columbia she has warbled three tunes right up to the million disc mark. "The Gypsy" and "Shoo Fly Pie" were also million record sellers.

COAL STRIKE END ERASES FURTHER THEATRE CURBS

Washington, May 30.—Termination of the coal strike yesterday likewise ended any prospect that the Civilian Production Administration would issue a power reduction order affecting theatres and other users, a CPA spokesman said.

However, this does not automatically end all local level restrictions now in force. It was made clear the coal shortage is so extreme that many municipalities will continue their local brownouts and restrictions to commercial users for weeks.

Thus eastern theatres in many areas will continue to operate with dimmed marquees and without their air conditioning equipment.

Opinion has been expressed here that many theatres will be forced to go through the summer without use of air conditioning machinery, which will cause a sharp dent in the box offices.

NEGRO ORK UNION, CORWIN MEET ON LINCOLN TERMS

Latest in prolonged series of meetings between Sherrill Corwin, operator of Orpheum, Million Dollar and Lincoln theatres, and officials of Negro Musicians' Local 767 will be held this afternoon. Negotiators are still trying to thrash out terms under which union will issue license to Corwin to operate Lincoln as a colored vaudfilmer.

Corwin last month acquired house and asked Local for license to reopen it with stageshow policy, which would preclude stand-by musicians when out-of-town band was on podium. Union pointed out that Corwin's contract with white Musicians' Local 47 called for stand-bys at Orpheum, and also claimed it was a national policy of the American Federation of Musicians to keep stand-bys on salary when out-of-town ork supplied the music.

Three recent meetings have not brought either side into agreement. Corwin's offer of early this week was that Lincoln would mploy a 16-piece musicrew, composed of 767 members, for a week after four out-of-town bands had graced stage on consecutive bookings sans stand-bys. Union nixed the offer on grounds that theatre could stretch, potentially, the four bookings into six months, before local ork got its innings.

RADIO GUILDSTERS OKAY CONTRACT PLAN; RETURN EAST

After conferring here for several days with local membership of Radio Writers Guild on contracts and rights to material, national heads of Guild started East yesterday. Dorothy Bryant, exec secretary; Peter Lyon, Eastern v-p; Herbert Futran, midwest v-p, and Jack Bentkover, councilman headed for Chicago for conferences there. Following that, sessions will be held in New York before RWG makes final bid to American Association of Advertising Agencies on policies opposing sides have been trying to work out for several months.

Guildsters here approved plan offering to set up separate contract form for one-shot shows such as "Whistler," "Suspense," etc. Form would permit only first rights to one broadcast on such material and authors would retain all other rights. Ad agencies are seeking subsidiary rights to materials they buy. Union would first set up standard ticket on one-shots, and will then "discuss" others in classification of serials and series shows.

Currently tagged the Golden Slipper, the nitery will be reopened for the occasion. Spot is where the team of Clayton, Jackson and Durante first hit stardom.

'Around World' (In 80 Days) Tasty Wellesapoppin Dish

New York, June 2.—Orson Welles' musical extravaganza, his own very free version of Jules Verne's "Around the World (In 80 Days)" is a Wellsapoppin entertainment which lacks just enough of that madcap spark which catapulted Olsen and Johnson into a major industry. Still it's a very diverting potpourri of old hokum bucket, melange of Wellesian protean artistry, skullduggery, circus flash, pistol shots, silent pix and the like which won't bore. Militating against a perhaps even more enthusiastic reception was a retarded cooling plant, from which the sweltering firstnighters suffered remarkably. Indirectly it was a tribute to the show's appeal.

Welles' Mercury Theatre Players have been away from Broadway for several seasons and their return is unquestionably resounding, albeit perhaps not totally matching expectations, as might be expected from a Cole Porter score.

SOME very important moves are currently being made in British financial circles in respect to expanding the film industry there. Those familiar with the British scene say that the moves have been planned for past seven years, awaiting only the end of the war for development. Some drastic changes in the general production picture there is expected by September. One influential financial corporation, which hitherto had nothing to do with films, is now formulating plans for a new British film organization. The current two-way batle for film supremacy between J. Arthur Rank and Sir Alexander Korda bids fair to become a three-way fight.

So band is playing daily outdoor concert and fulfills obligations on the four weekly CBS remote wires. Broadcasts are piped out of theatre on Catalina.

As It Looks to FLANNERY
(Famous CBS Commentator)

As this is being written, it is too early to determine the results of the French and Italian elections. They are important not only to those countries but to the world because they will indicate whether Communist elements are gaining ground within these important European countries. There is no likelihood the Communists will gain the majority in either country, but they will have power in affecting internal policy and foreign relations beyond their proportional strength, because of the fervor of Communists, their discipline, their unity—as compared with the lukewarm attitude of most democrats, their disunity, their divisions. The Communists, in political battles, have the advantage of concentration upon a definite program, dictated by the inner circle, and of being able to take advantage of current economic, social and political disorders. Democratic or Republican parties—use whichever word you like best—have the handicaps that go with freedom (the right of disagreement) and the weakness of varying programs. Europe's new democratic groups, which would be considered too liberal by many persons here, are, however, working out definite programs of social and economic reform, which stand stronger before Communism than could the old reactionary parties.

To lose a lot of lettuce on the bills for oats and hay.
For hosses at the racetrack are endowed with appetites

The wise producer never frets about alfalfa bills.
One way to beat the hosses is to film a western chase—
No hero on the canyon trail has ever lost a race.

TRADESHOWN at Twentieth-Fox Studios, Westwood, Cal., May 29, 1946. Running time: 128 MINS.

Film critics can be expected to employ some of their shiniest superlatives in dealing with "Anna and the King of Siam." But whether they do or not there's every probability that the box office figures will run into superlatives. The picture is one of the few that leave the boys who spell their art with a capital "A" little ground for complaint and at the same time offer any audience anywhere full entertainment value. As the story of strong-willed, courageous and charming English widow introduced into the Siamese royal palace as teacher of the king's harem and 67 children the show has distinct femme appeal. And there's enough harem, exotic Siam and dramatic tension to keep the male escorts on edge.

Rex Harrison brings a firm talent and interpretative skill to the role of the king. His portrayal of the semi-barbaric monarch, torn between the dictates of his traditional Siamese training and the desire to acquire for himself and his kingdom the advantages of Western civilization and education is an outstanding job of acting.

Irene Dunne earns new kudos in the part of Anna, putting on a performance that enlists full audience sympathy and admiration for the heroine of the Margaret Landon biographical story. Scenes in which she clashes with the king and forces herself into recognition as a personage in a country where "women simply do not exist" are enacted with power and conviction.

Also bidding heavily for acting honors are Linda Darnell as the royal favorite, whose tragic love story ends in horror when she is burned at the stake for infidelity, and Lee J. Cobb as the prime minister who treads now forcefully and now gingerly through the ticklish business of guiding the king and coping with palace intrigue. Gale Sondergaard gives a notable performance as Lady Thiang, long-discarded harem favorite and mother of the little prince who is heir to the throne. Mickey Roth does well as the child prince, and Richard Lyon as Anna's young son.

Entire cast, including an eye-filling bevy of queerly, but not too completely garbed lovelies, as members of the king's harem, does outstanding work.

The drama of the story ranges from comedy to pathos, but is all legitimately motivated. Even the fre-

Thurman Arnold Defends Radio 'Blue Book' And FCC

Washington, June 2.—Purpose of the FCC "Blue Book" on programming is to protect free forums of the air and the commission has no desire to prevent freedom of the air, Thurman W. Arnold, former head of the Justice Department anti-trust division, and former Federal Circuit judge said last night.

Arnold spoke over CBS in answer to an address made two weeks ago by Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee who attacked the "Blue Book" and FCC. Reece charged they were trying to control radio for the benefit of the administration.

"The great public forum of the future is the air," said Arnold. "But the programs which sell the most goods are those which seek the lowest common denominator of the radio audience. If these are permitted to dominate the forums of the air and destroy their functions as liberal and educational forces, we will have taken a long step toward intellectual regimentation and stagnation.

SORES B'CASTERS' STAND

"What the broadcasters ask is that they be delegated the absolute power to decide the proportion of advertising and non-advertising programs over the radio. Can anything be less American than to put the power to decide a public question in the hands of men who have a financial interest in the way the decision goes?

"I prosecuted monopolies for six years. The worse they were the more they shouted that free enterprise in America was in danger if this particular monopoly was destroyed. And so all the worn-out anti-government cliches of the past 10 years were fired at the commission.

PROFITS SOARING

"Profits in radio have increased at a fabulous rate. In 1943 broadcasters as a whole made a profit of 157 per cent on the depreciated cost of their property before taxes. In 1944 the profit was 222 per cent. Yet the time devoted to public education and the development of taste and ideas went down as the profits went up.

"Two weeks ago, Carroll Reece threw the entire G.O.P. at the commission's head. He called their action typical of the bureaucratic state where the private citizen is pushed around with arrogant contempt. I don't believe Reece can make the Republican party swallow this nonsense.

"The purpose of the great advertisers who support radio is to sell goods. The commission knows the importance of selling goods. But it also knows that power to determine what the American people should hear must not be delegated to men with a private financial axe to grind. It is up to the intelligent radio listeners of America to see to it that private advertising interests do not get the power to take over our great town meeting house of the air."

Sun Valley Cyclone

(Western)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Sidney Picker. Director, R. G. Springsteen. Original screenplay by Earle Snell, based on Fred Harman's NEA comic strip, by special arrangement with Stephen Slesinger. Photography, Bud Thackery. Film editors, Harry Keller and Charles Craft. Musical director, Richard Cherwin. Second unit director, Yakima Canutt. Sound technician, Victor Appel. Art director, James Sullivan. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr., and Marie Arthur. Makeup supervision, Bob Mark.

CAST—Bill Elliott, Bobby Blake, Alice Fleming, Roy Barcroft, Kenne Duncan, Eddy Waller, Tom London, Edmund Cobb, Edward Cassidy, Monte Hale, George Chesebro, Rex Lease and Thunder.

REVIEWED at Hitching Post theatre, May 31, 1946. Running time: 56 MINS.

Bill Elliott rides as Red Ryder and Bobby Blake does his papoose thesping as Little Beaver in "Sun Valley Cyclone," but the thunder in this historic western yarn is stolen by a four-legged thesp of that name. Thunder, a handsome hoss with pugilistic tendencies, not only scores a knockout on a fellow hoss but swings an equine haymaker on Roy Barcroft, the villain.

Theodore Roosevelt, played by Edward Cassidy, figures for a few minutes in the story, which deals with the recruiting of wild hosses for the Rough Riders in the Spanish-American War. It seems the rustlers in those days were not only ornery varmints but unpatriotic as well.

Elliott, carrying on in his second-last role as Red Ryder, naturally won his customary riding chases and gun battles, but it was Thunder who galloped away with the show as an equine case of psychological regeneration. It seems that Thunder, in his colthood days, was typed as a killer among the hoss tribe. The only cowpoke who can ride him is Bill Elliott. So when Teddy Roosevelt comes to Sun Valley and sees Bill astride Thunder he says: "That's the only time I ever saw a man riding a cyclone." The result is that Teddy tells Bill to stay in the valley, round up hosses and thus serve his country more than he would as a member of the Rough Riders.

Bill takes his advice and foils the rustlers, but only after numerous gun and fist battles, in which he is ably sustained by Thunder, who does a bit of detecting on his own. Without human aid, Thunder trails a herd of mares to Box Canyon and kicks the stuffing out of a wild stallion who has been wolfing the four-legged femmes in that neighborhood. The windup comes when Thunder leads a stampede into the village and wins a battle for law and order against the rustlers. When the sound of the hoofbeats have ceased and the villainous Barcroft is taken into custody, Bill and the regenerated Thunder canter out of the valley for one last adventure in the Red Rider series.

Coast Records Sends Platters on P.A. Tour

A plan that smacks of originality has been introduced by Charles E. Washburn, president of Coast Records, designed to stimulate the sale of platters. Ozie Waters, Western recording artist, on Tuesday will begin a vaudeville and radio swing from Albuquerque to St. Louis and will introduce Coast Records to his audiences. Sample discs will also be presented to lucky ticket holders at each performance.

'HUNTING' IS WELL DONE BUT RINGS OLD BELL

Actors' Laboratory Workshop has done an ecellent job in producing Harry Brown's not so excellent "Sound of Hunting." Sam Levene's direction, acting by the all-veteran cast and the setting of the ruined house near Cassino are all first grade, worthy of professional theatre of the best type. However, Brown's play is somewhat of a verbose and self-conscious paraphrase of "Journey's End" and "What Price Glory."

It concerns a squad of men about to be relieved from the front lines during the bitter fighting raging in Italy the early part of 1944. There are plenty of laughs and plenty of curses to give the ring of dramatic authenticity. But the play never resolves anything nor does it do more than become wordy after a prolonged first act.

Nevertheless, Sam Levene did a masterful job of making the audience forget the weakness of the play. He was aided in this by a cast, notable for the work of David Clark and Michael Vincent, as a dumb Wisconsin farm lad and a smart New York East Sider respectively. Both Clark and Vincent are first-rate actors who should go far in their chosen field. Other uncovered talents are Peter Brocco, Don Hanmer, Russell Conway, Harlan Warde and Herman Waldman. Setting by Oliver Crawford is starkly realistic, right down to the mud. It seems a shame the talent was wasted on a play that deserves so little attention.

Tunes are fair, with two particularly good ballads, "Should I Tell You I Love You?", and "Pipe Dreaming."

An expert cast, not the least expert of which is Welles as a copper's nark, does yeoman service. Arthur Margetson is capital as the British gentleman who foils bankrobbers and wins his eighty days around the world bet. Mary Healy as the Indian princess who follows the kindly Margetson back to England, Julie Warren as the beauteous Irish nursemaid in love with Larry Laurence, the Yankee manservant to Margetson, and Victoria Cordova in a Mexican bit, are vocally standout.

Two acts and 34 scenes, which segue from old fashioned silent movie titles to multiple setting changes, require crew of over 50, which with weight of production, makes "Around the World" an economic hazard, even if the public rallied in sufficiently large numbers.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: Curtis Bernhardt will leave for England late this summer, after completing direction of "The Secret" for Warners, to reorganize British Unity Pictures, of which he was managing director a half-dozen years ago before coming to Hollywood . . . Despite Walter Winchell's threat (to blast any press agent who handled her account off the publicity map), Tilda Thamar, the Argentine actress, arrived in Hollywood with a fulsome p.a. treatment: A sheaf of copy arrived on all city desks to herald her arrival and outline her career in glowing terms. Twice, in the biography provided by her press agent, it is emphasized that Miss Thamar is of "Nordic" descent, whatever that is, and definitely blonde. They don't seem to understand it's no more a crime to be a brunette in the United States than it is in the Argentine . . . Edward G. Robinson—the ex-Little Caesar, that is—is now taking tap dancing lessons from Glenn Turner . . . Paulette Goddard is in Frankfurt, Germany, as guest of the U.S. Army before returning to New York via Paris . . . Harry Davenport celebrates his 75th year in show business today with performance of "Lightnin' " for CBS' Screen Guild program . . . Ella Logan left over the weekend to open an engagement at the Riviera in New York June 20 and various guest shots on the air. It's understood she's getting five grand a week . . . Two weeks before the end of "Voice of the Turtle's" run in San Francisco, K. T. Stevens left the cast over the weekend and was replaced by her understudy, Nancy Holland. She's said to be suffering from exhaustion and will rest at her Malibu beach house. Her new husband, Hugh Marlowe, will finish the engagement and then join her.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Head usher at the Pantages confidentially ad- vises all potential ticket-buyers to be sure to see the bottom half of the double bill, "Man Alive," relating that RKO spent more than $805,000 on the picture and gave it a 27-day shooting schedule. No relative of Pat OBrien's, either . . . Monday Review of Literature: Only current book releases getting unanimous okay from the critics are Sean O'Casey's "Drums Under the Window," dealing with the Easter troubles in 1916 in autobiographical fashion, and Liam O'Flaherty's 'Land," a melodrama dealing with the landlord brannigans in the mid-19th century . . . Looks like John Ford will have plenty of material for the next few years . . . Laurel theatre, between showings of the Soviet production "Days and Nights," plays recordings of "Warsaw Concerto," which is almost a Polish war cry—a wierd fusion of ideology indeed! . . . Marjorie Reynolds has been ordered to bed by her physician. She's suffering from infected gums . . . Nitery notery: The Reed Hadleys, John Murrays and Red Skeltons at Cocoanut Grove. Shirley Patterson and Bob Oliver, Billingsley's. Walter Catlett and Bobby Watson, the House of Murphy . . . New tightrope act: Bob Hutton going around with Lana Turner again and June Haver still . . . Virginia Field tossed a cocktail party for Barbara Field, no relation, and 50 other guests. Latter is wife of Julien Field, NY ad exec.

CALL SHEET: BOB HOPE, hornswoggled into appearing in television for the first time, over Paramount's station W6XYZ, told the audience: "Now that you can hear us and see us, what will happen when you can smell us?" . . . PERRY LIEBER, head of the RKO flackery, was given a surprise party on his birthday. Flacks gave him a landing net for his fishing trip to Feather river in July . . . BESS MEREDYTH, wife of Mike Curtiz and author of "Don Juan," first film utilizing sound, is writing a play for Broadway production . . . LOUIS HAYWARD, with his partner George Curtner, will open his Strip restaurant about July 1, with their penthouse night club opening about a month later . . . ED GARDNER says a crepe suzette is "a drunken pancake with a hotfoot" . . . LINDA STIRLING'S sister Alice will marry Sgt. Walker Ogden within two weeks, and Linda will take time off from Republic's "Mysterious Mr. Valentine" to act as maid of honor . . . JAMES HILL, Metro writer, has been squiring Peggy Stewart around town almost nightly for two weeks . . . GENE AUTRY is putting himself on a night-and-day work schedule this month. He begins work in "Sioux City Sue" June 11 and appears in a rodeo at Pan-Pacific auditorium June 14 to 22 . . . CHARLES KORVIN watched a rough cut of "Bella Donna" the other day to catch his death scene, in which he plays an Egyptian cad poisoned by Merle Oberon. After watching himself die, he sighed, "The wages of sin—a new contract."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: A youth who knew from nothing about records was doing a fill-in stint at a Vine Street disc dispensary the other night. In came a customer who obviously was looking for classics. The long-hair queried, "Do you have any recordings by Boccherini?" The doltish clerk clapped him on the back and blurted, "Vou-a-rini, Mac!" Lost—one customer . . . F. Hugh Herbert is dreaming up another legiter, with Janet Waldo in mind for the lead . . . Republic's "Rendezvous with Annie," which stars Eddie Albert, is reported to be in the sleeper class . . . It's D-Day for the O-girls today at Metro. Called for a college sequence in "Uncle Andy Hardy" were Erin O'Kelly, Sheila O'Malley and Shirley O'Hara. Casting director on the film is named Murphy . . . Tennis duos at the West Side Tennis Club: Marie MacDonald and David Street, Lili Damita and Sally Eilers, latter pair taking lessons from the pro . . . Alexis Smith and Craig Stevens filled in for Wayne Morris on the Examiner airshow program . . . Gisela Werbiseck Piffl, the Viennese actress who has taken a lot of pun and punishment because of her name, does a bang-up job in Arnold Pressburger's "A Scandal in Paris," according to those who have seen advance showings . . . Our resident humorist claims he heard of a Beverly Hills gangster who opened a charge account at a local cemetery.——D.D.T.

'OUTLAW' TOPPING ALL FRISCO'S FILM RECORDS

San Francisco, June 2. — First three days of "The Outlaw" at the United Artists, Esquire and Tivoli theatres smashed every picture record this town has known. Film pulled gigantic $35,811 at the trio of daydaters, which have combined seating capacity of 3,300. Initial three days' take is $10,000 greater than the gross of any other United Artists film to play here.

New opening day figure at the United Artists theatre hit $4,830, as compared to $4,238 it pulled on the one-day run April 23 before police closed in on the picture. Figures are exceptional, too, in that this is actually a repeat engagement for "The Outlaw." It broke records three years ago when roadshown at the Geary and Tivoli for eight weeks.

SCHOOL BONDS

Tuesday, June 4th

14,000 Los Angeles City school children are now attending class in one half day sessions. This number will be increased at the rate of 10,000 per year henceforth. School Bonds must be voted immediately to avert a crisis.

Fifty unsafe buildings, hundreds of temporary classrooms, must be replaced with modern quake proof, fire proof structures.

Thirty new elementary schools, ten new junior high schools, three new senior high schools, three new junior colleges must be planned and financed now and be built within the next ten years to meet future requirements of a total enrollment of nearly one half million.

Demonstrate your faith in the future of Los Angeles and vote to meet the present urgent and critical school housing needs, now and for the immediate future, by going to the polls and voting YES on School Bonds Tuesday, June 4th.

Be sure to ask for the School Bond Ballot when you go to the polls. You must vote this ballot in addition to the regular general primary election ballot.

FRANK MORGAN IS HIT; TOP-COST SHOW IN BENNY SPOT

Costliest program on the nets this summer is Frank Morgan's "Fabulous Dr. Tweedy" for Pall Mall in the Jack Benny Sunday spot. It wraps up at around $12,500 which is easily double the cost of most straw hatters. Judging from yesterday's opener there'll be no moaning over the budget. As previously with Eddie Bracken, Robert Riley Crutcher came up with a sock script for the getaway and Morgan wrung from it an avalanche of laughs.

It marked for Morgan his first situation comedy piece and it was clearly evident that he has found a new high ground for his peculiar mimicry. As the fumbling college prof who wriggles out of one jam only to get into another, he made the script bristle and kept the laughs rolling. The premise of a girl's school turned co-ed is fertile ground for airy summer fare and if Crutcher can keep the pace there need be no worry about subsequent shows. All Morgan needs are the lines. The role is a comfortable fit and if the laughs come along he'll give them the skilled treatment so long his forte. Only fault to find with the first script was that the word "stink" was used too many times in connection with names. Morgan hitchhiked a thought for the week by hoking an adage. Sound support was given by Nana Bryant, Alan Bridge, Eddie Green, Barbara Eiler and Bill Johnston. Eliot Daniel's music was neatly arranged for the comedy bridges.

It required no less than three spielers and noisy sound effects to impress on the dialers that Pall Malls are "outstanding." In the G. W. Hill tradition the word quoted was repeated time and again. The midway plug was as long and loud as the opener and closer.

Morgan's "Dr. Tweedy," while a summer replacement for Benny, carries on in the fall when the Luckies crew returns. Likely that it will be coupled with Kay Kyser when he resumes in season. That would make an odd combination of professors as both use that appellation. Perhaps by the time Kyser comes back, Morgan will have sheared off to some other collegiate portfolio.

By JACK HELLMAN

It's an old plaint that recurs from time to time but in our book it's worth every fresh going-over it gets. We're inspired to rush to its defense again by the loose talk among elbow benders in the better grottoes. It can all be told in a few words, to wit, GIVE THE KID A CHANCE. Just because Jackie Coogan isn't setting the kilocycles on fire, rating and otherwise, the wolves have begun to howl for his hide. Once the client gets wind of such dire and dirge he may be influenced to the point of putting in with "what goes out there."

One of these days when time hangs heavy and the urge crops out we're going to dig into the early past of "The McGee's," Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, Red Skelton and a few others of the elite just to convince ourselves of what we have long believed—that they started humbly and without much of a splash. They were given a chance to develop their show and characterization and delivered handsomely. Why then isn't Coogan given that same opportunity? He has one big point in his favor—the character he portrays has a naive freshness about it, a takeoff on the Harold Lloyd dopey shyness that poured a golden stream into theatres all over the world. As with the other new entries we believe judgment should be withheld for at least 13 weeks and more fairly and conclusively 26 weeks. That there has been a noticeable improvement in the Coogan show is conceded but the beef seems to be that the progress hasn't been fast enough. It is our belief that given good scripts Coogan will come through as did Eddie Bracken while Bob Crutcher was whipping up the material. He has an easy mike personality, handles lines with the skill of a seasoned performer and projects a sympathetic appeal. Give the lad a chance and he'll deliver as he did in "The Kid" with Chaplin and with the fighting forces overseas.

Chain breaks . . . If "Gildersleeve" moves into Hildegarde's Wednesday night spot on NBC, Bob Burns will inherit his Sunday niche for American Home Products (Anacin) . . . Alex Robb, NBC's package sales head here, was in critical condition over the weekend following a stroke which paralyzed his left side . . . Rupe Lucas en route to N.Y. to launch "McGarry and the Mouse," summer sub for Eddie Cantor. He then joins the home office staff of Young & Rubicam as a program manager. Walter Bunker directs the last two airings of "Duffy's Tavern" . . . Vic Hunter chartered a plane to fly to Sun Valley where el Bingo is whipping the streams and taking life easy in general. That means the General Motors deal is still alive and kicking. Bing would start it off live and then segue into transcriptions. That can only mean ABC or Mutual unless the big nets relax their verboten on discs across the web . . . Jack Simpson, account exec on Raleigh for Russell Seeds, gets in today for the "Evening with Romberg" summer series getting under way June 11 . . . Ted Bacon's Golden Strings, with Gayne Whitman as narrator of "Woodland Sketches," now airing under sponsorship on KNX at 9 p.m. Fridays . . . Hot weather humor from Ned Crawford: "producer is packaging a show to originate at Hollywood Park called "Bridle and Groom" for spotting on pari-Mutual" . . . Ralph Edwards was complimented by Gen. Omar Bradley for his "contribution to the medical rehabilitation program" . . . Sam Hearn back from nine-week theatre tour and lining up radio work for the summer . . . Meredith Willson's orchestra with the King Sisters and Ben Gage moves into Dinah Shore's NBC spot Thursday . . . Paramount's Marty Lewis is spotting almost everyone connected with the filming of "O.S.S." on radio shows from locals to t.c.'s . . . Frank Pittman goes east 13th to get the Warings started as "The McGee's" summer standby. Jim and Marian Jordan shove off the 11th for Kansas City for a month of visiting the kinfolks.

Promotion has been a foreign word to the big ad houses and once a show is on the air it is forced to fend for itself, barring the cut-and-dried process of landing a mention with the radio columnists. Little effort is made to keep the talent happy let alone the client who's paying a stiff fee to the agencies. Public relation jobs on stars, such as is done in the picture studios, gets short shrift from the time and space crowd and it's beginning to show in certain places. Not that it was the sole reason for their change of sponsors but most certainly Joan Davis, Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante-Garry Moore and the soon-to-shift Eddie Cantor were influenced no little by coin earmarked for promotion. At one of the agencies the publicity director sought to make himself valuable to the company during the summer lull by offering to make a tour of this sector personally contacting the radio editors. He was told there was no budget for traveling. Radio promotion does a double-barreled job—it makes the star happier with his lot and helps build audiences, the longer the account to stay in the house.

Hitch hikes . . . Bill Spier's production of "Sam Spade" has been bought by Wildroot for airing over ABC starting in July. It's a Larry White package originally intended for Schick razor and BBD&O is the agency . . . Not that it's surprising but Lurene Tuttle has done more than 3,000 radio jobs in the last nine years . . . Those who think soap operas run on and on have another think coming. Not one of the top 10 in the Hooper list eight years ago is in the running today . . . Dick Haymes eases into the 9 p.m. spot Thursday on a shift from his long time Saturday airing time . . . The long booking arm of "Academy Award" reached deep into the Oscar grab bag for Saturday's broadcast vehicle. Eleven years ago "Ruggles of Red Gap" was nominated and at this late date gets elected . . . "Murder My Sweet," which converted Dick Powell from a singing juvenile to a slick sleuthie, takes the "Hollywood Star Time" spotlight Saturday aft with Powell and Claire Trevor encoring their pic capers.

BALLROOM UNIONS BATTLE; OWNERS LEFT IN MIDDLE

Battle of the ballrooms is in making between International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with ballroom managements in the middle. Former has started organizing local dance halls with spotting of lighting and p.a. system technicians. IBEW feels it's theirs—and managements want no part of either.

Downtown Avodon ballroom is locale of first skirmish. Union moved in couple of weeks ago with two men, one for spotlights and other for sound equipment. Ballroom operators have been objecting ever since, are fighting for maximum of one—on lights alone—and complain sound men to date have been incompetent. Situation has detracted from music and vocalists, it's charged.

Charge of discrimination has also been handed union since only Palladium and Avodon are saddled with technicians, while Trianon, Aragon, Meadowbrook and Casino Gardens operate sans technicians, and use band personnel for dressing up. Situation has admittedly been neglected for years, according to union, which stated others would soon be brought in. IBEW, it was disclosed, was unaware of IATSE's action in field and is looking into the matter.

CORWIN-NEGRO ORK PACT OPENS LINCOLN THEATRE

Sherrill Corwin, sole vaudfilm operator here, signed contract over weekend with Negro Musicians' Local 767 and will reopen the Lincoln, downtown colored stageshow site, on July 8. Corwin, who has the Orpheum and Million Dollar theatres, recently acquired the Lincoln.

Pact-penning concluded month-long series of negotiations, during which bone of contention was whether contract would call for stand-by musicians when out-of-Local band played house. In contract finally drawn, Corwin has agreed to use a 16-piece band, composed wholly of 767 members, for one week following appearances of three consecutive attractions. Show set to relight Lincoln will be toplined by Ink Spots and on opening night there will be a reserve-seat policy, with house scaled to gross $5,000 for single performance, and all receipts will be turned over to four Negro charities, which will share the coin.

ELLISON QUITS DISC COMPANY IN ROW WITH RENE

Ben Ellison, general manager and one of the original organizers of Exclusive Records, pulled out of company over the weekend after a tiff with Leon Rene, prez of plattery. Dispute flared when Ellison placed his recent composition, "I Left My Heart in Mississippi," to Martin Block Music Co., for publication, whereas Rene thought the song should have been issued by one of the two sheet-music subsids of Exclusive.

Ellison had a contract with discery which did not expire until end of this month, but he severed ties with firm after mutual agreement was reached with Rene. Ellison claims that his contract with waxery specifically stated he could have his songs published wherever he pleased, not necessarily with one of Rene's firms.

CIRO, TROCADERO, MAXIE'S IN STRIP SHUTDOWNS

Nomads of the night will have to find new spots to spend their evenings out, with the shuttering of three top bistros this week. Ciro's and Slapsy Maxie's turned the electricity off last night for several weeks and Trocadero will put its main room in mothballs as of Thursday. This leaves Mocambo as the sole major nitery along the Strip during what normally is the start of the lush rush season for tourists.

Folderoo of Ciro's was brought about by the Board of Equalization ruling on switching of liquor bottles. Nitery will be closed for 30 days. Slapsy Maxie's took the breather during the bridal month in order to re-decorate. Rough-house expects to take the padlock off early in July. Trocadero, which has been having it rough in the big room since the departure of Spike Jones, will do business in the King Cole Room during the two months that the dining-dance salon is blacked out.

Bernadene Hayes Steals First Honors

"Yet the consistent show-stopper and scene stealer is Bernadene Hayes, back from her recent desertion of Hollywood for Broadway. She is swell as the girl card sharper, and she looks like a cool million."

—Hollywood Reporter

"Particularly to be acclaimed is the acting of Bernadene Hayes, lately of the stage. As the girl crook, all gentle refinement when mingling with the plushy folk, plain spoken and hard when dealing with other crooks, Miss Hayes gives a well shaded performance that will probably be noted by the scouts. Her final scene in which her face expresses indefinably the wear and tear on her emotions are particularly good."

To Defend Your American Rights
To Freedom of Religion and Political Choice:

VOTE TUESDAY FOR

CLAUDE L. WELCH

FOR THE STATE SENATE

and against Jack B. Tenney and his 'Little Dies' Committee

- Here's the latest example of Tenney's racial, religious and political bigotry:
- On Sunday, May 26, Lewis Milestone, John Garfield, and Charles Chaplin were among the guests at a party hosted by Konstantin Simonov, noted Russian writer who is in America as the guest of the State Department and the American Society of Newspaper Editors.
- Because Mr. Milestone and Mr. Garfield have opposed him politically and have endorsed the candidacy of Claude Welch for the State Senate, Tenney singled them out for special attack.
- He said in a press statement May 29, "WE'D LIKE TO LEARN THE NAMES OF MILESTONE AND GARFIELD AT BIRTH."
- Tenney's Hitlerian inference is that their racial and religious origins are "non-Aryan" and therefore questionable. He has used this same racial fanaticism before in Attacking Americans who do not agree with him.
- In the same press statement concerning those guests of a great writer who is here as the honored guest of the American government, Tenney said: "We are determined to learn whether there is collaboration with potential enemies of our country." Thus he uses the familiar technique of Rankin and Gerald L. K. Smith to gain personal publicity for political ends by smearing well-known Hollywood figures.
- We submit that such activities indicate Mr. Tenney's un-Americanism and unfitness for any office. We urge all Americans who believe in decency and fair play to vote for Claude L. Welch for the office of State Senator from Los Angeles County.

HORNE EXPECTED TO SIGN UNITED WORLD DEAL

New York, June 2.—Story Productions, the Hal Horne - Armand Deutsch combo, is expected to sign within the week with United World Pictures for outfit's initial production, "This Side of Innocence." Understood that UWP, in addition to releasing arrangements, will provide studio facilities.

It is reported that the deal may be expanded to include future Story Productions product. Horne is currently in Hollywood and Deutsch and Stanley Kramer left over the weekend to join him there in mapping final details. Don Ettlinger, currently doing screenplay on the Taylor Caldwell novel, expects to complete chore in a week and then head for Hollywood.

Selznick Delayed

New York, June 2. — David O. Selznick again has postponed his departure for Hollywood, and now is set to leave here tomorrow. He has been recuperating from severe cold at William Paley's Long Island estate.

OBITUARIES

BOBBY BROWN

Bobby Brown, 48, one of the veteran producers of Chicago radio, died suddenly of a heart attack at the Roosevelt hotel Friday night. He came here three months ago to take up residence.

Brown came to the attention of radio 18 years ago with his production of "The Nutty Club" after trouping in vaudeville as a singing uke player. He later became executive producer for Wrigley in Chicago and supervised production on all Wrigley shows. Among those he personally directed were "Myrt and Marge," "Scattergood Baines" and "Gateway to Hollywood." In the summer while "Myrt and Marge" were on layoff, Brown was sent into foreign countries by Wrigley to round up new atmosphere and material for the team.

He leaves the widow. Services will be in Chicago.

Trade Showing

quent bids for tears are made to stem naturally from incident and action.

Talbot Jennings and Sally Benson have kept the screenplay pretty generally free from hokum. Incident of the script follows closely that of the book from which it is derived, except for certain necessary concessions to the delicacy of the Johnston office.

John Cromwell's direction develops an almost documentary realism in the filming and at the same time builds up suspense and dramatic tension. Cromwell's pacing of the action and Arthur Miller's work with the camera can be credited for a large share of the film's thrill and interest.

Altogether, Louis D. Lighton, working with top materials, and producing lavishly, has put together a show that will probably rate as one of the year's best. He has taken full advantage of the opportunity offered by the weirdly exotic background of Siam of the 1860's for elaborate mounting and costuming.

Miss Kaplan had joined the department only five months ago, having shifted over from Mike Todd office. Hoyt came to Metro from the A. & S. Lyons agency. Metro fired 17 of the 20 people in the department. The three retained belonged to the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild and were absorbed into other departments.

inclusive. It's possible that Academy would then be functioning as such within this year, and initial awards, etc., made concurrent with motion picture Academy's.

William B. Ryan, g.m. of KFI and director of NAB's 16th district here, met with Justin Miller, NAB prexy, over weekend. Ryan is also chairman of the committee handling Academy matter for NAB and probably discussed details of Academy with Miller, following disclosure that NAB has approved plan and is set to go.

Proposed plan calls for wide membership basis divided into 10 branches: management, artists, musicians, writers, directors, producers, news editors and commentators, advertising agencies, sponsors, public relations personnel, engineers, and the public through radio listener councils established in every community where there is one or more radio transmitters.

Under plan, awards would be made on both local and national levels. Diversity of membership is to prevent control or domination by any single interest. NAB has invited comments, suggestions and cooperation of other interested groups in evolving the awards system.

FCC WOULD LIMIT STATIONS OWNED BY NETWORKS TO 5

stations was a good ceiling for a web. CBS owns seven stations 100 per cent, of which six are 50,000 watt clear channel outlets. No other net owns more than five. Commissioners Clifford J. Durr and Ray Wakefield dissented from the majority opinion.

CBS may decide to take the matter to court and test the Commission's authority to limit numbers of stations which a single owner can control.

CBS OUTLINES STAND

In its application to purchase, CBS laid down three reasons why it believed the sale should be approved:

(1) Networks should own stations particularly in heavy population centers to assure outlets in those places.

(2) Networks should own stations in program origination points.

(3) Webs need the increased financial stability resulting from station ownership to cushion any possible losses in network operation.

FCC turned the edges of all three against the sale.

In answer to No. 1, FCC pointed out that in its report on chain broadcasting it raised the question of nets owning any stations at all because "it renders such stations permanently inaccessible to competing networks."

FIVE TOPS FOR OTHERS

"No other nationwide network," said FCC, owns more than five stations, yet the other networks have no difficulty in operating effectively.

"While undoubtedly the ownership of station in key areas is convenient from a networks point of view," FCC said in answer to the second point, "the fact is that Columbia Broadcasting System already has one outlet on the West Coast—KNX in Los Angeles — and owns more stations in other major cities than does any other nationwide network. CBS has been operating its nationwide network since it started operations without an outlet in San Francisco, and the evidence clearly shows that CBS has been more than able to maintain its competitive position."

In answer to the third point, FCC said that the broadcast service income of CBS has almost doubled since 1940, and that it now has an unappropriated earned surplus of $16,582,000, which should see it comfortably through any troubles.

Enterprise Will Give Distribs 6 Pix A Year

Decision to guarantee a minimum of six features annually to its releasing outlet, was the major development yesterday in Enterprise's current negotiations for a distribution setup. Understood that the guaranteed minimum output might be boosted to seven features if final terms of any of pending deals would require it. Development puts the quietus on any conjecture that Enterprise might split its product to two or more domestic or foreign distributing setups.

Shakespeare's 'Bed' Doesn't Run 'Second' on Broadway

New York, June 3.—Broadway and Hollywood won't like what Richard Nash did to Shakespeare in "Second Best Bed," which opened tonight at the Biltmore, any better than Sweet William would himself. It's a lame and halting comedy about the marital squabbles of Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway. Comedy element is either lacking or cheap, by turns. Ruth Chatterton, Barry Thomson and Ralph Forbes go through the motions with little enthusiasm.

Union will employ wedge of insertng the six day clause in contracts with niteries as they come up for renewal or putting idea into practice immediately when pacting newly opened clubs. AGVA's national director, Matt Shelvey, who is fathering the six-day week, says minimum salaries of performers will not be lowered. Last winter the union established a national rule that chorines could work but six-day weeks, regardless of what extra salaries they were offered.

PLANE crash on Memorial Day that severed power and telephone lines had exciting repercussions at KLAC when listeners to station called to say station had sent out "too many volts" and ruined receivers. Listeners said their sets were smoking and blown out. They couldn't be convinced that all station sends are microvolts that have nothing to do with wired power. Straight of it was that telephone power lines carrying KLAC snapped and power fed back causing station equipment to fizzle out. Consumer power line reacted similarly and fed back approximate 550 volts into sets built for 110 causing blowups.

Having obtained comfortable shift in locations through switch here, he accepted long-range buildup campaign new job offered. When time was ripe he exited—after costing station wad of promotional coin.

HARRY Romm, who is independently producing "In the Mood," film biog of late Glenn Miller, is differing with Mrs. Helen Miller, widow of bandleader, over casting of actress who will essay role of Mrs. Miller. Romm wants Laraine Day for the part, while Mrs. Miller is holding out for Teresa Wright. Matter hasn't been settled as yet, but if Mrs. Miller persists she can have her way, since in the contract, whereby she permitted filming of husband's life, there is a clause giving her right to veto any phase of the production which does not meet with her approval.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

Although the Italian election returns are not in, and will not be known until the last of the week, it's safe to assume that they also will have three main parties—the Socialists, Communists, and the Italian equivalent of the MRP, the Christian Democrats. It's a question whether the Christian Democrats or the Socialists will get the more seats, but in any case, the Socialists, as in France will be the key party. In France, although the MRP has the most seats, the Socialists may get the key posts. That's because the Communists will refuse to sit in an MRP-headed government, and the Socialists will refuse to take part in one that does not include the Communists . . . The Supreme Court decision against Jim Crow sections in buses crossing state lines may have been based on the idea that such sections put an undue burden on interstate commerce, instead of the 14th amendment, because it is thus limited in its application. It cannot apply in this form to special drinking fountains, segregation in theatres, zones of cities and so forth. It is an important decision, but rather like getting the car out of the garage by way of a window instead of the door.

TRADESHOWN at Warners Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills, Cal., May 28, 1946. Running time: 91 MINS.

"Janie Gets Married" is standard, mill-run farce that will supply an audience with a fair share of belly-laughs without imposing too much strain on the intellect. Cast names insure certain amount of initial draw and the show has enough entertainment value to promise fair return at the box office.

Fact that film is one Warners have had in the vault for some time is evidenced by the appearance in the cast of the late Robert Benchley. Comedy honors of the piece go posthumously to Benchley whose characteristically smooth clowning provides laughs throughout and saves several scenes from flatness.

Joan Leslie, as a young bride, is good to look at and puts on an adequate performance. But she would be more convincing if she was less conventionally ingenue-ish in spots. Either she or Director Vincent Sherman seems to have been obsessed with the idea that she must always skip or run—not walk—through a scene.

Robert Hutton gets across nicely as her young husband, and Clare Foley is effectively brat-ish as her kid sister.

Heaviest acting chores, however, go to the supporting cast and are ably accounted for by Edward Arnold, Ann Harding, Barbara Brown, Dick Erdman, Margaret Hamilton and Donald Meek. William Frambes gets across for a few laughs in a brief bit as "Dead Pan," a soldier buddy of Hutton.

Climax of the story, which pictures the trials and tribulations of a young ex-service man and his bride trying to get started in life, is precipitated by another soldier buddy of Hutton — Dorothy Malone as a WAC sergeant with a message. Being the kind of an eye-ful Miss Malone is neither Miss Leslie nor the audience can be blamed for suspecting the worst when she and Hutton get to cutting up touches on life in the army. Even when the message turns out to be a long speech that has nothing to do with sex, but is instead a glib plan for helping returned service men the audience is left a bit uncertain, though Miss Leslie is satisfied that all is well.

Action is paced so rapidly in one or two spots by Director Vincent Sherman that more confusion than comedy results, but for the most part he has worked the rather loose script for the maximum of laughs.

Poll Shows Crosby And Garson Top Favorites

Motion picture preference poll taken by Woman's Home Companion disclosed new trends in the shifting tastes of American film audiences. Among the conclusions formed by the magazine's second annual survey were:

That motion picture attendance dropped off slightly between last year and this.

That 33 per cent of the readers polled attended pictures less often this year than two years ago, only 12 per cent "more often."

That "single feature" shows should run two hours instead of an average two hours and 35 minutes.

That a cross section of all age groups shows Bing Crosby, Walter Pidgeon and Clark Gable the three top actors; Greer Garson, Ingrid Bergman and Bette Davis, the three top actresses—in the order of preference.

That romantic drama, musicals, historical romance, light romance and light comedy are favored in that order.

HOW THEY ATTEND

On frequency of attendance, the poll disclosed that persons attending once a week or oftener dropped from 39 per cent in 1945 to 35 in 1946; one to three times a month, 39 to 38 per cent; less often than once a month, a rise of 25 per cent in 1946 from 20 per cent in 1945.

On the question "Do you go to the films more or less than you did two years ago or about the same?"—12 per cent replied "more often," 33 per cent "less often" and 55 per cent indicated "no change" in attendance habits.

On the double feature question the poll reported a loud "no" to the duals. Seventy-nine per cent of the readers polled prefer single features. Eighteen per cent prefer double features. Three per cent indicated no preference. Even the "under 25 age group" polled only 22 per cent in favor of the double features.

Six top favorites of all age groups of films seen in the last year were "Going My Way," "Bells of St. Mary's," "Valley of Decision," "A Song to Remember," "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes" and "Leave Her to Heaven."

WHAT THE GALS LIKE

Among younger women "Spellbound," "A Song to Remember," "Love Letters" and "Thrill of a Romance" were heavy favorites, while age groups "over 25" were unanimous in selecting "Going My Way" as their favorite picture.

In the order of preference male stars were favored as follows: Bing Crosby, Walter Pidgeon, Clark Gable, Gregory Peck, Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper, Van Johnson, Joseph Cotten, Cary Grant, Ronald Colman.

Distaff preferences were for Greer Garson, Ingrid Bergman, Bette Davis, Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne, Margaret O'Brien, June Allyson, Joan Crawford, Judy Garland, Rosalind Russell, in that order.

Under 25 age group voted for Gregory Peck as their favorite, the 25 to 44 groups were solid for Crosby, the over 45 segment was overboard for Pidgeon.

ROMANTIC DRAMA FIRST

On the types of picture preferred, the magazine's readers voted as follows: Romantic drama, 54 per cent; musical, 48 per cent; musical comedy, 42; historical, 42; light romance, 39; light comedy, 35; newsreels, 34; documentary, 30; mystery, 29; religious drama, 24; drama with animal theme, 13; feature cartoon, 12; war drama, 6; western, 6; foreign films, 5; travelogue, psychological drama and biographical, 1 per cent each.

Factors preventing more frequent attendance were listed, in order of importance, as "not enough pictures of my preference," "lack of time," "cost of admission," "lack of transportation," "shows too long" and "need of sitter for children."

$15 Flat Pay Hike Demand Hurled At L.A. Symphony

Flat $15 per week hike per musician is being asked of the Los Angeles Symphony Association by Local 47 on a take it or leave it basis. Union has presented its demands, a duplicate of deal recently worked with Hollywood Bowl Association, and has stated that men will get the pay boost—or there will be no symphony!

Cleffers are now pegged at $70 weekly for eight services, the same number they would perform under new ticket. With rehearsals sure to run number of services well beyond eight, it's estimated that musicians will average $115 weekly, including overtime.

Symph heads are now stewing in the proposal since union heads trekked east to St. Petersburg, Fla., convention after dropping the ember in their laps.

SOUTHERN HOUSES HEAR PROMISE ON GOVT. PIX

Jacksonville, Fla., June 3.—Film theatres can be of invaluable assistance to the Government during the trying reconversion period, Arch A. Mercey, chief of Motion Picture Division of Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, emphasized today, in speech before the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association.

Mercey pointed out the difficult problems of finding housing for veterans and of feeding Europe, and reminded exhibs how valuable their cooperation has been in the past. He promised that the Government would ask film houses to show very few official pictures, but declared they would be important.

"Let it be unmistakably understood," he said, "that no one in Government claims that motion pictures can solve these problems or even completely present all of them. Many problems do not lend themselves to theatrical motion picture treatment.

"The Government's approach to the use of films in the public theatre, therefore, will be made with great care and through the cooperation and in concert with theatre men and show people themselves. No film will be offered for exhibition unless the subject is of utmost importance. No film will run in length longer than the subject justifies. No films will be offered which are of a partisan or propagandistic nature."

Roaring motors of "The Outlaw" advertising blimp, passing back and forth over "The Chase" company on night location shooting, kept lousing up the soundtrack. Fritz Lang is at home with laryngitis after directing a love scene between Gary Cooper and Lilli Palmer for "Cloak and Dagger." This is not necessarily a cause-and-effect note . . . Mannie Mannheim says he's decided to fall in love with the notorious Hollywood caste system. "My postal zone is 46 and I won't talk to anybody with a lower postal zone number," he announced haughtily.——D.D.T.

2 STUDIOS LEAVE 250G SITES IN ARIZONA

More than a quarter million dollars worth of standing construction has been left by two studios in Arizona, following completion of location stays at the two sites.

"My Darling Clementine" troupe, headed by director John Ford, returned to 20th-Fox over weekend, after five-week sojourn in Monument Valley, where town of "Tombstone" was erected by company. Setting, which consists of long main street with side street, was put up for around $165,000.

Company leased land from government for this location site, on Navajo Reservation, and has left man and his family, on friendly terms with Indians, as caretaker. Intention now is to use location later, probably in fall, for another picture. "Town" is understood to be available to other companies, however, if they wish to make rental.

Republic's "The Angel and the Outlaw" arrived back at studio couple of days ago. This troupe left town which 100 construction men had spent several weeks in putting up, at approximate cost of $100,000, at Sedona, Ariz., some miles outside Flagstaff. Company doesn't know yet what disposal of this site will be, but it may revert to man on whose property location was built. Both standings are among most costly ever constructed away from Hollywood.

ENGINEERS STRIKE AT WIND ENDS IN ARBITRATION

Chicago, June 3. — Negotiations on the strike staged by three engineers at WIND wound up Monday with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers trio back on the job but agreeing to forfeit six months seniority for payroll purposes. In other words, though due for a raise in salary after six months, they'll now have to wait a year for the next one.

Technicians cold-shouldered the arbitration and no-strike provisions of their contract three weeks ago, walking out with approval of International. Station, meanwhile, has been operating on its regular 24-hour schedule since the original shutdown. WIND operator, Ralph Atlass said he's keeping on the payroll two of the temporary employes taken on during the strike, and that the latter will be admitted to the union. Atlass also agreed to have his own technicians handle all exclusives on WIND hereafter, the union agreeing that no standbys or duplicate coverage will be required.

Local agreed that henceforth all grievances will be handled directly by the International. Strike began when the union insisted that WIND, a B station, hire CBS engineers as standbys for their own engineers in a broadcast of Northwestern University Playshop from the CBS-WBBM studios. Atlass, with insufficient space at WIND, had made arrangements with his brother Les Atlass of CBS, to use WBBM's facilities for the broadcast.

to result in new gross levels untouched in any other key spots on a comparative seating and admission basis.

First run box office is doing a comeback this week, aided by sturdy holiday trade and the end of the trolley tieup. Perky business is shoving overall estimate in 24 houses to better than $300,000. That's not socko but is a decided improvement over past few weeks, showing a favorable upswing despite many holdover bills.

52G TOPPER FOR WEEK

"Somewhere in the Night" and "Colonel Effingham's Raid" is slightly above average at the State, Chinese and Uptown theatres, with possibility of hitting $52,000 on the week. "From This Day Forward" and "Man Alive" at the Hillstreet and Pantages is also running ahead of average at estimated $45,000. "One More Tomorrow" is shaping up to good $41,000 for its second frame in the three Warner houses.

"The Postman Always Rings Twice" closed four-week stay at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres last night with estimated $37,000.

Today Los Angeles and Egyptian will be joined by the 1,600-seat Belmont and the Wilshire for four-way hookup on "Two Sisters From Boston." Ritz moves over to the Guild-United Artists unit to replace the Wilshire. In latter unit, "Spiral Staircase" finished four-week record run last night with approximately $25,000, very fine.

"OUTLAW" GRABS LOOT

"Renegades" opens today in the Guild, UA, Ritz and Vogue. "The Outlaw's" ninth frame in the four Music Halls is shaping to better than $30,000, while third week of "The Virginian" in the two Paramounts looks like good $28,500.

Next Tuesday the Orpheum goes straight first-run films, day-dating with the Vogue and El Rey, latter a new first run addition with 861 seats. Same day, the Million Dollar takes over the Orpheum's filmvaude policy, bringing in another 2,420 seats to the first run pool.

Another audience participation show joins the growing list with underwriting of "Surprise Party" by American Home Products (G. Washington Coffee). It goes twice a week in half hour time blocks on a CBS national hookup of 34 stations starting July 2 with Stu Wilson and two others to be selected sharing the emcee chore. New twist will have two of the emcees cruising in short wave cars, gathering up femmes at markets and in homes and hauling them off to the studio, gabbing enroute. Dave Young produces for Ruthrauff & Ryan, being relieved on the Dick Haymes show by Dick Uhl, lately out of his military togs with the bars on top. Naturally there'll be giveaways ranging from a jar of java to a rocket trip to the moon.

Italy Loosens U.S. Pix Terms

State Department today revealed the latest offer by the Italian Government. The United States embassy in Rome, Canty disclosed, has been notified that the new terms have been okayed by both the film industry and the State Department.

Under the new proposal, Italy agrees to eliminate the section of the former decree which stated that film revenue had to be spent within six months of deposit in the Bank of Italy. New offer also broadens the uses to which the coin can be put, thus eliminating a second stumbling block to complete accord. Original decree had restricted expenditures to needs directly related to business of exchanges. This has been expanded to include the purchase and rental of showcases.

New agreement, which is slated to be put into operation soon, places no restrictions on the import of Hollywood product. Canty discounted reports of a 16-picture per company quota. Although the original Italian proposal contained such a quota, it is expected that the American companies will agree to a limitation among themselves. Latter development would be voluntary since the Italian Government will not set up a quota. New agreement will last until end of current year and then be subject to review by both governments.

NEW RADIO TREND TOWARD FAMILY COMEDIES

Growing trend toward family situation comedies and programs with appeal for ex-service men and women are receiving serious attention in the agencies, Glenhall Taylor, radio exec of the Young & Rubicam agency, told delegates at opening session yesterday of CBS Program Managers Clinic. "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" was singled out as an example of the type of program that would chart the course for the future.

Following address of welcome by Donald W. Thornburgh, coast head of CBS, Charles Smith, market research counsel, talked on "Research Guides to Station Programming." Speaking at the afternoon session were John Meston, network censor; Maurie Webster, assistant production manager; Ned Marr, resident attorney for the network. Buffet supper followed attendance by delegates of 15 stations at dress rehearsal of "The Whistler." Session resumes today and winds up tomorrow.

The NBC censor passed the script and to the un-jaundiced eye it looked clean enough with probably only a few lines on the border line of good taste. But the audience screamed when they should have snickered and that set off talk about the show being not so lily-pure. These remarks are inspired by the first Frank Morgan show for Pall Mall last Sunday and points up a practice of evil design not of the making of the writers or chief comic. It makes it at once patent that the studio audience can dirty up an unoffensive script and put the home dialers on the wrong tangent. Some of Morgan's lines which exploded in the pews seemed clean enough but dirty meanings were read into them by the ducat grabbers who seem to take great delight in supplying their own double entendre.

Morgan certainly wasn't guilty of connotated inflection or time-pausing, as some of the other comics have been wont to do, to give the sitters a chance to dirty up the gags. By the large, a script is only as suggestive as the audience makes it. It's a peculiarity of our language that words and phrases can be turned to meanings far from their intent. Americans like a gag, the farther off-color the better, so a study of mass psychology might be in order to isolate the germ and put the ticket grabbers on their good behavior. It might even become necessary for the warm-up announcer to warn in advance that the show was intended to be clean and that those who howl in the wrong places are off base and may be tagged out.

HEYMAN SHIES ON DISNEY REJECTED SONG CLAUSE

Deal whereby songwriter Eddie Heyman would write ten songs for Walt Disney Productions' "Peter Pan" fell through yesterday when Heyman balked at signing a contract which contained stipulation that any of his lyrics not used in forthcoming film would remain Disney property. Heyman insisted that whatever of his work was not used should revert to him for possible placement elsewhere. Writer agreed he would churn out songs until studio found ten to its satisfaction, but shied from the deal of rejected songs becoming studio property. Heyman was to have gotten $10,000 for the stint.

Book Review

"IMPRESARIO"
By Sol Hurok

Sol Hurok, in collaboration with Ruth Goode, has gathered into his autobiography, "Impresario," a collection of reminiscences about the top-flight concert and opera artists who have been appearing under his banner for the past 35 years. Most of the anecdotes are told warmly if not incisively and make for pleasant reading. Hurok doesn't delve too deeply into the business end of the trade, but he keeps his reader amused with the laughs and occasional tears that prevail in presentation end of show business.

Hurok skips over his early life and is even a little vague about his own climb to the first-bracket of impresarios. But he tells of his first presentation, Efrem Zimbalist, at Brownsville's New Palm Garden at a bargain rate. From there on he skyrockets upward with Chaliapin, Isadora Duncan, Pavlova and later with the Ballet Russe, Marian Anderson, Salvador Dali, Jan Peerce and myriad other artists.

He recounts his stories well and doesn't spare himself in making mistakes, losing fortunes or even sitting down to a feast, which seems to be the other art in which Hurok excels. For the average or even the dyed-in-the-wool theatre and concert lover, "Impresario" is good reading and a new light on one of the little known phases of entertainment.

WB ENTERING LATIN, ASIA'S 16M FIELD

Warners is entering the 16m field in Latin America and the Far East, it was announced yesterday by Harry and Jack Warner. Company is rushing preparation of 16m prints, in order to get films to these countries in time for the Twentieth Anniversary of Sound celebration. Distribution will be handled by regular Warner branch personnel in all foreign countries, where special facilities for new service are being set up. 16m prints will be sold only in spots where opposition to 35m distribution does not occur.

Wolfe Cohen, Warners International veepee, who just returned from four month trip overseas, announced that 16m equipment is still scarce in South America and the Far East. India will require about 1,000 machines, while Ceylon, alone, will take 100. However, numerous Philippine installations have already been established and are in operation, he reported.

posals sent its way. Decision may be made at the session. Final decision rests primarily with Charles Einfeld, David Loew, David Tannenbaum and A. Pam Blumenthal.

That the board decision expected this afternoon will be in favor of Universal was indicated once more last night in a statement by Nate Blumberg. Latter said Universal would like very much to have Enterprise product if his terms meet with the approval of the board meeting in Hollywood. Universal prexy insisted that no deal has been signed as yet.

Blumberg asserted the pending release deal provides for more than a percentage distribution pact. He refused to discuss other terms but admitted that offer has been made to Enterprise. One report as to terms is that Einfeld and Loew are seeking options on stock of company through which they release.

Pam Blumenthal planed for the coast tonight for the Enterprise board meeting after discussing with Blumberg last minute terms for deal.

Understood that Enterprise toppers discussed, in detail, various phases of distribution with its star talent-partners, among them being Ingrid Bergman, Ginger Rogers, John Garfield and Barbara Stanwyck. Latter group, with heavy coin invested in projected productions, are showing heavy interest in all distribution phases of current negotiations.

Haskins & Sells, accountant firm which has been making a survey of various releasing deals, will report at today's meeting. Particular emphasis has been placed upon check of Universal's releasing deal, with all indications pointing to that company taking over the Enterprise product. Understood that if deal with Universal goes through, it would also call for making studio space available to Enterprise if production schedule makes it necessary.

By RADIE HARRIS

To those of us to whom Faye Emerson had emphatically stated that she would not resume her movie career for at least six months, the Coast report that she had signed with Enterprise to play "Irene" in "Arch of Triumph" came as a great surprise. But no one was more amazed than Faye, herself, who read the news over her morning breakfast in the new apartment she and Elliott are furnishing on Washington Square North. If she's set for the part, she wishes Charlie Einfeld or David Loew would tell her about it, so, at least she could enjoy the flattery of being asked—and the power of refusal. Buffie Cobb, who has been having a Mad-hattan holiday here for the past three weeks "Constellations" back to the Coast today to start rehearsals in "Angel Street" for the Laguna Beach Players, of which she will be a permanent member this summer. There is a possibility, however, that 20th-Fox may send her to Paris in July for some fashion tie-ups on "Anna and the King of Siam," and since Paris is only a Channel away from London, where Bill Eythe will be working, that's a bit of alright for Buffie! . . . Gertrude Lawrence's three leading men in "Pygmalion" certainly proved ripe plucking for the Hollywood grab-bag. Raymond Massey has already checked into Warners for "The Secret"—Cecil Humphreys is en route to 20th-Fox to make his screen debut in "The Razor's Edge" and Melville Cooper, as forecast in this column more than a month ago, will join the "Rue de Madeleine" Co. for location exteriors in Boston and Quebec . . . Lucille Ball, looking like every movie fan's idea of a glamour queen in a white evening gown, dripping with sequinned spangles, made a p.a. tour of ten of the Loew's theatres. At the end of her written act, which Lucille ad-libbed to suit herself, she asked the audience to fire any questions at her, and if they were at all answerable, she'd answer them. To her amazement and delight, the most popular question was not, "Tell us about Van or Frankie," but, "How is Susan Peters coming along?"

LANA'S BOON TO UNEMPLOYMENT: This is no press yarn, because "I vas dere, Sharlie," when it ACTUALLY happened the other night at the Capitol, where "The Postman Rings Twice" is still ringing the box office bell. In the opening scene, John Garfield can't make up his mind whether to take the job as handy man to Cecil Kellaway in his "Twin Oaks" drive-in. Just as he is hesitating, in walks Lana Turner, and as she stands framed in the doorway, looking tres sextacular in white blouse and trunks, an appreciative paying customer yelled from the balcony, "Hey, Garfield, if you don't want that job, I'll take it!"

ADD ARRIVALS: Don Ameche at the Waldorf . . . Eddie Bracken at the Gotham . . . Doc Shurr and Fefe Ferry at the Madison . . . Gabriel Pascal, Del Guidice, Joan Davis and John Wolf here from London to represent Arthur Rank in a series of conferences in N.Y. and Hollywood.

BULLETIN BOARD: Michael Myerberg is a lucky producer, not only for being able to tag such a perfect successor as Dolly Haas to follow Mary Martin in "Lute Song," but also to have someone who can fit into Mary's Valentina wardrobe, which cost Mr. M. plenty American yen. Although Mary is five inches taller than Dolly, their measurements are identical, even to their shoe size. Convenient following in footsteps, eh what?

Sonja Henie, who uses the "Constellation" from coast to coast like some commuters ride the Hoboken ferry, planes back here in two weeks to cheer two champs—Joe Louis and her new ice revue at the Center theatre (20).

No wonder that whenever a musical goes into production, Broadway producers go mad, trying to find a dance director, for the very obvious reason that as soon as they click with one show, off they go to the Hollywoods. Now, it's Nelson Barclift, who on the strength of the swell job he did staging the routines for "Around the World," has been nabbed by Paramount. And on the strength of his new contract, he has blown himself to a brand new car (that's what happens when you know the Right People!) and is motoring out with Bob Fly. They check into the Bev-Hills on the 20th.

Pam Blumenthal, Jr., whose pappy is an exec for Enterprise, is an "enterpriz"-ing young man on his own. He's found himself a job at Warners to learn the ropes from one who knows them well—Delmer Daves.

Cy Howard took his wife, Nan Wynn, to a preview of "Henry V" and as they left the projection room, noticing that she still seemed lost in the mood of the picture, he took her hand and bending low, declaimed: "Come, milady, prithee allow me to wend my way with you down this 51st St. lane to yon tavern, where ye innkeeper, a Falstaffian character who speaks not the King's English, yet boasts the best strawberry graham pie in this village, waits upon our coming. Away, to Toots!"

P.S.: Nan went with him, but she says any resemblance to Larry Olivier was just wish fulfillment!

From Axe to Zero: An important Hollywood exec, displeased by the over-head expense of his home office, recently arrived east to do some heavy slashing. A few days later, he returned to his sumptuous office on the studio lot, very satisfied that "from now on, things were going to be different." They are. No longer can everyone in the various depts. receive a copy of Daily Variety and the other trades—only the heads. And the talent scout can no longer subscribe to The Nation and The New Republic!

NY TELE WILL USE PIX IN BIG WAY

Washington, June 3.—Prospective New York television station operators plan an extensive use of motion pictures in their programming, witnesses for three applicants indicated today. N.Y. video sessions got under way with six applicants bidding for four available channels. Among them were Bremer Broadcasting Co., of Newark, ABC, New York Daily News Syndicate, WLIB, New York, and the Debs Memorial Radio Fund. NBC, CBS and DuMont already have commercial video outlets in N.Y.

F. N. Flynn, general manager of the Daily News Co., said the newspaper plans to spend between $25,000 and $50,000 yearly to produce its own video pictures. Margaret Kirk, speaking for Bremer, estimated that 40 per cent of the time of their station—if they get one—will be devoted to showing films. Financial statement submitted by Bamberger Broadcasting Co., also shows that considerable time and money will be spent on films in connection with operation of the station. Hearings continue tomorrow.

Reynolds Back From Detroit Trip

Bob Reynolds, v-p and g.m. of KMPC, back after flying trip to Detroit where he conferred with G. A. Richards, station's owner, and principal owner of WJR, Detroit, and WGAR, Cleveland. Richards returns here June 12 until mid-August when he'll return east for two or three months for added check into operations of eastern stations. Owen Uridge, former assistant manager, was recently appointed v-p and g.m. of WJR, replacing Leo Fitzpatrick, resigned.

'Ramrod' in Stride

"Ramrod," Harry Sherman production which is Enterprise's first picture to hit cameras, got go-signal yesterday at Zion National Park, with Joel McCrea and Veronica Lake teamed and Andre DeToth directing. Film is reported to be first in 20 years shot in park.

a few weeks after return from military service. Every major studio was represented in the negotiation discussions held by the Screen Actors Guild to have Graff re-employed by Columbia.

Graff was under yearly option contract at Columbia and was drafted about five weeks before the first option was due. After several years in the army, studio hired him back for the balance of the original contract period but failed to take up the option. Actor claimed that, under the Selective Service Act, he was entitled to re-employment for a full year because under a term contract he could not be classed as a "temporary" employe.

Studio, although disagreeing with Graff's contention, has agreed to re-employ him for a full year as a matter of goodwill and general policy of doing its part to aid veterans re-establish themselves.

Who Rules Goldwyn Lot? Get Out Your Algebra

Samuel Goldwyn's announcement of a leasing deal with Lady Sylvia Stanley, one-time wife of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., giving him "control of a full fifty per cent of the property" he currently leases as the Samuel Goldwyn Studios, was described as "a slight discrepancy" last night by Mary Pickford.

"I am certain that Mr. Goldwyn did not intentionally mean to be inaccurate," Miss Pickford stated, "because as a matter of record I own 51-1/10 per cent of the property."

Here's the how of the Pickford claim of control.

Anti-Double Tax Measure May Save Pix 35 Million

Washington, June 4.—Senate ratification of the anti-double taxation treaty with Great Britain may have saved the film industry in the neighborhood of $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 annually according to Motion Picture Association of America.

The industry takes $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 a year of Great Britain in annual film rentals. Up to the present it was pointed out the British have let this go through without putting a tax on it. However the American government was taxing British pix earnings in this country and there was heavy pressure in Parliament to retaliate on U.S. earnings there.

Had the treaty not passed MPAA believes the British would have levied against our rentals in that country at British rates of about 50 per cent on earnings.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

THE GRAPEVINE: Tom Breen, son of Joe Breen and wounded Marine veteran of Guadalcanal, has signed a Metro acting contract . . . Harry Sherman, as of today, has been riding the Hollywood ranges for 30 years. Between "Light of the Western Stars," his first picture, and "Ramrod," which he is producing for Enterprise, were sandwiched 156 motion pictures . . . George Brent is burning over the way his "Truckee" was given some rough treatment by a couple of jocks the other day at Hollywood Park . . . Margot Grahame, recently divorced in Las Vegas, is planning to return to London and resume her film career in British films. She played in "The Informer" a dozen years ago . . . Viveca Lindfors is the new Warners white hope. Every director on the lot is trying to tab her for their pictures. They think she's got the same quality Ingrid Bergman has . . . Turnabout is fair play note: "Duffy's Tavern" is slated for the comic strip treatment, while "Lil Abner," of the funny papers, is preparing for its radio debut . . . It will be interesting to learn how a certain Pasadena political candidate comes out in the primary election—his press agent is named Digges Graves . . . Sydney Greenstreet claims he lost 15 pounds during his New York stay but impartial observers say you'd never know it . . . New low in practical jokes: Pranksters hung a red light over the entrance to the local office of Irving Berlin Music Corp. . . . Metro holds its 16th annual golf tournament this year at Brentwood. Chief Whitey Hendry is around garnering prizes for the event, and they'll be tops . . . Leon "Looney Tune" Schlesinger will proudly celebrate his 39th wedding anniversary Sunday . . . Howard Dietz, Metro vice prexy in charge of advertising and publicity is going to spend a month at the Culver City Studio three times a year, and also going to Europe twice a year. Howard says picture advertising and publicity is a potent factor in sales, and with a world market, one has to be most observant as well as alert.

ARENA Managers Association, which controls ice show spots around the country, has found rodeo just as profitable as such frappe spectacles as "Ice-Capades" and "Ice Follies." In four dates, totaling 27 days, World Championship Rodeo Show, with Gene Autry as the headliner, grossed neat round figure of $288,100. While show is billed as Autry's own and is using his rodeo stock, film cowpoke is in as a star single with his horse Champion at $1,500 a day. Rodeo clocked better than $59,800 for six days in Washington, just under $73,200 for eight days in Cleveland, took over $69,400 out of Toronto in six days and piled up nearly $75,650 for seven days in Pittsburgh. It opens here June 14 at the Pan Pacific, running through June 30. While here in rodeo, Autry will be dividing his time between pictures, radio and records. He starts waxing 16 sides for Columbia Friday, goes into "Sioux City Sue" at Republic next Tuesday, meantime handling regular Sunday broadcast, which goes to a half-hour over CBS June 16.

FIRST release of Hamp-Tone Records, recently formed pop-plattery, has been roundly banned by radio disc jockeys. Item is "Hey Ba-Ba-Re-Bop," rendered by Wynonie Harris, into which has been inserted four lines of rhyme about Jack and Jill trudging up a hill and not returning with the fabled bucket of water. Lyrics, incidentally, were not in original version of song, first made popular by Lionel Hampton, whose wife is prez of Hamp-Tone. Waxery, in turn, is financially controlled by Jefferson-Travis Corp., which also owns Musicraft and Guild Records.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

If someone were able to work out a system by which the Soviet, Great Britain and the United States were able to stand on common ground—literally and figuratively—all would be rosy in international relations. The trouble is that we see the Soviet moves into the Balkans, Iran, Korea, Hungary, Austria and elsewhere as imperialistic, and high-handed. They, on the other hand, see us seeking bases in Iceland, China, Turkey, the Azores, and all over the Pacific, and they think we are imperialistic. Neither one of us thinks himself imperialistic. It is the habit of emotions, as well as individuals, to attribute to others all the vices, and to themselves, all the virtues. We can understand and appreciate what we do ourselves. When we are caught speeding, we are ready with a reason—but the other fellow who is speeding is something else again. It's always the other fellow who causes the accident. What is more, in an effort to protect ourselves against Russia, we take more of the steps to which she objects. It is because we want to be prepared against Russia that we are interested in Iceland, China and the Pacific. On the other hand, it is their fear of our moves that makes them more insistent about the Balkans, Turkey and elsewhere. We have built up a western bloc because of their eastern bloc, and they have built up an eastern one because of their fear of one in the west. Somehow Allied statesmanship must break the circle. The process will necessarily be slow, and never, as long as there is human nature, will it be completely satisfactory.

PREVIEWED at Universal Studios, Studio City, June 4, 1946. Running time: 87 MINS.

"The Runaround" is fast moving romantic adventure comedy, using the surefire double bid of sex and laughter for audience interest. The laughter ranges free and easy through the show and the sex is kept within the bounds of good clean fun. Basic materials of the story are the familiar ones of the chase and the cross-country trek in which hero and heroine are constantly being forced into intimacy by circumstances and as constantly being scripted out of danger until the wedding-bells finish. The film gets some neat new twists to the formula and comes up as good, fresh entertainment. With names of Rod Cameron and Ella Raines for the marquee the show looks like hot box office.

Cameron figures in the picture as a hard-boiled private detective, fast with wits or fists as occasion demands. The occasion demands almost incessantly when he takes a $15,000 job to hunt Ella Raines, truant heiress, and "bring her home unmarried." The job is not only complicated by Miss Raines, who doesn't choose to be brought home, but by Broderick Crawford, head of a rival detective agency.

The deal is that whoever brings Miss Raines home first gets the fifteen grand and both boys play rough with this end in view. Action of the story extends from New York to San Francisco and back again. But—those intimate journeys will do it every time—when Cameron finally gets the girl back home he finds himself more interested in her than in the $15,000 check.

Cameron handles his role convincingly and Miss Raines has no trouble in making the audience feel she is well worth the long, troublesome chase. Crawford is successful in a portrayal that calls for a mixture of heavy villainy and unscrupulous good nature. Frank McHugh is good for a few laughs and makes the most of limited opportunity in his rather brief part as Cameron's partner.

Others of the supporting cast handle their chores adequately, with Samuel Hinds and Nana Bryant earning a hand for their work as the girl's father and mother, respectively.

The yarn has been tightly scripted by Arthur Horman and Sam Hellman and has a surprise ending that carries punch, despite its obvious trickery. Director Charles Lamont keeps the comedy uppermost at all times and makes most effective use of the situations offered by the script.

Show has been neatly put together and given good production values by Producer Joe Gershenson.

Little Mister Jim

(Drama)

METRO RELEASE. Producer, Orville O. Dull. Director, Fred Zinneman. Screenplay by George Bruce. Based on novel by Tommy Wadelton. Photography, Lester White. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons and Hubert Hobson. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis and Ralph S. Hurst. Musical score, George Bassman. Sound, Douglas Shearer. Film editor, Frank Hull.

CAST—Jackie "Butch" Jenkins, James Craig, Frances Gifford, Luana Patten, Spring Byington, Chingwah Lee, Laura La Plante, Henry O'Neill, Morris Ankrum, Celia Travers, Ruth Brady, Sharon McManus, Buz Buckley, Carol Nugent, Jean Van.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village Theatre, May 22, 1946. Running time: 93 MINS.

"Butch" Jenkins, manly little fellow that he is, appears even more manly than usual by contrast in a show in which the grown-ups are generally made to act as childishly as possible. "Little Mister Jim" is an elaborately produced but loosely motivated tear-jerker that succeeds in its purpose of featuring the Jenkins youngster. Dramatically it is an artificial compound of hokum and schmalz, but it will undoubtedly command strong femme support at the box office—particularly from women who just love a good cry and are not too critical about the means employed to induce it.

The George Bruce screenplay and Fred Zinneman's direction wring the last possible tear out of situations soaked with sentimentality. And they get full measure of comedy out of the adventures and pranks of a sturdy, courageous little army post youngster. Only trouble is lack of any sound, sensible reason for a good many of the most lachrymose bits.

For instance, the story marches logically, if somewhat tritely, through the early stages in which "Butch," as an active, appealing little boy being guided by his Army captain father, lovely, understanding mother and their wise and loyal Chinese cook in his inevitable clashes with the grown-up outlook. But the cook later turns out to be a Chinese major general and the yarn does not make it quite clear why a Chinese major general should be house servant to an American captain of artillery. And when the mother dies in child birth there doesn't seem to be any reason why "Butch" shouldn't be informed of the fact—except that it makes possible a harrowing scene in which the youngster keeps vigil by her bedside under the impression she is just sleeping.

And though it's natural enough, perhaps, for the captain to take to drink following his wife's death it's a bit difficult to understand why this should keep him from keeping his young son in clothes and necessaries —unless maybe, it is assumed a captain's pay won't run to both clothes and Scotch at current prices.

James Craig and Frances Gifford make the father and mother roles as convincing as circumstances permit. Chingwah Lee, as the Chinese cook, justifies his casting in one of the fattest and most sympathetic parts of the show. Luana Patten scores as Butch's little girl playmate and balance of the supporting cast is of uniform excellence.

Producer Orville O. Dull has mounted the picture well and gets full show value out of his materials.

Two Smart People

(Melodrama)

METRO RELEASE. Producer, Ralph Wheelwright. Director, Jules Dassin. Screenplay, Ethel Hill, Leslie Charteris. Story, Ralph Wheelwright, Allan Kenward. Photography, Karl Freund. Editor, Chester W. Schaeffer. Musical score, George Bassman. Song, "Dangerous," Ralph Blane, George Bassman. Sound, Douglas Shearer. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Wade Rubottom. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis, Keough Gleason. Costumes, Irene, Valles.

CAST—Stars Lucille Ball and John Hodiak. Features Lloyd Nolan. Supporting players, Hugo Haas, Lenore Ulric, Elisha Cook, Jr., Lloyd Corrigan, Vladimir Sokoloff, David Cota, Clarence Muse.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village Theatre, Westwood, Calif., May 29, 1946. Running time: 94 MINS.

"Two Smart People" should have carried sparkle and gayety. Instead, it misses on both scores through over-writing and over-direction, and emerges as very commonplace fare. Names of Lucille Ball, John Hodiak and Lloyd Nolan will help sell film, but picture fails to bear out promise of its appealing basic idea. Some lavishly-presented Mardi Gras sequences in latter portion help bolster plot.

This is the story of a confidence man (Hodiak), en route back to Sing Sing with his captor (Nolan). He strikes up an agreement with the detective for one last grand fling while en route east from Los Angeles, on the promise that he won't try to escape, with copper not to act as such during this period but as his pal.

Into this picture steps another confidence figure (Miss Ball), whom Hodiak crossed up in putting over an art collection deal when she ruined a plan of his to dispose of phony oil holdings. She learns that he is carrying $500,000 in government securities, so takes the same train east in an effort to get them for herself. Pair fall in love, with melodramatic climax in New Orleans during Mardi Gras when another crook who has been pursuing both of them is killed by Nolan.

Both stars try hard but can't overcome their roles or treatment accorded them. Nolan is most believable of trio. Hodiak is none too happily cast, and direction makes his impersonation too artificial. Elisha Cook, Jr., as the nemesis, isn't permitted to lend any conviction to part. Lenore Ulric is standout in brief characterization of Mexican woman, and Lloyd Corrigan is motivating figure. Balance of cast is well played.

Jules Dassin handled direction with a heavy hand, trying to place too great emphasis upon dramatic scenes and over-playing what should have been lighter moments. Screenplay by Ethel Hill and Leslie Charteris does not capture the light mood of film's premise, in adaptation of Ralph Wheelwright and Allan Kenward's original story. "People" is Wheelwright's first producer effort, and he packed it with values but should have paid more attention to style of presentation. Karl Freund photographed beautifully, and other technical departments stand up on their own.

Talk About A Lady

(Comedy with Songs)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Michel Kraike. Director, George Sherman. Screenplay, Richard Weil and Ted Thomas. Story, Robert D. Andrews and Barry Trivers. Photography, Henry Freulich. Musical director, Mario Silva. Film editor, James Sweeney. Art, George Brooks. Sets, James Crowe. Sound, George Cooper. Assistant director, James Nicholson. Songs: "Avocado," "You Gotta Do Whatcha Gotta Do," "I Never Had a Dream Come True," by Allan Roberts and Doris Fisher; "A Mist is Over the Moon," by Oscar Hammerstein II and Ben Oakland.

CAST—Jinx Falkenburg, Forrest Tucker, Joe Besser, Trudy Marshall, Richard Lane, Jimmy Little, Frank Sully, Jack Davis, Robert Regent, Mira McKinney, Robin Raymond, Stan Kenton and his orchestra.

REVIEWED at Guild theatre, Hollywood, Calif., June 4, 1946. Running time: 72 MINS.

This tightly budgeted fare was designed for underslung billing in the duals and as such passably pleases. It has more assets than defects or lacks. Producer Michel Kraike wisely extracted what values the production could afford, and for the most part director George Sherman injected as much entertainment, color and interest as probably anyone could have drawn from the piece.

Perhaps five minutes sliced from footage midway, where yarn tends to grow repetitious, would have helped pace and punch. Joe Besser had to carry the burden of laugh-getting with rather weak material; it would have been better to have steered the lenses away from him during several sequences, if better business could not have been provided.

Scoring strongly, Jinx Falkenburg turns in as nice a job as ever she's done in films. Opposite, Forrest Tucker might have been more lively, although he was hobbled by script which kept role trifle glum for romantic lead.

Plot presents small-town girl inheriting two million from jaded Broadway racketeer, who after briefly meeting her was bewitched by her innocence and sincerity. She is put through a mental and even physical wringer by assortment of racketeer's friends who cherish the money. Ending has a nice element of surprise twist, and along the route the story is considerably ribbed by insertions of songs and three interludes of Stan Kenton's very good band. Miss Falkenberg does well by "Never Had a Dream" ditty, but the standout, of which more should have been made, is "Mist Over the Moon," on which Oscar Hammerstein II was in his top lyricizing form for swell ballad clefffing by Ben Oakland. Ork catalogers and radio shouldn't miss this one.

Trudy Marshall does a meaningful portrayal of racketeer's minxy wife, and Richard Lane, in but briefly, makes much sense of the husband. Jack Sully does his standard dumb hoodlum, and Jack Davis is properly suave as a sly shyster.

Generally, technical jobs are well-handled, with George Brooks' art impressively swell on so obviously short a budget. Henry Freulich's camera well-caught the dramatic sequences, but might better have framed the initial and final night-club sequences.

Throw A Saddle On A Star

(Musical-Western)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Colbert Clark. Director, Ray Nazarro. Original screenplay, J. Benton Cheney. Photography, George B. Meehan, Jr. Film editor, Arthur Seid. Art direction, Charles Clague. Set decorator, George Montgomery. Musical director, Mario Silva. Assistant director, Tommy Flood. Sound, Philip Faulkner.

CAST—Ken Curtis, Jeff Donnell, Adelle Roberts, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Andy Clyde, Frank Sully, the Dinning Sisters, Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage, Hoosier Hot Shots, Robert Stevens, Eddie Bruce, Earl Duane, Jack Parker, Emmett Lynn.

REVIEWED at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, June 4, 1946. Running time: 66 MINS.

Another in Columbia's celluloid corn series, combining hillbilly and western accents with hoke. As such it serves its purpose capably enough. Corn belt sales are assured by such stalwarts as the Hoosier Hot Shots of the National Barn Dance, Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage, and Ken Curtis, a good singer of western ballads.

Original script by J. Benton Cheney plots to bring the Hotshots, Jeff Donnell and Adelle Roberts together in the west, where Curtis and his pop, Andy Clyde, are about to lose the old homestead because of a lack of folding money. The usual misunderstandings between Curtis and Miss Roberts, rodeo montage, plenty of prairie crooning and other standard ingredients combine to spin out sufficient running time. Curtis, rodeo rider, can't give his best to his job because Miss Roberts is cold to him. As a consequence he's not likely to win enough cash to rescue the ranch. At the last minute they get together and the day is saved. Rodeo scenes might have been more effective if the inserts hadn't been so obvious and crudely injected.

Cast work is more or less standard for this type product. Miss Donnell, Big Boy Williams, Andy Clyde are in for comedy. The Dinning Sisters spots two songs while Hot Shots and Purple Sagers take care of the rest. Production by Colbert Clark and direction by Ray Nazarro fulfill release aims within budget restrictions.

WOODS PITCHES FOR NY AS BETTER AIR OUTLET THAN H'D

Washington, June 4.—New York is more important than Hollywood for program origination, said Mark Woods, American Broadcasting Co. prexy today, in making pitch for ABC television outlet in New York before Federal Communications Commission. Networks must have their own outlets in New York, he testified during ABC's all-day session before examiners, sitting on pleas of six applicants for four remaining New York channels. Hearings continue Thursday.

ABC wants its own outlets in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, and emphasized N.Y. and L.A. as two leading talent centers. And if okayed, net would spend upwards of $10,000,000 for equipment and for first year's operations, with N.Y. getting two million, L.A. one million, and other two about half million for operations in first semester.

Net doesn't plan producing its own video films at present, it was stated, and indicated that indie producers would be used for that purpose. Woods said six companies had expressed interest in such deals but he would not divulge names.

When asked why ABC wasn't seeking an outlet in Washington, Woods wowed the hearing with reply that only talent in Washington is in government and Congress—and that isn't considered entertainment.

Locale apparently regulates ABC thinking. When testifying here ABC'ers agreed with NBC and others that L.A. was the greatest talent center, and likely to surpass New York as the television center of the country and world. ABC reps also pointed with pride to their system of informality in production that permitted a great amount of ad libbing.

'SHOW OFF' WILL RUN TO SERIES

Light 'n' Airy

(on the ½ shell)

by JACK HELLMAN

Winding up three days of clinical discussions today at KNX are the production heads of CBS flanked by program managers of 23 affiliated stations in the far west. Simultaneous similar sessions have been held in New York. What comes out of these meetings of the minds may well set the pattern for new trends in showmanship. On the face of it the agenda didn't look too exciting but with new blood infused into production jobs with the return of war-seasoned vets new forms of entertainment are taking shape. True it is that the lines of least resistance have been followed during the era of prodigal spending when it was more important to get a good time than a good show. Now with time opening up on the major webs and the spending dollar not tax-weighted as before we can look for a serious application of showmanship or at least a sounder approach to what constitutes good programming.

Not that it's entirely within the province of CBS or any other network to set the standard of quality, although NBC made a serious attempt to do so, it can at least cut the stencil for fresh ideas away from the tired formats that creak with age. Once the nets take the lead and show a sincere effort to get out of the programming rut, the agencies can be easily cued into progressive steps that would mean better shows for the clients and the sit-at-homes who buy the merchandise. It is hoped for the good of the industry, all too eager to coast along, out of the CBS clinics has come some sound programming ideas as a challenge to the standpat attitude of old line agencies.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 4.—Here is the postwar deal between the Navy Department and the motion picture distributors.

Navy expects to buy four features a week (15 prints of each) plus accompany newsreels and shorts, or a total of 208 features a year. Of these, 40 per cent of the prints will be in 35m and the remaining 60 per cent in 16m. Of the 208 features, 90 per cent, or 187 subjects, will be in black and white and the remaining 10 per cent (21 films) will be technicolor.

Navy figures it will pay the companies $1,781,670 for pix for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The cost of each print of a 35m technicolor feature will run an average of $1074 per print, and $552 for 16m. In black and white, the cost per 35m print will average $501 and the price of 16m features will be $352. Remainder of the price is made up through the price of the reels and short subjects.

The Navy contracts with each distributor are built on the following basis: 40 per cent of a fictitious door charge of 10 cents for each gob, and based on an average of 20,000 men seeing each print. If the Navy manages to show the pictures to more than 20,000, the 4c per head figure drops; if the reverse is true, the price goes up.

The new contracts are the first which require a per capita payment from the Navy and are not as good as the contracts formerly in effect, from the Navy's viewpoint.

The industry's attitude, however, is that it donated so much for free to the services during the war that it now is entitled to make a little money. The figures will work out considerably cheaper than commercial exhibitors pay. However, the Navy Motion Picture Exchange does all the handling and there is no service comparable to what is given by the industry exchanges to the theatres.

Post mortem to last week's film treaty with the French: How about dollar exchange? That is still the $64 question.

Generally speaking, however, the dicker was an ideal one, and the kind of thing that our government would like to see in effect in many foreign countries to break the existing stalemates. The pressure was put on the French to create a pattern which could be held up to most of the remainder of Europe by our State Department.

The fact that motion pictures are the only commodity mentioned in the treaty is considered most significant. The new agreement represents the only condition attached to the loan, though no State Department official would be so undiplomatic as to call it a "condition." It represents also an announcement to the world of the weight of pix in the international situation and the fact that our government will fight for a fair deal for pictures.

For the first time Hollywood should be able to lay its plans to conduct its affairs abroad on a businesslike basis.

With the opportunity now before the industry, only Hollywood itself can fumble the ball—if it commits one of its inimitable boners and floods France with inferior product.

New catalogue of official British films just issued by BIS includes two shorts, each of a famous scene from Shakespeare—one from Macbeth and the other from Julius Caesar. Casts include topnotchers like Felix Aylmer, Wilfred Lawson, Cathleen Nesbit, Catherine Lacey, and with the London Symphony supplying the scores. A memo states: "These are distributed in order to enable those who have no opportunity to attend Shakespearean plays in the theatre to see who the various parts are played by leading British actors and actresses."

SCHENLEY DRAMA SERIES GETS TOP RADIO PREEM

Dramatic plays topped by a film star with solid support from front line AFRA performers have long been Hollywood's stock in trade. While the budget makes them prohibitive for summer fillers, occasionally a client comes along with loose purse strings and shoots the works. Such sponsorial auspices attended last night's presentation of Encore Theatre's initial presentation for the dog days ahead, "Magnificent Obsession." Schenley Laboratories skimped not one bit on the production and was rewarded with a forthright production of the actor-proof oldie.

Production was skilfully contrived from the airtight adaptation by Jean Holloway to the sure directorial strokes of Bill Lawrence. Music of Leith Stevens kept the mood alive and adroitly bridged the sequences. Cornel Wilde as the medico gave a capital performance and Lurene Tuttle richly endowed the role of the blind girl. Others giving first rate aid were Vic Rodman, Earle Ross, Margaret Brayton, Griff Barnett, Eric Snowden and Ronald Varno.

Summer series for "This Is My Best" set a high standard of dramatics on the opener. Next week Paul Lukas revives "Life of Louis Pasteur." Programs are in the nature of a tribute to the medical profession and commercials on the getaway were held within dignified bounds.

PETRILLO IN BLOW AT 'JIM CROW' NIGHTERIES

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 4.—James C. Petrillo last night struck back at two "Jim Crow" nighteries in this town when he called off big parties on learning that 45 Negro delegates of his Musicians' union would be barred from the festivities.

"If our colored delegates are not good enough to go there, we figure we're not either," said Petrillo. Negro delegates, incidentally, are barred from Soreno hotel, convention headquarters. Petrillo ordered the nighteries to give to charity wards the $3,500 worth of food and liquor the AFM had bought for the party.

Petrillo cut loose with a threatening speech on eve of opening of American Federation of Musicians' 49th annual convention, making it clear that if Lea bill is not declared unconstitutional, he will tie up networks on Jan. 1 next. Pointing out webs' contracts expire on that date, AFM prexy admits he arranged date as pressure weapon. He also threatens next year to keep stations from airing music except locally.

Insiders do not attribute the sudden apparent weakness in film company stocks to any box office slump, difference not being great enough to cause stock quotation changes. For lack of a better reason, Wall Streeters and Broadwayites are blaming a tip that the anti-trust suit has gone against the majors as reason for ticker dip.

Enterprise OKs Release Deal With Universal

in New York. Yesterday's development confirms Daily Variety's exclusive forecasts on the distribution pact.

Indicating an intensive sales-distribution program aimed at the international market, it was learned that John Davis, personal rep of J. Arthur Rank, represented the British film topper at the New York end of the negotiations. Rank has given the green light to a broad distribution program for Enterprise product in Universal outlets throughout the British Empire.

SIX PIX A YEAR

Pact calls for Universal to release, throughout the world, a minimum of six top-budgeted Enterprise films annually for the three-year period. The films are to be sold separately from the Universal product and from that of the several indies currently releasing through the company.

Universal will shortly name a top sales exec to take personal charge of selling the Enterprise product. Move calls for the special sales manager to serve as liaison between the Einfeld-Loew combo, the Universal sales organization and exhibs throughout the world.

FILMS ON SCHEDULE

First film on the program, Harry Sherman's "Ramrod," is currently shooting on location at Zion National Park, Utah. Remaining five features on the slate include "Arch of Triumph," Ingrid Bergman-Charles Boyer starrer, which Lewis Milestone will direct for producer David Lewis, and set to roll June 24; "The Other Love," Barbara Stanwyck starrer, goes September 3; "The Burning Journey," starring John Garfield, starts in early October with Robert Roberts producing; the Wolfgang Reinhardt production, "Maggi July," Ginger Rogers starrer, goes before the cameras November 1, and "Coup De Grace," possible James Mason starrer, is being prepped for a September start with Anatole Litvak producing-directing.

QUICK ACTION

Yesterday's development culminates an impressive record for the new film company. In the short span of three months, starting when Enterprise took over the California Studios in March, the Einfeld-Loew combo has signed an impressive array of big-name stars, lined-up top producers and directors and acquired some impressive story properties. Its entire program will be before the cameras by the end of the year, with its first film, "Ramrod" ready for distribution under the new setup October 1.

STARS OKE DEAL

Simultaneous with approval of the pact by the Enterprise board came ratification of the deal by outfit's star talent-partners Ingrid Bergman, Ginger Rogers, Barbara Stanwyck, John Garfield and Joel McCrea. A. Pam Blumenthal, Enterprise board member who was unable to attend yesterday's meeting here, participated in the final discussions via long distance telephone from New York.

BACK PATS

Official announcements confirming the releasing pact were issued simultaneously yesterday by Universal and Enterprise.

Said Universal prexy Nate J. Blumberg: "We believe that Universal is adding a progressive and vital production organization to its family. The men who head Enterprise have proven their ability in every phase of the industry."

The Enterprise announcement declared: "We have chosen Universal to distribute our product because we believe that company has an outstanding conception of our aim in projecting American pictures in the world market. Universal's integrity and prestige are unquestionable."

UA take on the first frame was held down by trolley tie-up but still took great $18,900.

SERGEANT SANS CREDITS

It's rather symbolic that you begin and end your life in the Army by doing things in a bottle, but in between you're liable to do other strange things too. For instance, this ex-sergeant in the Signal Corps made documentary films for the War Dept., in India and Burma. He did the preliminary research, wrote the scripts, helped direct in the field, cut the picture and wrote the commentary. One of them was made into a commercial short and was released last year.

Born and educated in England, this ex-sergeant is no lah-de-dah Limey, but he does have his aitches where they belong. He has lived most of his adult life in the U.S. and has had a varied career. He is an experienced stenographer and has written for publication. He's no genius but just a normal guy with few illusions and more than his share of ideas. If you can use such a man, please write BOX LC, VARIETY, or phone RUgby 6-2764.

SELZNICK SLATES TEXAS PREEM FOR 'DUEL'

"Duel in the Sun" will have probable Oct. 1 world preem in either one or several cities in Texas, David O. Selznick announced yesterday upon his return from New York. Film will be roadshown, and United Artists will distribute product.

Exact date is dependent upon when Technicolor can supply finished prints. If prints are available by this time, then film will open Oct. 1.

Negotiations currently are under way in number of Texas cities as site for preem. No decision yet has been made whether high-budgeter will open in only one or several locations, day-and-date, in Lone Star State.

Present plan is to take junket of Hollywood stars and names to Texas for event, and another from New York. Means of transportation, whether train or chartered planes, have not yet been set.

When picture was previewed in Bayonne, N.J., two weeks ago, it ran two hours and 35 minutes. At this time, Selznick edited out five minutes of footage, so picture will be released on two hours and 30 minute schedule.

Rogers, in "Queen of Hearts," has borrowed Jean Pierre Aumont from Metro and Maria Montez from Universal for respective roles of Franz Josef and Princess Elizabeth. Pair will enact characters during early days of their romance, while both were young. Franz Josef character again will be played up as background figure for "Mayerling," which Seymour Nebenzal has announced he will make, probably after his current "The Chase."

Central Labor Council's boycott against work performed by International Association of Machinists, Lodge 1185 had studios caught in the middle yesterday as labor troubles intensified. Boycott pressure took on a new turn as a committee of IATSE business agents called on Universal and Warners to serve demand that Lodge 1185 members employed on the lots be dismissed. Former studio

VAN HEFLIN AND CRAWFORD TEAM

Van Heflin goes on loanout from Metro for co-starring role in Warner Bros.' "The Secret." Producer Jerry Wald, who closed deal yesterday, sends the $2,000,000 budgeted film before the cameras Monday. Film, directed by Curtis Bernhardt, will co-star Joan Crawford, Heflin and Raymond Massey, with Joan Chandler. Based on the Rita Weiman story of a clinical study of a dual personality, most of the film will be shot on location. Randy McDougal scripted.

'OUTLAW' HITS 424G IN NINE

Ninth week of "The Outlaw" went nearly $800 ahead of the eighth frame, finishing with $31,800. Attributing to upswing was Memorial Day holiday and resumption of public transportation in the downtown and Wilshire areas. "Outlaw" has now rolled up staggering nine-week gross of $424,300 in the four small Music Hall theatres.

Crain, Peck Set For 20th-Fox Pix

Jeanne Crain and Gregory Peck yesterday were set for starring roles in two 20th-Fox films. Actress draws top femme role in "No Wedding Ring," a Gene Markey producing chore. Peck will star in "Foxes of Harrow," which William Bacher will produce.

B'WAY GALA FOR DURANTE

New York, June 5.—Several hundred top figures in show business gathered tonight at the old Silver Slipper, now the site of a ballroom, to celebrate Jimmy Durante's thirtieth anniversary as an entertainer. The party was given by Metro. Eddie Davis, now of Leon and Eddie's, and once head waiter at the Silver Slipper, was emcee of the festivities.

Saville for Cukor In Garson Starrer

Victor Saville will pinch hit for director George Cukor on Metro's "Sacred and Profane," Greer Garson starrer. Cukor collapsed on the set yesterday and was rushed home with a case of flu. Latter will resume chore upon recovery, studio announced.

'The Dancers', Abbott's Paris Tingler Shows Acting Merit

New York, June 5.—George Abbott delved into the macabre for his first Broadway show in a couple of seasons, "The Dancers," which opened tonight at the Biltmore. The Milton Lewis and Julian Funt melodrama dealing with three Paris murders committed by a famed ballet dancer has considerable merit mainly in the direction by Everett Sloane and the acting of Anton Dolin as the dancer. But generally it hasn't enough popular appeal to achieve box office success. Colin Keith Johnston as the mad dancer's patron, and Luis van Rooten as the Paris police inspector are excellent in support. First night audience gave the cast a half dozen curtain calls.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

MODERNIZATION of the Belmont theatre to bring it up to de luxe showcase status has film row buzzing at results and speed with which it was done. House, built many years ago by the Gore Bros., and at that time one of "the" theatres in Los Angeles, has been a subsequent run neighborhood operation for a long period. Two-week notice for complete refurbishing called for a speed-up job, but house again ranks with any other Los Angeles de luxer. Scarcity of materials resulted in complete rebuilding of much equipment and fixtures, such as seats, lighting fixtures, restrooms, etc., to bring them up to same-as-new standard. Sound and projection equipment had been renewed about 30 days ago so only thing new needed for the booth was dummy equipment to handle double-track previews in case of studio screenings prior to a film's final editing and dubbing. Entire front of theatre was washed, a new canopy, glass front and plastic letters installed. Auto park was surfaced. New-style box office, redecoration of lobby and theatre interior, carpeting, redraping throughout and addition of 200 extra loges on the orchestra floor were some of the inside improvements. Roof sign was neonized with six-tube neon and made into a two-way changeable attraction sign with north and south sides.

LOOK Magazine's amateur swing band contest for teen-agers is beginning to elicit plenty of attention from movie makers. Understood three major studios, five indie and two short subject producers have already approached the mag with proposition to use winning bands in features or two reelers. Contest started as a part of a youth promotion when the mag, through a survey, uncovered fact that over 85,000 teen-age amateur band units were in existence. Sectional contests have already been run off in Los Angeles, Kansas City and New Orleans. Chicago and New York regionals will be run off latter part of this month. Finals will be held at Carnegie Hall in New York City late in August. In addition to film offers, Look has been approached by recording companies, radio networks and veritably swamped with agents trying to tie up bands on lucrative vaude and nitery contracts. Catch in deal is that all members of bands being teen-agers, various prospective employers will have to approach parents of each individual of winning bands to secure permission for services of band.

CHANGE in plans of the Trocadero to keep its big dancery salon open was occasioned by the howl set up by Arthur Blake when he was told of being shifted to the King Cole Room. Impressionist was inked for the nitery stand last February and was set for the big room. When Trocadero operators decided to shutter the main room for the summer, Blake objected on grounds that he had been signed for the larger room and had made a schedule of dates all built around the Troc engagement. Management tried to sell him a different idea but Blake held out on the "pay or play" basis. Result is the nitery will keep to the letter of the contract, hoping, however, that the blackout of Ciro's and Slapsy Maxie's during the bridal month will throw business their way.

DEFEAT of Robert Kenny for the Democratic nomination on the Democratic ticket will not perturb "Genial" Bob. He never wanted the nomination, and would have been content in running for re-election as state atorney general. But it is understood that the CIO crowd used terrific pressure on him to make the campaign. Kenny and Gov. Earl Warren were close friends during their political careers, and the former absolutely refused to do any mud slinging against the governor, even though he suspected in advance that the odds would be against him should there be a run-off in November. It's quite likely that Kenny may get a federal judgeship in the near future via a White House nod.

THE Enterprise-Universal releasing pact is a welcome deal to latter's execs. Universal toppers have been worried past year or so because of shrinking list of boxoffice names at the studio. They are counting on distribution of Enterprise product swelling the yearly world gross by at least $30,000,000. Understood that although current deal is exclusively Universal's, it may be turned over to United World Pictures within a year or so. Latter development would take place only after UWP acquires a full staff and starts full blast operations.

DEFUNCT American Broadcasting System is attempting to pay off all debts incurred during brief existence as "fifth" network. Majority of minor creditors, mostly labor, etc., have been attended. Pacific Coast station affiliates this week received notification that they, too, will shortly be paid off. Ex net owes fees for carrying of commercials to supplementary stations that formerly formed adjunct to regular net and only carried commercials. Others that were regular affiliates and which carried sustainers as well are paid in full.

ALTHOUGH Sherrill Corwin plans regular policy of stage-shows when he reopens recently acquired Lincoln, downtown colored vaudfilmer, on July 8, house will revert to straight films for week of Aug. 20, when Corwin's Million Dollar theatre displays Lionel Hampton's ork on stage. Hampton reportedly is getting $12,500 and a split for the stanza, and obviously Corwin feels that he will fare better by centering all vaude interest hereabouts during that week on the one attraction.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Soft lights were beaming in the studio;
An oriental scene was being shot.
Two stars were clasped amid the tropic glow.
According to the script their lips were hot.

The golden sun reflected on the bay
In that sweet moment, just before the dark.
The hero's soul was soaring far away—
His horse was running out at Holly Park.

The bulbul sang its love song loud and clear
As boy and girl were clinched beneath the bough.
"It's four o'clock," he whispered in her ear.
"I wonder how my horse is doing now."

When you were a kid you believed what your mother told you, but that was in the simple days before you started reading newspapers and believed Joe Zilch, who told you what equine cadaver was going to win the Spavin Stakes at Pushover Park, or what Behemoth was going to blast his victim in a stadium devoted to the art of self defense where the cash customer takes a more violent slugging than the guy who plays a support role to the champion, even though he gets co-star billing. Joe Zilch once was an honest reporter, even though he did report the murder victim as a beautiful blonde after one hasty glance at the body on a slab in the morgue. Joe wrote what he saw and did a good job of writing until crystal gazing, clairvoyancy and phrenology crept in when the sporting editor did a quick duck over to Joe's place and left the editorial door open. Sometimes you wonder why so many fortune tellers are riding around Hollywood in limousines, and then you read your well established newspaper and lay a bet on the prognostications of Joe Zilch, who has to pick a couple of winners every day or be sneered at by his sporting editor, who doesn't know anything about horses, either.

185 COLE PORTER DISCS PLUGGING 'NITE AND DAY'

Most concentrated picture song plugging in history of Harms Music (Warners) goes behind Cole Porter song-titled picture "Night and Day," currently with release of film on July 3. Film gets preem at Hollywood theatre, New York, then, and goes into national release August 3. Mose Gumble and Mack Goldman are handling matter in East, and Vic Blau, Publishers Holding Corp., western v-p, is personally handling from this end.

Total of 185 recordings by various artists, bands, etc., of Cole Porter tunes will hit stalls during film's release. British Story Mart Is Looking Up

New York, June 5.—British story market, regarded nil as a potential source for American screen material, has picked up both from quality and quantity standpoint during past month, according to story heads of major companies. There is 300 per cent upturn in number of books, plays and originals received in this country from England, over six months ago. English companies are becoming an important factor in bidding against American producers.

E Eyes Book of Month's 'Triumph'

Vivian Wolfert, publicity director for the Book of the Month Club, huddled here yesterday with Enterprise execs and flacks on further exploitation of "Arch of Triumph." She reported a 750,000 Book of the Month Club print order on the Erich Maria Remarque novel, exceeding that of any other book in the history of the club. She is planning tie-up with Enterprise for secondary campaign on the book to coincide with release of the picture.

Chick Chander has been signed for featured comedy role in "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time," Hollywood Starlight theatre production at the Greek theatre July 8.

THEATRES FORM LABOR BODY

Advisory labor committee designed to aid exhibitor members on labor relations has been formed by Southern California Theatre Owners Association. Committee will compile and analyze all labor contracts now in force between members and unions to assure that conditions imposed on theatres are equitable for all.

On the committee are George Bowser as chairman, Harry Vinnicoff, Roy Wolff, Jack Brower and Everet Cummings. Ben Wallerstein of Warners theatres who handles their labor relations, has agreed to act as an advisory member on the committee.

Indies Find Stage Space Despite Lot Rent Problem

With two rental studios which formerly leased space definitely out of the running, another closed to outsiders for at least three months and a fourth an unknown quantity, indie producers still are finding stage space available for limited commitments at several other studios.

During past 10 days to two weeks, at least seven producers have inked deals for space, either for immediate future or during months to come. Other deals are expected to be closed shortly for stages.

Both Enterprise and Eagle-Lion, which formerly functioned as rental lots under respective names of California and PRC, henceforth will be closed to outside producers. Sig Neufeld, in addition to Pine-Thomas, has commitment at latter studio until August, but after that lot will be occupied only by E-L producers. Chaplin studio won't be available until after producer winds up his "Murders," slated for September. Samuel Goldwyn studio virtually is closed to outsiders at this point, although Goldwyn recently granted Seymour Nebenzal space for "The Chase." Future here for producers is problematical.

General Service studio is more or less a closed corporation, with Andrew Stone having to move because of no space. Stages here are pretty well taken up for next six months by Benedict Bogeaus, Hopalong Cassidy Productions, Hunt Stromberg and Charles R. Rogers.

BERKE SIGNS 1 PIC DEAL

William Berke, RKO producer-director of the Falcon series, has closed a one picture deal with Screen Guild Productions. Berke will produce-direct an original screenplay which he wrote tagged "One More Chance." Sam Decker, local franchise holder for the Screen Guild theatres, will be associate producer on the film, which rolls June 15. Berke has solved his studio-space problem by writing a script entirely of exteriors. He will return to RKO, where he is still under contract, upon completion of the outside chore.

Wiles Gets Gauze From Army Surplus

First big shipment of theatrical gauze to hit Hollywood since Pearl Harbor went to Gordon Wiles, associate producer on "Bel Ami." Wiles tried everywhere for the gauze without success until he finally thought of Army Surplus. They had plenty of it which Army had been using for camouflage and mosquito net.

Wanger Inks Brown

Charles D. Brown yesterday signed with Walter Wanger for featured role in "Smash-Up." Film is being shot at Universal.

ILL. GUV KILLS SHOW BIZ TAX

Chicago, June 5. — Governor Green of Illinois has ordered proposed 10 per cent amusement tax withdrawn from bill seeking to finance a soldier's bonus fund. Theatre men here feel victory is important to the entire film industry as passage of bill would have paved the way for enactment of similar tax in other states.

Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick denied Music Corporation of America's motion for judgment notwithstand and motion for a new trial in the anti-trust suit brought by Larry Finley. Arguments have been called, however, for second time next Tuesday on the $55,500 damages awarded to Finley. MCA lawyers brought out point that fees set had no basis and were too speculative.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The Senate form of the draft bill may prevail. The inclusion of 18 and 19 year olds as draftees and the further increase in the pay for enlisted men are in the Senate form of the bill largely because of public reaction and experience with volunteer enlistments since the House measure was passed. The House removed teen-agers from the service call and proposed suspending the draft largely because it thought that was what the country wanted. They judged from the letters that came in from mothers and fathers of the teen-agers. But since then, polls and mail have shown that the country as a whole wants to make certain we maintain our commitments overseas. As a people, we would prefer to have occupation forces composed of volunteers, but we have learned that the service has to be made more attractive, and also that young men do not enter the service voluntarily in any number unless they are threatened with draft. The House, now that it has taken its action favoring the parents, could pass the onus of a teen-age draft on the Senate.

VOTERS PICK SHOW BIZ CANDIDATES IN PRIMARY

Show business didn't do so bad at the primary, according to the latest returns. Will Rogers, Jr., captured the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator and will oppose William F. Knowland in the Fall run-off. Incumbent Helen Gahagan Douglas was renominated by the Democrats in the Fourteenth Congressional district and will oppose Frederick M. Roberts, Republican nominee.

In the 15th Congressional district, Gordon McDonough walked off with both Democratic and GOP nominations, and in the 16th District Harold Harby beat out Emmett Lavery. Screen Writers Guild prexy, for the Democratic nomination and will oppose Donald L. Jackson, Republican. For the State Assembly, 57th district, Frank Scully won the Democratic nomination. Lucile Gleason lost both nominations for Secretary of State to the incumbent, Frank Jordan.

Sally Rand Nitery Closed by Govt.

San Francisco, June 5. — Sally Rand's El Cerrito night club was padlocked today by the Federal government on a $19,000 tax claim after the spot folded last night without paying off the acts, band and other help to the tune of over $3000. Claims against John Carey and Miss Rand will keep the place closed even if government tax demands are satisfied.

RAFTERY TO QUIT NEXT TUESDAY

New York, June 5.—Edward Raftery is relinquishing prexy-ship of United Artists at Board of Directors meeting next Tuesday, whether a successor is found or not, an authoritative source states. UA chief previously had been holding off his resignation until someone was found to take his place.

It is also reported that if no replacement is found by above date UA will be left without an operating head. Under the circumstances, day-to-day operation will fall either to Grad Sears or a committee consisting of representatives of each of the three owners. It is rumored that Mary Pickford would like job, but has been nixed by Charles Chaplin and David O. Selznick, other two owners. Raftery is returning to his law practice with O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery.

NEW BILLS PULL WELL IN CHICAGO'S BALMY WEATHER

Chicago, June 5.—New bills are pulling up to good week's prospects with balmy weather after a holiday weekend that didn't measure up to expectations.

Newcomers include "Hoodlum Saint," with Connee Boswell on stage at the Oriental, sighting $55,000; "Night in Paradise" and "The Truth About Murder" looking for $35,000 at the Palace; and "The Virginian" shaping up to solid $26,000 at the Roosevelt.

Also doing well are "Bad Man's Territory" and "Dressed to Kill" with $12,000 at the Grand in a move-over from the Palace, and the long run "Dragonwyck" and "Saratoga Trunk" with $19,000 and $23,000 respectively at the Apollo and State-Lake.

New Seidelman Post Refutes PRC Merger

New York, June 5.—Sam Seidelman's appointment as foreign manager for PRC is further refutation of rumors of an impending merger between PRC and Pathe-Eagle Lion, according to executives, who stated expansion would not be planned if a merger was anticipated. Lloyd L. Lind, PRC vice prexy, flatly denied reports that Sigmund Neufeld is pulling out from the company to form an independent outfit.

Gracie Fields is considering an offer from Irving Berlin to play the Ethel Merman role in "Annie Get Your Gun" in the London company this fall. She's also pondering a Gabriel Pascal offer of a role in George Bernard Shaw's "Mrs. Warren's Profession" . . . Clark Gable, still firmly saying "no" to Metro's producers, is off on another journey, this time to New York for the Louis-Conn fight. Metro says he's en route by train because "a clause in his contract forbids him to travel by plane." After those slightly dangerous flights over occupied Europe with the Eighth Air Force during the war? . . . Off the lots: Two film industry golf tournaments are coming up, Frank Borzage's Invitational Motion Picture tournament July 12 at the California Country Club, and Paramount Studio Club's tourney next Sunday at the Brentwood golf course. At the House of Murphy, Eddie Sutherland, Walter Donahue and Eddie Parks. At a West Side Tennis Club party, Joan Loring, John Dall, Richard Bare, Nancy Guild, Harry Lewis, Janis Paige, Russell Arms, Marilyn Maxwell, Patricia White and Dick Erdman.

CALL SHEET: ROBERT ST. CLAIRE'S novel "Sheila" will be published Aug. 1 by the Gagnon Co. It was bought from the galley proofs by Cardinal Productions . . . DON BRINN returns to his old post as manager of Wide World Photos after three and one-half years in the Army . . . LUCILLE BALL is preparing for a fall radio show titled "Eileen and I" . . . LILY DACHE will make with the scissors for Ingrid Bergman's millinery in "Arch of Triumph" . . . EDDIE ALBERT'S looking forward to another cruise on his ketch "Cynthia" after "Smash-Up" is filmed . . . JUANITA MILLS FEEDER hits the July issue of Coronet . . . NATALIE SCHAFER contends that real intelligence is like a river—the deeper it is, the less noise it makes . . . LEO GUILD'S book "You Bet Your Life" will hit the book stalls next week. It gives you the odds on everything from the year of your death to your chances of making a killing on the horses . . . ABBOTT AND COSTELLO will make a short on juvenile delinquency, with all profits going to the Lou Costello Jr. Youth Foundation . . . GEORGE SANDERS will dub in the French dialogue for a Continental version of "A Scandal in Paris," according to Arnold Pressburger's present plans . . . HARRY CAREY has decided against two Broadway offers in favor of a long vacation at his ranch near San Diego on completion of "Sea of Grass" . . . CHARLES O'CURRAN, dance director on "Honeymoon," was pressed into service as Shirley Temple's partner when the actor assigned to the chore fell sick.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Barbara Whiting asked for and received her release from her 20th-Fox contract. After "Carnival in Costa Rica" was completed, studio said it wouldn't have another role for her until next year. She said she didn't feel she could remain idle that long—being all of 14 and eager to get on with her career . . . John Wayne did a strip-tease while "The Angel and the Outlaw" was on location that was speedier than it was artistic. A lizzard crawled up his pants leg, and Wayne de-trousered faster than any fireman ever put them on . . . Among the Hollywood A.A.F. veterans attending initiation ceremonies of the Los Angeles squadron of the American Veterans of Aerial Combat tonight will be Robert Taylor, Gene Raymond, Cy Bartlett, Frank Lloyd and Jackie Coogan . . . Gene Kelly, making his first tour of the Metro lot after being discharged from the Navy, stopped on the sound stage where Frank Sinatra was rehearsing for a number in "It Happened in Brooklyn." Sneaking up behind Sinatra, Kelly broke up the rehearsal by shouting, "No, no, you've got to put more 'GRRRRR' into it!" It was the line Kelly threw constantly at Sinatra in "Anchors Aweigh" . . . Sam X. (as in Xasperating) Abarbanel would have you believe that Ann Savage went to see "Oklahoma" and on her way home had a collision with a car with Oklahoma license plates—with a driver named Jed, who's the villain in the show. ——D.D.T.

SELZNICK AGENCY LOSES SUIT OF 2 WRITERS

Damage suit brought against Dwight Mitchell Wiley and William Bowers, writers, by the Myron Selznick Agency was decided yesterday in favor of the defendants.

The decision handed down by Superior Judge Roy V. Rhodes declared the agency was in no position to serve the clients during the days of its attempted reorganization and thereafter, and that the writers were "well within their legal and moral rights" in leaving the agency and signing with Agent Harold Rose, who had handled them as a Selznick subagent.

Action is the third brought by the Selznick interests in attempts to establish rights to management of players and other artists since Selznick's death. The suit asked damages from Mitchell and Bowers and asked the court to enforce the contract the two had signed with the agency.

Wiley is now under contract to Paramount and Bowers to International. They were represented by the law firm of Bodkin, Breslin and Luddy, and the Selznick interests by Roth and Brannen.

Revamped overall policy is being worked out by station KGFJ with assistance of Culbreth Sudler ad agency. She meets with station owner, Ben McGlashen, and Sudler agency head today or tomorrow to discuss changes.

WAR PROFIT END HITS SAN DIEGO SHOW BIZ

San Diego, June 5. — Entertainment business here has taken a nosedive since V-E Day, with high tide of a year ago now hitting slack. There have been few closings in niteries and pleasure spots about town, but the bonifaces have trimmed their sails to go along with the current.

Most niteries have cut their staffs as one means of meeting the coin drop-off. Where there used to be eight or nine waiters or waitresses, places have slashed to three or four. Eight piece orchestras have been skidded to three and four piece combos. Running expenses are being trimmed to meet the decreasing amount of patronage.

Service mobs, always big spenders during war years, are dropping less and less money about. Returnees from overseas or those heading out are not spreading the cash around, most of them concentrating on getting home with a fistful of cash. Once a gold coast, San Diego is still making money, but the bonanza is reaching the finale.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

An old vaudeville booker was doing the talking. "Why," he wanted to know, "aren't programs routined with greater regard for pace change, mood and variation that proved so successful in the big vaude houses?" Old Man Vaude is dead, he was willing to admit, but he added that it wasn't the routining that killed it. Rather, he thought, that was what kept it alive so long. He may have a point there but merchandisers who use the air pitch are not show folks and cutting up the time blocks is not within the province of a booker or any one man.

Another theory of his also gets knocked into a cocked hat fast. What he can't understand is the thinking behind shows of the same type following each other. Sezze: "In the old days anyone who booked that way wouldn't have lasted very long. It would have been folly to have acrobats follow each other, or singers for that matter."

Well, Mr. Booker, it doesn't work that way in radio at all. In fact, what is radio's meat would have been vaude's poison. Take for instance the Tuesday and Sunday comedy blocks on NBC. Anything wrong there? Not when the SRO sign is hung out at every performance. Perhaps it might be better to routine it the vaude way but the die has been cast and the millions at their home sets seem to like it that way. It was more a matter of education by the networks than preference of the dialers but as long as it works as well as it does there's no reason to tamper with it.

Another practice of long standing is also getting the reverse treatment but it's too early to tabulate the results. In the matter of summer replacement an agency wouldn't think of supplanting a comedy with one of that genre, and that goes for other categories, too. But here we're seeing it done. Frank Morgan moved into the Benny spot and Schenley is carrying on with dramatics in the "This Is My Best" segment. If it works out we'll see more of it. The old vaude booker might say that's foolish, too, but it's worth a flyer if for no other reason than to get away from cut and dried formula, which has had a stultifying effect on initiative.

Chain breaks . . . Jan Savitt, Skitch Henderson and the Golden Gate Quartet comprise the musical lineup that will keep the vacancy sign off the "Parky" spot for the summer starting June 16 . . . Frank Sinatra and Dinah Shore have been talking things over and the weather wasn't even mentioned. She also has Young & Rubicam pitching to Gulf, which can't make up its mind what to do with "We the People." And if that doesn't work out there's still another client who has designs on Dinah . . . Benton & Bowles is readying an audition of a dramatic series starring Burgess Meredith for Ass'n of American Railroads . . . Fitch is about ready to move Dick Powell's "Rogue's Gallery" into Cass Daley's NBC niche for the summer and buy another show for the Mutual time. That would mean Powell couldn't return to Mutual in the fall . . . Howard Ketting, v.p. of Ruthrauff & Ryan on the Wrigley account, in town to talk over the new half hour spread with Gene Autry. He will add a 10-minute dramatic spot and return to his pre-war format . . . Bob Hope had all the tickets to last Tuesday's broadcast turned over to p.a. Noel Corbett and he was highly elated at the audience response. Corbett went out into nearby small towns and passed out the ducats. Result: a fresh audience and not the same old crowd that has been seeing the show week in and out. Hope's third book, "So This Is Peace," has been completed and the manuscript now goes to the printer. He has two more on his literary agenda.

There's an audience for any kind of quality show, hang the opposition. So contends Sander Heyman, advertising director of the Cresta Blanca wine outfit, sponsor of "This Is My Best" on CBS. He points with some measure of satisfaction to the over-all rating of "My Best" in its two years of opposing the front-running "Fibber and Molly," and further that it has done a first rate selling job. Hooper averaged off the show at 7.5 and the Nielsen meters showed an even 11. For a program costing $7,500 the sponsor didn't come off too badly on the basis of $1,000 production cost per point. It's no vain boast that in a more advantageous time block the show might have doubled its rating. But Heyman clings to the theory, which has been put to practice, that a program with merit needn't want for a sizeable audience. And he has figures to prove it. As a reward for their perseverance and temerity in challenging "The McGee's," CBS might open up for them a time spot of less strangling design.

Hitch hikes . . . Jeannie McKeon, busiest songbird in town, is supplementing her two CBS sustainers with a five time weekly quarter hour transcription series for United-Rexall. Buddy Cole's group accompanies and Jack Rourke writes and announces . . . "Tip" Corning replaces Frank Graham as announcer on the summer "Electric Hour" . . . Hal Bock east today for television meetings in New York and to set a publicity campaign for the film version of "One Man's Family" . . . Sigmund Romberg will have an orchestra of 54 for the summer Raleigh stanza starting next Tuesday . . . "People Are Funny" will be televised by NBC in New York next week . . . Bill Mauldin, pet cartoonist of the GI's, will be the first guest June 15 on Don Lee-Mutual's new series, "The Author Meets the Critic" . . . Don Ross moved over to the Raymond R. Morgan agency to flack "Queen for a Day" . . . Don Lee will be both fighting and broadcasting at the Legion stadium Friday night . . . We've heard so much about the whopping score of "Annie Get Your Gun" yet the only tune aired on musicals is "They Say It's Wonderful."

United Artists. Filming will begin June 24 at Roach studios with Stone directing.

HINT DOUBLE DUES BEHIND THEATRE GROUPS FEUD

New York, June 5.—Fear of officials of Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association that creation of the American Theatres Association forebodes withdrawal of financial support of MPTOA has motivated the recent open rivalry between the two groups. Antagonism of some MPTOA toppers has been on the upgrade the past few weeks, fed on unofficial indications that affiliated circuits may drop out of the organization rather than pay double dues.

Meeting of the MPTOA board of directors, set for Columbus, Miss., next week, is expected to bring out in the open the desire of one group to merge with ATA. Other group, headed by prexy Ed Kuykendall, will fight for revitalization plus head the battle on ATA in a membership drive.

'Outlaw' Ads Fail New Russell Pic

New York, June 5.—Anticipation that the second Jane Russell picture, "Young Widow," would profit from publicity on "The Outlaw" has not been fulfilled. Hunt Stromberg film for United Artists release has not played the key spots yet, but grosses in other towns are proving only moderate.

'PINCH ME', DEFIES PETRILLO

disc jockeys at WAAF, which AFM prexy called last week to test the validity of the Lea Act.

OVATIONS FROM RANKS

Petrillo, who perhaps is more popular today with rank-and-file musicians than at any previous time, as exemplified by the continuous and noisy ovations accorded him here and the anticipated overwhelming endorsement of his re-election on Friday, said today he has assigned Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor; Henry Friedman of NY, and David Katz, of Chicago, to prepare the defense "and the fight to the finish."

Petrillo told this correspondent, "I've got one object, and that is to show up the Lea bill as unconstitutional." He explained that will be his defense "if a criminal investigation is filed, I am ready to surrender and furnish bond and let the lawyers take up the defense."

From his general tone and manner, Petrillo is obsessed with one definite conviction — that the Lea Act is unconstitutional. On that assumption he is proceeding with the blueprint of the whole pattern of AFM operation for the coming year in the belief he will be found in the clear. Then he will be ready to tackle the networks, the agencies, television and other obstacles which stand in the way of what he terms "giving the low-paid musicians a fair break."

$1,000,000 FUND UP

Nominations for AFM offices for coming year will take place tomorrow, along with convention action on the $1,000,000 royalty fund disbursement. Meanwhile, at today's session, Padway dominated most of the proceedings with a two-hour blast at both the Case and Lea Bills as two of the most vicious pieces of labor legislation yet put into being. However, he predicted that President Truman would veto the Case bill in support of the previous Truman declaration that he didn't want to rob labor of the advantages gained to date.

FORUM

Editor of Daily Variety:

It occurred to me that you might be interested in the fact that this one small fraction of Hollywood's writers is now sitting aboard a jeep carrier in the blue lagoon of Bikini Atoll.

The Photographic Unit for Crossroads is stationed aboard the Saidor and it is composed of the largest number of photographers ever assembled on one ship in the history of the Navy. Our unit, composed of approximately 250 officers and men, will cover all aspects of the A-Bomb tests . . . from shore stations, ships and various planes. Cameras are installed on towers built on various islands of the atoll and will be set off a short time before the bomb drop by a radio impulse sent out from a plane flying between 15 and 25 miles distant from the scene. These installations include various types of still and 16m and 35m motion picture cameras. Fighter planes equipped with built-in cameras will record other aspects, while torpedo bomber planes will carry still and motion picture photographers.

Our unit, composed of combat photographers gathered from all over the Fleet, trained for a month in San Diego, at North Island. We left San Diego on May 5. On our way out to Pear Harbor and from Pearl to Kwajalein and Bikini the planes were sent aloft on numerous practice runs. We made camera strikes on several small islands lying within a 75 mile radius of our course.

Which reminds me that I had better get back to the historical stuff.

Sincerely,
Eric P. Strutt,
Lieut., USNR.

IA IN DEMANDS ON WB, UNIVERSAL FOR DISMISSALS

has 20 and latter 50 such machinists, all of whom were suspended from the AFL some months back.

Studios have not reached a decision on policy to follow in the pressure fight between the two union groups. If IAM members are dismissed it would be a violation of the Wagner Labor Act. Already, six unfair labor practice charges have been filed against producers with the National Labor Relations Board as a result of dismissals last week.

If Central Labor Council demands are not met, studios fear a gradual shutdown in production, which is starting a boom period. Metro, Warners and Universal all have a large number of picture in work and RKO will have 10 going next month. Refusal of AFL members to handle any work coming from or going to the IAM men will result in a gradual stoppage of production, regardless of whether or not the AFL unions actually call a strike over the situation. So far, there have been no incidents in laboratories that would further complicate the situation.

Florida Plans Petrillo Arrest for Sedition

By GEORGE ROSEN

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 6.—The American Federation of Musicians' convention was thrown into turmoil today as the State of Florida revealed it had launched an investigation and may arrest James C. Petrillo tomorrow for violation of an 1882 Florida sedition act.

State's Attorney Chester B. McMullen is basing the action on speech Petrillo made Monday before AFM delegates, in which he threatened to close down all radio stations if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds the Lea Act as constitutional. The

BOGART WINS 1-DAY STRIKE

Humphrey Bogart won his one-day strike at Columbia yesterday. Actor refused to start chore yesterday in "Dead Reckoning" until studio named co-starring femme. Two Legits, Five Niteries Closed as Fire Hazards

Chicago, June 6.—Mayor Edward J. Kelly ordered two Loop legit houses and five neighborhood night clubs closed today for alleged violation of city's fire regulations. Move came hard on the heels of Hotel La Salle fire resulting in the death of 58 persons.

Some 200 performers are affected by the order shuttering the two Loop houses, Shubert and Great Northern. Mike Todd's "Up in Central Park" is at the Shubert, where it did $44,000 last week and "Windy City" raked in $18,000 at the Great Northern and is slated to close Saturday.

Niteries hit by the blackout are Club Alabam, El Mocambo, Liberty Inn, Playhouse and New Cuban Village.

Ban is the third sock handed Chicago show business in the past two months. First came the costly coal strike dimout, followed by the rail stoppage.

Sam Gerson, manager of the two legitimate houses for the Shuberts, and members of the Cafe Owners Association held meetings today with Mayor Kelly in an effort to have the ban lifted.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

NEW headache has developed for ad writers in studios. Some stars through their agents are demanding that their pictures appear in all ads including bill boards. Some of their contracts it is understood stipulate that pictures must be in the upper left hand corner. And the ad boys are having a hard time making their punch lines fit under the handicap.

AS Warner Bros, proceeds with its campaign on the 20th Anniversary of Sound, all sorts of recollections and second guess stories are making the rounds. Jesse L. Lasky, onetime Famous Players Lasky topper, for one, believes he might have been the biggest money-maker in Hollywood without ever producing a picture. Producers in silent picture days, says Lasky, used to buy film rights to a story, but they never acquired the talking or stage rights. In his time as buyer of hundreds of story properties, if he had acquired, by only a few words in the contract, both pictorial and speech rights, he could have made a fortune by just easing his story stranglehold when the clink of appropriate coin was heard when all film companies, with the arrival of the talking screen, had to go over all properties and spend millions to insure legal claim for their usage in the new sound medium.

END ACTORS' BRITISH TAX

Washington, June 6.—Discrimination against actors under the anti-double taxation treaty with Britain was ended today.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and J. Balfour, British Minister attached to the embassy here, signed a supplementary protocol putting entertainers in the same class with all other Americans who work in England for six months or less.

This means that actors will pay income tax to the United States and at the American rate which is lower than the English rate. The original treaty, which the Senate ratified last Saturday night, left actors in a position where they would have to pay income taxes to England at the high British rate, although they would not be subject to taxes in both countries on their British earnings.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

You've got to hand it to that man Peron. He's smart. That does not mean the Colonel is one of the world's most admirable characters. He doesn't hesitate to use peculiar persuasion when he thinks it necessary. And he has been of unusually poor hearing when we demanded ouster of Nazis. Fritz Mandl, the former Austrian munitions king, is one of the men who remain with Peron's ear. But this reopening of diplomatic relations with Russia for the first time since that country was run by the czars is another nice piece of business in building up the Argentine as a world power, and a strong rival of the United States. Peron has been courting the Soviet since before he was elected, with our State Department now recalling that speech he made last December when he said Argentina's economy was being modeled after Russia's. "Britain and the United States may have contributed to winning the war," but Russia, she is the nation that has "obtained control of Europe, and much of Asia." He's been working out trade deals with the Russians so, as the Argentine press says, Argentina can be independent of us. He's been knocking down tariff barriers between neighboring states, getting economic dominance there and over there, ousting the Uruguayan foreign minister who dared to stand before Peron, cutting off Uruguay's wheat as he remained intransigent, and generally building up a great power of the south. (We remain the country that sells most to Argentina. In the first three months of this year, we were first in supplying her imports, and had trebled the amount over last year.)

Two-Fisted Stranger

(Western)

CAST—Stars Charles Starrett. Features Doris Houck, Zeke Clements, Smiley Burnette, Charles Murray, Lane Chandler, Ted Mapes, George Chesebro, Jack Rockwell, Herman Hack, Davison Clark, Maudie Prickett.

REVIEWED at Hitching Post, Hollywood, Calif., June 6, 1946. Running time: 50 MINS.

Latest entry in Charles Starrett "Durango Kid" series will prove surefire to please action-lovin' western fans. Series lately has produced sturdy fare and definitely has become box-office factor of not small proportions among oat operas. This one is as good as any to date.

Producer Colbert Clark provided very satisfactory habiliments and cast, and director Ray Nazarro extracted full value. Pace is as rapid as the pintos can prance and six-guns pump, and the plot never is permitted to intrude upon all-important western ingredient—action. Starrett turns in customary robust, raw-boned protean portrayal of alternately being the masked "Durango Kid" and meek man-about-cowtown.

In this episode star cracks down on gang attempting to bilk Nevadans into pouring purses into phoney diamond mine. Yarn is edged with several slants rather new to westerns, but script didn't fail to provide punch with successions of killings, holdups, chases and fisticuffs. As is his habit, "Durango" spurned the rancher's daughter at the fadeout, so he can have a free hand for action in the next film.

Smiley Burnette's comedy insertions were tempered and touched the target. Wisely each bit was kept from being overlong, frequently a fault in westerns of late. Zeke Clements oatuned for change of pace several times and Doris Houck's demure femme was satisfactory. Lane Chandler turned in usual strong part of the heavy, aided by George Chesebro and Herman Hack. Jack Rockwell's sheriff was standard as was work of Maudie Prickett as frontier widow. Davison Clark was fine as rancher long-suffering at hands of villains.

Technically, Vincent Farrar's camera captured all the elements that most lend interest to chases and fights. Paul Borofsky's editing reflected knowledge of how to shape westerns, while Charles Clague's art was adequate and properly unobtrusive.

Jaffe and Bacon in Enterprise Deal

Negotiations between Sam Jaffe and Enterprise on a package deal for "Glittering Hill" are nearing conclusion point. Understood that Lloyd Bacon, who owns part of the Clyde Murphy yarn which was acquired for around $40,000, will direct the film. Probable star for the film is Paul Muni.

Archainbaud Inked

George Archainbaud has been signed by Producer Louis Rachmil to direct three more of the Hopalong Cassidy series.

Johnston Says He Will Not Be a Yes Man

(Reprinted from Variety Weekly of June 5)

By HERB GOLDEN

Eric Johnston took open cognizance last week of the increasingly frequent reports being heard of dissatisfaction by certain industry toppers with his administration as president of the Motion Picture Association. Johnston freely admitted to Variety that echoes of the reports had reached him, but offered no apologies other than his record to date.

There's no sign that any crisis in the regime of the MPA's $100,000-a-year prexy is anywhere near, but if irritations on both sides continue to grow, a showdown could possibly occur. Likelihood of that happening now, however, is slight in the light of the excellent results Johnston has achieved in the past few weeks in advancing the industry's export trade potential. The settlement with the French government, particularly, has been winning him wide applause.

Hollywood biggies, whose grumblings have been heard all the way to Washington and New York, are mostly miffed by what they consider a lack of attention by Johnston. Explaining that the MPA during the past few months has been practically a five-ring circus, Johnston said it was manifestly impossible for him to be everywhere at once and he had been spending the major part of his time on the important export matters, the results of which he was very proud.

"STRAIGHT BALL PITCHER"

One Hollywood insider explained the irritation at the MPA head last week thus: "Johnston wants to pitch straight balls and the boys want him to pitch curves."

"I don't know how to pitch curves," Johnston declared. "Frankly, there have been plenty of times I've disagreed with industry executives. But if they want a yes-man they don't need me. They can get someone for a couple of hundred dollars a month."

Whatever unhappiness lingers on the Coast after announcement of the foreign agreements last week, Johnston hopes to eliminate during a visit to Hollywood on which he'll leave next Monday. This is the first of regular fortnight jaunts he expects to make once every two months to keep relations with company toppers on the Coast running smoothly and eliminate their complaints of lack of attention.

MPA head admitted that his visits to Hollywood since he took the post last fall had been infrequent. He was on the Coast in October for three weeks, January, for two weeks, and March for two weeks. With other duties, particularly foreign and labor matters taking up his time, he indicated he didn't see how he could have gotten to California any more often.

One of the harder differences of opinion between Johnston and some of the industry execs, it is reported, is over labor relations. MPA prexy is a student of modern labor relations methods, and he feels that "Hollywood" has not been living in the "atomic age" as far as labor relations are concerned. He said he would seek a reexamination of the labor situation when he got to the Coast.

Among the things that Johnston has wanted is a labor relations expert, under his control, as a replacement for Pat Casey, who has operated more or less independently for many years as "studio labor contact." Following out this idea, Johnston went so far as to make a more or less definite commitment to a former officer who handled labor relations for the Navy.

At the same time, it is reported, it was suggested to Casey that in view of his advancing age he accept a generous pension and step out. Casey, it is said, immediately went to the president of one of the majors and informed him he had no intention of quitting. Inasmuch as he was familiar with the inside of so many studio labor matters, he suggested, he thought it would be a poor move for the industry to lose him. The prexy in question agreed, and pressure was put on Johnston to call off his deal with the Navy man. That, of course, has left a sore point.

CITES CASEY'S AGE

Johnston, queried on the interpretation, was noncommittal. He said, however, that he had spoken to Casey concerning the advisability of a younger man (Casey was 71 in November). The vet labor contact, Johnston indicated, was not quite willing—but, on the other hand, not unwilling—to step out.

Johnston, admitting he had interviewed a number of candidates for the labor job, said he was seeking a man in his forties, and definitely no older than in his early fifties, with a wide knowledge of every phase of modern labor relations techniques.

During his Coast stay, Johnston said, he will also call for examination of the types of pictures to be made by Hollywood. He declared he felt the production code perfectly adequate and in need of no changes, but his talks would be along the line of the kind of pictures people want in this country and abroad.

For years prior to Johnston's accession to the MPA presidency, Hollywood royalty got along on an easy basis with Will Hays, in large measure, perhaps, because of Hays' long experience as a professional politician. He had unique ability to please everyone by not hitting too hard at anything. But Johnston is no Hays in that respect. He has very different ideas and equal determination to put them over. If he finds himself stymied too often, nothing is more likely than he'll tell the MPA members to get themselves another boy.

Another point that can't be overlooked in regard to Johnston's future in the industry is that he is potential presidential timber in 1948. One of the things that bounced him high in that respect was his recent swansong speech at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce convention in Atlantic City. Taking the viewpoint of enlightened capitalism against the tory diehardism of the National Association of Manufacturers, Johnston won himself backslapping from a variety of sources.

PREVIEWED at Eagle-Lion studio, Hollywood, Calif., June 6, 1946. Running time: 68 MINS.

This fourth in PRC's musical western series carries all the elements which made past offerings in group money-makers for company. Eddie Dean again is starred and has benefit of a likely young newcomer, David Sharpe, who is cinch to go places, latter featured with Roscoe Ates. Robert Emmett Tansey as producer-director has inserted plenty of exciting action and film as a whole stacks up as very acceptable saddle fare.

Solid story by Frances Kavanaugh gives film sound plot values. Action follows arrival of a Federal judge (Forrest Taylor) at frontier town of Rawhide, which is run by lawless gang headed by Dennis Moore. Sent to bring law and order to community, as well as track down gold deliveries to Government which have been purloined, judge brings with him his own gunman (Sharpe), who with Dean cleans up the town, but not before judge is killed. Plot manages a neat twist at end which adds to suspense.

Action is occasionally halted for interpolation of songs by Dean and Ates, but these pauses are more than compensated for by several well-staged fights. There are usual number of running gun battles and chases.

Dean handles his characterization with his customary smoothness. Topping him in interest, though, is Sharpe, in more colorful role. Ates provides comedy relief, Taylor makes role of judge convincing, and Moore endows leader of the gang with an honest menace. Warner Richmond is standout in heavy role, as man who years before stole the judge's baby son and reared him as his own, Moore. Mary Kenyon and Abigail Adams are on distaff side.

Robert Shackelford's color photography is lovely, soft tints adding to film's attraction. Art direction by Edward C. Jewell is properly atmospheric, and other departments have been satisfactorily handled. Arthur Phelps was in charge of color.

BRIEF SIT DOWNS SLOW WORK AT STUDIOS

Current studio labor row reached the incident stage on several lots yesterday, resulting in temporary halts on a number of features before the cameras. Largest incident took place at Warners where a group of electricians pulled "sit down" work stoppage of more than hour until AFL machinists were employed to service Technicolor cameras being used for "Life With Father." Sitdown spread to other stages on the lot before word came to men from union toppers to return to work.

Friction and slowdowns were noted at other lots, where electricians refused to handle work done by International Association of Machinists Lodge 1185, a group now under suspension from the AFL. One Universal producer needed a truck but couldn't get it, AFL'ers labeling it "hot cargo" because it had been serviced by IAM men.

Industry heads and union officials had a lengthy huddle at regular Beverly Hills labor meeting place over expanding "incidents" but neither side had any comments to make regarding results of huddle.

LABOR EXPLOSIVE SEZ PAT CASEY

New York, June 6.—Studio labor situation is presently the most explosive it has ever been, according to Pat Casey, here from Hollywood on personal business. Industry is now back where it was in March, 1945, when the last strike started, he said. Casey returns to the Coast Tuesday.

'JUST FOR VARIETY'

THE GRAPEVINE: That youthful star who recently broke her contract with a major studio is lamenting her fate. She expected to be snowed under by offers from the majors, but none have put in their bid as yet . . . John Loder is talking over his yen to become a producer with an indie studio's execs . . . Rita Corday is feuding with the RKO front office and may seek to break her contract in an argument over parts given her . . . Dorothy Gish received happy tidings from her doctors—the stomach operation they thought would be necessary, won't be . . . Hugh Daniel, talent head at C. P. MacGregor's waxery, has enshrined a cup and saucer following Clark Gable's appearance at the studios to make a transcription. Cup from which Gable drank coffee has a red-white-and-blue ribbon attached, plus the legend, "Clark Gable drank here" . . . Mary Astor's mother is recovering from a heart attack . . Rouben Mamoulian's book "The Art of God and Monkeys" will be published this fall by Alfred A. Knopf . . . Estelle Taylor left for the bedside of her grandmother in Wilmington, Del., yesterday after the latter was reported in serious condition . . . Bill Eythe takes off for England tomorrow.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Instead of sitting around a stuffy meeting-hall and listening to stuffier committee reports, Motion Picture Relief Fund will hold its 22nd annual meeting July 7 with an open house and garden party at the fund's home. Idea is to get the film industry to see what work is being done with its contributions. An hour's show, with Hollywood's brightest talent participating, is planned; six junior hostesses will be provided by each studio, and Mary Pickford will select a committee of senior hostesses. Arrangements are being made by Henry O'Neill, John Butler and Jim Luntzel under the direction of Jean Hersholt, who is unopposed for election as president of the fund for his 10th term . . . Jack Dawn is faced with one of his toughest makeup jobs at Metro—painting up hundreds of cast members and extras as Maoris for "Green Dolphin Street." Natives are tattooed with designs and pictures, and Dawn must find a paint which won't rub off in scuffles or run because of the heat . . . F. Hugh Herbert has bought a place in Bel Air and this month leaves the Hayworth avenue house where he lived for 20 years . . . Lou Weiner, the exploiteer, thinks he may have been born under a lucky star—lucky for clients anyway, since he presided over the opening of "The Outlaw" in San Francisco and added his talents to the primary victory of Will Rogers, Jr. . . . Off the lots: Virginia Gilmore has returned to town after several stage hits in NY. Alice Faye and Phil Harris pulled in from their NY vacation. Lon McCallister and Nancy Walker caught "Roberta" together. Lew Seiler will take his family on a trailer trip to the Pacific Northwest when he finishes directing "You're for Me."

CALL SHEET: JOHNNY LANG, songwriter whose current work of art is "Sugar in Salt Lake City," has applied for membership in the songpluggers union so he can tout his own tunes . . . GEORGE MONTGOMERY and DINAH SHORE leave by Constellation today for a week's vacation in New York before the start of his role in "The High Window" . . . DIANA LYNN is taking ballet lessons three times a week at the studio . . . BOB PRESTON celebrates his first birthday in five years today with his wife, Catherine Craig, having been out of the country and in the service since 1941 . . . MIKE TODD is getting four-ply attention from the national mags. Coming up are a profile and art layout in New Yorker and Life, respectively. In the July issue of Pageant he gets an eight-page spread tagged "Hamlet and the G-String," plus a story in Stage Pictorial . . . BARRY FITZGERALD has cabled friends here from Ireland that there's no housing shortage in Dublin, plenty of houses, rooms and apartments. A little far for commuters, however, unless the age of miracles gets a lot more miraculous . . . SHIRLEY ROSS is taking lessons from the pro at La Cienega golf course . . . ED GARDNER contends that some authors MUST use their imagination. They have to imagine that people are going to read their books.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: House of Murphy is causing a lot of people to do double-takes in the direction of their radios. Its commercials sound as if they were written by Bugs Bunny. Here's a few samples: "There may be several thousand people in and around Los Angeles who never saved up enough money to eat at the House of Murphy . . . and there may be a few thousand who have difficulty finding it . . remember it's at Fourth and La Cienega, right across the street from EATON'S restaurant." "People who dine at the House of Murphy are very pleased with ceiling prices because they've noticed Mrs. Murphy is wearing a new furcoat." "Be sure you've seen everything before you expose yourself to the shock of looking at your check at the House of Murphy." No, this isn't spring madness. Just a very shrewd adaptation of the theory that the human animal is a gaudy apex of perversity. Or maybe just an ape . . . They are out to re-title C. B. DeMille's "Unconquered" to "Perils of Paulette." Miss Goddard for her role in the frontier epic will undergo the following—1. Tied to a prairie wagon and beaten. 2. Sold on the auction block. 3. Tortured at the stake by Indians. 4. Ride over turbulent waterfalls. 5. Scrub floors in a saloon while the wild wolves of the frontier make indelicate passes . . . We'll close on a nostalgic note. A vaude act being offered here currently is succinctly described as "Pinky the clown, Two Dogs, Three Pigs."——D.D.T.

MAXWELL SUMMER SHOW IN GROOVE WITH WILLSON

Good to the last note. That could easily have been the consensus of America's music-loving millions dialed to last night's premiere broadcast of Meredith Willson's summer series for Maxwell House. It was groovy with gravy, the kind that makes good dunking for the ears. It was a Willson special from the first swing of his baton, with tuneful assistance from Ben Gage and the King Sisters. As a summer replacement for Burns and Allen it will fill the bill admirably and hold a good percentage of the B & A audience.

Music was smartly selected and spaced, with a generous interlarding of breezy persiflage not too intruding on the musical content. Willson and Gage managed the comedy interludes with shaded restraint and without trying to build an innocuous flippancy into a rolling yock.

Willson, an accomplished musician, is fast developing into an expert at timing and punching laugh lines, his naive delivery leavening that flip quality. Gage, by the way, will bear watching, as a virile, booming baritone and a definite threat to the toppers in that category. His voice is clear and vibrant and the lyrics never get lost in the musical shuffle. The King Sisters delivered with their usual competency.

Willson was up and down the podium like a jumping-jack, practically emceeing the entire show and keeping his musical crew on beat. His arrangement of "Surrey With Fringe on Top" was skilled orchestrating. He conducted with a bandaged hand due to a neuritis attack. Willson's own compositions, "Iowa," and "You and I," were used only thematically and to background the food plea. Al Kaye's direction kept the show smoothly paced.

Barrymore Lifted From Atom Role

Removal of Lionel Barrymore from the role of Franklin D. Roosevelt in Metro's atomic bomb picture, "The Beginning or the End," was announced by the studio yesterday. Reason given was that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt did not approve of the casting of Barrymore in the part.

High Shots

MISTINGUETTE WILL PLAY GRANDMA

Mistinguette, who has been delighting music hall patrons in Paris for generations with her shapely stems, has finally consented to do a straight legit role, according to word received here yesterday by Rene Plaissetty, Comoedia theatre head. Kicker is that Mlle. Mistinguette, now seventy plus, will play the role of a grandmother for the first time in her life. Bruce Roberts, local writer, did the play, "Life Begins Tomorrow," and sent it over for approval via Jean Leseyeux, designer for the Earl Carroll shows. Legiter is now in rehearsal at the Theatre de Paris for a September opening, possibly to be brought over here next year.

By RADIE HARRIS

With Cole Porter conspicuous by his absence and Freddie Bartholomew and his bride conspicuous by their presence, "Around the World" had its long anticipated preem at the Adelphi. For whether you are pro or anti Welles, anything he does is bound to have his individual stamp of originality and excitement. Of course, it was inevitable that the wags would be tagging it, "Orson and Johnson" present "Wellesapoppin" and that Mr. W. would use his "ether" to anesthetize the critics who didn't find it fun, and put his voodoo hex on them. The last time he did that, within 24 hours, Percy Hammond died. Now, he is reading the obit notices with bated suspense—along with a lot of other producers!

In spite of the mixed reviews, this musical melange of everything—including the kitchen sink (which Orson now brings out for his curtain speech) is catching on, and looks set for a run—but Orson in casting himself temporarily as "Mr. Fix" has made a grave error. For when he has to quit to report to Columbia, he is robbing his show of the only personality to sustain it. It is his tongue-in-cheek playing—his versatility—his vitality that set the pace and dominates the entire company. If once again he wanted to prove himself the Welles of Onlyness, he's accomplished his purpose. For without him "Around the World" will be the "Welles of Loneliness."

ONCE OVER NIGHTLY: Now that Cary Grant has evinced interest in Joan Castle, Hollywood is suddenly becoming aware that she's an overlooked bet. If negotiations now under way materialize, she won't have any more "time to kill" but will fly to the Coast to test for the second femme lead in this Anatole Litvak RKO melo . . . John Sutro is paging James Hilton to do the screen adaptation of "A Star Danced" and Ida Lupino to play the "reel" Gertrude Lawrence . . . Paul Douglas will take a two-week breather from "Born Yesterday" to reunion with his frau, Virginia Field, and his daughter, "Maggie" whom he hasn't seen since she's learned to coo "Daddy" . . . The reason that Vivien Leigh and Larry Olivier's suite at the St. Regis is always filled with fresh flowers is because Helen Hayes "bouquets" them every day from her Nyack gardens . . . Mel Burke tees off the Lakewood theatre at Skowhegan with Ann Mason and Royal Beal in Somerset Maugham's "Theatre." But he deplores the fact that whereas at one time, he was forced to turn players away at this famous strawhat, now it is almost impossible to get anyone willing to act all summer. Any name attraction wants to guest shot for one or two weeks and their salaries are those of Broadway "hay," not Maine. Shades of the days when Keenan Wynn, K. T. Stevens, Boyd Crawford and Owen Davis, Jr., all repertoried there for $40 per, and a fledgling producer tried out a new play in which the co-author and his wife played the leads. Wonder what ever became of that play, "Life with Father"?

CAPSULE CRITICISM: "The Magnificent Yankee," Louis Calhern, will be The Magnificent Russian, "Boris Morosow" in "Arch of Triumph," providing that the shooting schedule doesn't conflict with his tour of this Emmett Lavery play. In any event, Lou heads for the Coast next week, where the Martin Gabels will give him shelter until he finds his own roof—the optimist! Before his departure, don't be surprised if he takes as his fourth bride, young and lovely Marianne Stewart, even though she won't be able to accompany him west. She'll spend her summer doing a ten-week grind as leading lady at Elitch's Gardens, in Denver.

Speaking of Lou's previous dates at the altar, reminds me of the time he was invited to a party, honoring a w.k. actress and refused to go.

"But why?" his host wanted to know. "Most men are fascinated by her. Don't you like her?"

"I have nothing personal against the lady" was Lou's retort. "It's just that she reminds me of all my wives—she never stops talking!"

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Kitty Carlisle, who used to be Ralph Forbes Big Moment, and is now Moss Hart's beat, chatting cosily with Dora Sayres, the current Mrs. Forbes. The scene: at the opening of "Second Best Bed" in which Ruth Chatterton's two leading men are her husband, Barry Thompson and her ex, Ralph Forbes. Isn't just too, too adult, Mr. Coward!

BROADWAY BULLETIN: Lizabeth Scott had to travel from Hollywood and Helmut Dantine from Vienna for them to meet for the first time at the Hotel Gotham, where they are both guesting at the moment. And now, "Love Thy Neighbor" is a very easy commandment for both of them to follow! . . . John Brahm spent the weekend at Spyros Skouras' Greenhaven estate and spent most of the time raving about a test he made of Nancy Guild, so when he checks back to 20th-Fox for "The High Window," look for an announcement that Nancy will play the femme lead. Co-incidentally enough, the picture that "Brahmie" just finished at RKO is tagged "What Nancy Wanted" . . . San Franciscans will have a chance to see "the incomparable Hildegarde" for the first time when she appears at the Mark Hopkins hotel the end of July. She has thumbed down the Ciro offer, preferring to wait until next year when she and the new Hotel Statler in L.A. can make their debut together . . . All the royalties from Robert Sherwood's memoirs of Harry Hopkins will go to his widow, Louise Macy, because that's the kind of a Right Guy Sherwood is! . . . When Dolly Haas took over Mary Martin's role in "Lute Song" (and she's superb in it) she received the following wire from her eight-month-old daughter: "Good luck, Mother dear. Will see you tomorrow morning for the six o'clock feeding. Love. Nina."

There'll be a pruning of the budgets when the parade of regulars to the mikes starts again in the fall. Least affected will be the writers, especially the yock boys on the comedy shows. Which just about brings to a head an argument of long standing—who is more important to the show, the writers or director? From the contending camps has come scads of oratory but it's the budget breakdown that makes a sucker of an oral argument. Few directors rate a weekly stipend in four figures yet it's commonplace among the better comedy constructors.

Importance to a program must be gauged by the compensating fee, for in the final analysis the payoff is the clincher. Or have the directors another set of standards to go by? With the wave of situation comedy shows due in the fall and the stampede already on to corral the best writing talent, we can look ahead to raiding parties all over the bailiwick. And the guy with the fattest sheaf of lettuce will come off with the biggest haul. Those who haven't their top writers nailed to a contract had better stand guard over their property.

SONGWRITERS SKIP MEETING ON TERMS FOR CONTRACT

No general meeting of Coast members of Songwriters' Protective Association will be held to discuss terms being written into new contract to which publishers will be asked to agree. This became evident yesterday when John Schulman, counsel for SPA, flew back to NY headquarters. Fred Ahlert, member of Council, who accompanied Schulman here 12 days ago, will stay on for few more days before departing.

Reason given for holding no mass gatherings nor open discussions is that SPA Council in New York advised Ahlert and Schulman against it before they came here, on grounds terms and teeth being sewn into pact should remain secret until actual negotiations commence with pubs this autumn. Consequently, Ahlert and Schulman huddled privately with SPA prez Sigmund Romberg on shaping up contract. Also, it is known, consultations were held with top songwriters here, mostly those employed by films, to gather opinions on various stipulations to present pubs. It is understood terms, from songwriters' viewpoint, have been formulated and agreed upon and paper is quite ready for presentation. Before Ahlert and Schulman arrived, series of parleys were held by SPA in east. When the pact finally is signed by reps of pubs and SPA, it will become effective in December and be binding in the music business for next decade.

State's Attorney contends the threat is seditious and if found guilty under Florida law, Petrillo faces potential prison term of 20 years.

American Federation of Labor counsel Joseph A. Padway, here for convention, cried, "witch hunt," when notified of State's action and retorted that AFM prexy's speech was "not only lawful and proper, but is protected by the Constitution of the U.S. and that of the State of Florida." Meanwhile Attorney-General Tom J. Watson, of Florida, pledged McMullen full cooperation in prosecution of Petrillo if information is filed.

Move to invoke this State's ancient Sedition Act reportedly was initiated by St. Petersburg Evening Independent, with State's Attorney's office tonight studying affidavits taken from newspaper's reporters as to what Petrillo actually said on Monday. Principal statement of Petrillo being eyed by State's Attorney was declaration that a change of union policy, not a strike, is all that is needed to end network broadcasting and that such a change would be put into effect "if the Lea bill is ruled constitutional."

The threat to arrest Petrillo exploded shortly after convention, by unanimous vote, re-elected him for another year and with resounding ovation backed a resolution approving "all actions and deeds of our president."

This resolution came in wake of a move by Petrillo to project himself as No. 1 Man in American labor by getting unanimous approval of a resolution calling for merger of membership and joint affiliation of the AFL, CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods.

EAGLE LION CLOSES CINECOLOR DEAL ON 5 PICTURES

Eagle-Lion has closed with Cinecolor for five pictures to be filmed in tints, deal covering one-year period. Initialer will be "Don Juan Murietta," to roll in late September.

First two productions will be photographed in two-color Cinecolor. Following that, Cinecolor expects to be able to provide three-color processing for balance of commitment, but this depends upon final experiments in color lab.

LEGIT OPENING

"Marry Me, Darling," opened at the Comeadia theatre last night and is a perfect example of summer Little Theatre fare. It is a forced farce distributing corn and eggs in equal profusion around the stage. Most of the gags can be seen ten miles away and are not worth the effort when they finally hit. Charles Jordan, who authored the show, did a much better job in his acting than he did in directing or writing. Margaret Harris and Lee Slater, in addition to Jordan, were the only standouts in the cast. The story in itself is about a bashful Marine hero who needs a wife and is afraid to get one. His pursuit of, and by, several women is the alleged basis for comedy. Jack E. Mosser handled the production and dressed the cast more than adequately for the Little Theatre.

Par Adopts Carbro Full Color Process

Taking advantage of the increasing use of color photos by newspapers, Paramount has adopted the carbro full-color photographic process, it was disclosed today. The new process makes it possible to service as many newspapers as necessary with unlimited prints of the same subject. At present 28 newspapers in the United States and Canada are using color prints.

THACKREYS SAY 60 PCT. OF TELE TIME FOR PIX

Washington, June 6.—Testimony wound up here today on the FCC hearings for the four available video channels in Washington, with the final two applicants making their pitch.

Mrs. Dorothy Thackrey, chairman of the board of Station WLIB, New York, testified that her station would use 60 per cent of its time on the air for motion pictures if it gets a video channel. Films would be made for her on strictly commercial basis by West Coast producers.

Spokesmen for the Debbs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc., which operates WEVD, in New York, said they would spend $500,000 on a television outlet if they get a station. They said they would use pix extensively in programming and would operate the station on a non-profit basis.

OBITUARY

MAURICE FLECKLES

Funeral services will be held today for Maurice Fleckles, 74, pioneer motion picture distributor and producer, who died at Cedars of Lebanon Wednesday, following stroke. Fleckles was a native of Chicago and entered the film business at the turn of the century. He managed one of the earliest film exchanges in Chicago for Carl Laemmle, Sr., and married the latter's sister, Anna, in 1906.

Fleckles took over agency for raw stock film distribution for Agfa-Ansco in partnership with John Tippett and also was operator of several motion picture houses in Chicago. He retired from the industry at the age of 65 due to illness. Services will be held at 3 p.m. today at Malinow and Simons mortuary at 818 Venice boulevard with Rabbi Lupo officiating. Interment will take place at Home of Peace cemetery. He is survived by members of the Laemmle family.

Hot Time

Shooting on Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life" was called off yesterday at 2:00 p.m., due to heat in the Valley, where RKO troupe was on location at RKO ranch. Reflection on snow set, plus heavy clothing worn by cast, necessitated halt in production until today.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

LIFE of Mother Cabrini, first American woman to be canonized by Catholic Church, which Eagle-Lion has announced for production, originally was planned by Martin Mooney, when he was a PRC producer. When "Going My Way" came out, Mooney went to Leon Fromkess, then production head of PRC, and suggested story, this time of a woman figure of the church, with latter's subsequent okay. Mooney spent several weeks in Chicago, as result, conferring with high Catholic dignitaries there, including Mother Grace, head of Mother Cabrini Foundation, and secured their seal of approval on proposed picture. Picture, however, was never put in screenplay form, due to fact Mooney shortly thereafter switched from PRC to RKO, with Mooney retaining both copious notes and research made during confabs in Chicago and church's promised cooperation on picture. Eagle-Lion now will have to start from scratch if it goes ahead with picture. Understood announcement of proposed picture was made by Eagle-Lion on assumption that it already had a treatment in its inventory, taken over from PRC.

WITH upping of Abe Olman to top spot in Robbins-Miller-Feist music combine, it's hoped that another thorn that has cost outfit a dozen hits over recent years will be removed. Via its 20th-Fox affiliation R-M-F would normally have first call to publish film scores of 20th composers. But Bregman, Vocco & Conn. have managed to take hits from under nose of 20th-Robbins by virtue of having some of 20th top songwriters under personal contract for all but film rights. Among tunes lost to Robbins are "Got a Gal in Kalamazoo," "Serenade in Blue," "Had Craziest Dream," "You'll Never Know," "My Heart Tells Me," "I'm Making Believe," "More I See You," "I Wish I Knew," "Can't Begin to Tell You," "No Love, No Nothing" and "Do You Love Me." All but latter were toppers. 20th can expect to lose more through BVC contracting David Rose, in addition to having Eddie De Lange, Joe Myro, Mack Gordon, Harry Ruby, Leo Robin and having had late Jimmy Monaco, plus Harry Warren when latter scored for 20th.

ARTIE Shaw's new ork, with which he is concentrating on recordings for Musicraft and spurning bids for dance dates and other appearances, is composed of 39 pieces—among which none is brass. Shaw debuted his collection of woodwinds, reeds and strings last week on the q.t. when he cut two sides of projected eight which will be embraced in Cole Porter medley for album. Clarinetist has injected a lot of lilt into arrangements, and the style newly explored by him has swept him up and out of the dance-hall metier entirely. Most of the crew carefully assembled here by Shaw during past three months were plucked off film lots, and only relative name among them is Dave Barbour, guitarist.

NEW, mobile all-purpose spotlight, designed by Stanley Cortez, cinematographer, is being used for the first time on the set of Walter Wanger's "Smash-Up" at Universal. Gadget was promptly nicknamed the "Peeping Tom" because it can walk, crawl, climb, squat, peek through openings as small as a porthole. Lamp is an ordinary "baby junior" spot, at one end of a light, retractable boom, mounted on a wheeled pedestal. It can follow a player across a set, or through any type of action, thereby saving time and expense of using numerous separate lamps to light a complicated moving shot.

COMET heads will make an extensive survey of Mexico and Arizona locations before deciding on a site for shooting its Cinecolor feature, "Adventures of Don Coyote. Arizona possesses several built-up sets, particularly those used in John Ford's "Clementine." But Mexico is currently eager to lure American production. In addition, Mexican consul is highly pleased with treatment accorded Mexican characters in the script by Bob Williams, and producers Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn have been assured utmost cooperation south of the border if they decide to shoot there.

HOUSE organ of a local theatrical enterprise has been discontinued "because it has served its purpose." Behind that lies story of having been inspired as means of entertaining absentee G.I.'s and keeping them posted on current doings in trade. That, at least, was the ostensible reason. However, sheet also served as only procurement means by which operator got films, flash bulbs and photo paper with which to operate souvenir photo gimmick that was highly profitable—and threatened by war shortages.

They wonder how their grandpops fell

And greet an ancient tragedy with many a hearty roar.
In future years producers will have learned new filming tricks
And folks will laugh at dramas filmed in

42nd-Street Skyscraper Is Planned by Brandts

New York, June 9.—Acquisition of Victory theatre on West 42nd street by William and Harry Brandt theatre interests last week presages deal for new skyscraper hotel project, housing two new theatres to be operated by same interests, who already operate chain of grind houses on same block and elsewhere. By acquiring the Victory property the brandts now hold full title to five adjoining parcels including Selwyn, Apollo, Times Square and Lyric theatres, which would be ample for proposed project. As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Arrangements can be made to continue moving relief ships to starving Europe and Asia even if the national maritime strike takes place. Both Curran and Bridges have said they want to clear such ships. My first information was that there were practical difficulties because it was said, few ships are given over entirely to relief cargoes. This was especially true, it was said, in the goods sent to countries, such as France, which pays for its needed wheat and such items, but needs it none the less desperately. However vessels go out almost every day carrying cargoes of relief goods only. The Frank J. Sprague is loading at Wilmington right now with flour for Yokohama. Coal from the Utah mines is being loaded right now at the coal docks at Long Beach, for France, England and Italy. Wheat is being loaded at Portland. And all these are full relief cargoes . . . On the strike itself, the main argument is over hours. Management insists that the 56-hour week must be continued because of the effect in cost and efficiency of adding more men if the week were reduced to the asked 40. The men come back saying that 44 hours would mean adding only five more men to the usual freighter crew of 38 to 50 men. It's this hour subject that is the key one. The wage issue could probably be settled, as far as the men are concerned, at 18½ cents—the increase now accepted as standard.

One Exciting Week

(Comedy)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate Producer, Donald H. Brown. Director, William Beaudine. Screenplay by Jack Townley and John K. Butler. Original story by Dennis Murray. Photography, John Alton. Special effects, Howard and Theodore Lydecker. Art direction, Frank Hotaling. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr. and George Milo. Musical director, Morton Scott. Orchestral arrangements, Dale Butts. Sound, Victor Appel. Costumes, Adele Palmer. Makeup, Bob Mark. Film editor, William P. Thompson.

CAST—Al Pearce, Pinky Lee, Jerome Cowan, Shemp Howard, Arlene Harris, Mary Treen, Lorraine Krueger, Maury Dexter, Will Wright, Arthur Loft, Chester Clute.

PREVIEWED at RCA Studios, Hollywood, Cal., June 7, 1946. Running time 69 minutes.

"One Exciting Week" won't quite set them rolling in the aisles, but it won't bore anyone, either. Picture is light comedy, punctuated by some swing numbers by the Teen Agers, has a pretty generous supply of laughs and adds up to fair grade entertainment. The Al Pearce name will attract the radio following for box office impetus.

Pearce, Pinky Lee, Jerome Cowan and Shemp Howard carry the comedy load, with Arlene Harris garnering a share of the laughs for herself.

The story is another one of those amnesia yarns, with the gimmick being that Pearce, as a returned war hero, is tricked by three confidence men (Lee, Cowan and Howard) into impersonating himself to collect $10,000 raised for him by his prideful hometown. The amnesia is induced in a rough-and-tumble fight. The con men tell Pearce when he recovers consciousness without memory that he is "public enemy No. 1." He believes this through a week of celebration for the homecoming job, a safe blowing job and a police chase and finally gets knocked back into his own identity in another fight with the con men.

Comedy sequences include a scene between Pearce and Mary Treen, his fiance, whom he fails to recognize when she shows up to marry him.

Cast and script keep the story plausible enough but comedy would be more effective if Director William Beaudine had packed it more rapidly. Action is entirely too slow for effective farce in many of the scenes.

Donald Brown has mounted the picture neatly and given it good production values. Camera work is excellently handled by John Alton.

Krah in RKO Bow

Marc Krah, Broadway thesp, makes his film bow as a featured player in the RKO production, "Riffraff." Milton Gary agented.

E. NEARS DEAL WITH CRAWFORD

Negotiations between Enterprise and Joan Crawford are nearing the inking stage. Understood projected deal calls for actress to star for the Charles Einfeld-David Loew combo in three films on a participation basis. Actress today starts her final picture under her Warner Bros. contract, the Jerry Wald production, "The Secret." Discussions with the Skirball-Manning outfit have failed to materialize. Miss Crawford is expected to take up film chores at Enterprise immediately following completion of her current assignment.

BITTER FIGHT SEEN ON MPTO MERGER PLAN AT MEET

Columbus, June 9.—Whether Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will continue as a national exhibitors association is to be determined here within the next two days by the board of directors, meeting for the first time in four years. It appears certain that proponents of American Theatres Association will press for dissolution of MPTOA and merger with ATA, although southern units favor maintenance of the present organization. All indications point to a bitter fight. Independent elements in MPTOA may switch to Allied Exhibitors if consolidation with ATA is voted.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: Enterprise is planning to send Charles Boyer and Ingrid Bergman with a camera crew to Paris for filming on "Arch of Triumph." Charles Einfeld, David Loew and David Lewis are discussing the matter, with two points in favor of the long-range location trip. It's figured it would be cheaper to send the company to Paris than to construct the sets here, and there would be the added value of authenticity. By plane, the jaunt could be made in two weeks, including the shooting time . . . Groucho Marx spent most of yesterday pondering an unusual offer—the starring role in "Volpone," offered by Lawrence Langner of the Theatre Guild. After 12 hours of brain-wracking, he turned it down. Seems a pity, however, as the famed Groucho lurch and leer should be most effective with brocade, powdered wig and snuffbox attached . . . Lee Mortimer, NY Mirror columnist, just hit town. His boss, Jack Lait, is due at week's end for a month of relaxation here . . . Another grog-dispensary for Vine street. A cocktail lounge is moving into the Taft building space vacated by Al Jarvis . . . About half a thousand people showed up yesterday afternoon for Bill Fawcett's cocktail party-and-dance at the Beverly Hills hotel. Guest of honor was Maxwell Hamilton, new editor of Motion Picture magazine . . . Daily dose of irony: In the midst of resisting eviction notices Danny Kaye was advised by the telephone company he could have a phone any time he wanted . . . Spike Jones broke the house record at the Circle, Indianapolis, last week with a $30,900 take. Old record was Kay Kyser's $29,000 week . . . Martha Scott goes to Las Vegas June 15 to start her divorce action.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Robert Alda has twice fallen from the roof of his barn while attempting to paint it. Now he's been grounded by Warners until completion of "Cloak and Dagger," which ought to be enough excitement for him anyway . . . This is a big month for Irving Pichel. Currently directing "Bella Donna" for International, he gets director credit on four pictures now being shown or scheduled for June showing, "Tomorrow Is Forever," "O.S.S.," "Colonel Effingham's Raid," and "The Bride Wore Boots" . . . Monday Review of Literature: Studio story departments going slightly wild for English authors (such as paying 100G's for Gerald Kersh's "Night and the City," which is peopled by characters who will never pass the censors in their present "realistic" form) ought to take a look at some of Richard Aldington's earlier works, especially "Very Heaven" . . . Dan Mainwaring (Geoffrey Homes) has sold the United Kingdom rights to "Build My Gallows High" to the Australian publishers, Truth and Sportsman. Mystery will get six printings immediately . . . Jorja Curtwright is profiled in the July issue of American Magazine . . . Virginia Welles, Paramount starlet, is decorating the cover of Liberty with a bathing suit pose . . . OFF THE LOTS: Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Wallington, Victor Mature, Patricia Morison, Wynn Rocamore dining at Billingsley's. Geraldine Brooks and Arnold Kunody at Mocambo. Adele Mara and John Dall at Pep's. Anita Ellis tossed a dinner party at Les Comiques after the first Tommy Riggs show. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Peer entertained for the Harry Engels on their 20th wedding anniversary.

CALL SHEET: WILLIAM BOYD Celebrated his birthday and ninth wedding anniversary the other day. Wife is the former Grace Bradley . . . MRS. WAYNE MORRIS checked out of Burbank hospital over the weekend. Physicians report she is making a rapid recovery . . . MICHAEL BROWNE married Judith Evans, who has been touring with Tallulah Bankhead in "Foolish Notion," in Neward, N.J., yesterday . . . LENNIE BREMEN, who played the captain of the guard in the local version of "Volpone," will be married next Sunday to Hila Levy . . . SIGNE HASSO is heading for a 10-day vacation but can't make up her mind between New York and Mexico City . . . RAY MILLAND will build a $75,000 home one block north of the Bevhills hotel as soon as regulations permit . . . FAY MARLOWE happens to be a singer but hasn't warbled a note during the three years she has been under 20th-Fox contract. Now she's auditioning for three summer replacement airers. Her loanout job for Allan Dwan in "Rendezvous with Annie" so impressed the director he's trying to borrow her for "Calendar Girl" . . . BONNIE BLAIR, RKO contractee, is being sought by Alden Nash to play a lead in his Broadway legiter, "The Sainted Sisters."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Harry Tobias received a letter from an Army buddy in the east who had not seen the songwriter since they were both mustered out of service. He asked Tobias if he was the same fellow who had collaborated on a musical produced for the doughfeet. Unusual angle is that the pair hadn't seen or heard from each other since the First World War, a matter of 28 years . . . Army came to the rescue of the "Bride and Groom" program when Maj. Forrest Anderson and Elaine Schlieper rushed in as replacements for a pair who quarreled just before the air wedding was to take place. Actually they were re-married, having been wedded by proxy when he was overseas . . . Disaster over quickie row: Due to bad weather breaks, PRC's "Melody Roundup" went 12 days over its eight-day shooting schedule . . . Margaret Whiting will make personal appearances in New York in connection with 20th's "Centennial Summer" . . . Chester Morris is having himself a time on tour, sawing his wife in half as part of his magic act . . . Daniele Amfitheatrof tacked up a sign on the door of his office at Walt Disney studios, reading: "You pronounce it Ahm-fee-they-ah-trof" . . . Warners sunk their last few bucks into converting to sound pictures, but "Night and Day," which is the 20th anniversary film, is about Cole Porter, who started life with a million or so. How time flies—and multiplies. ——D.D.T.

WINDY CITY HOUSE GETS REPRIEVE ON 'CENTRAL PARK'

Chicago, June 9.—A last-minute reprieve permitted Mike Todd's top-grossing "Up in Central Park" to run at the Shubert theatre. House had been ordered closed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly for alleged violation of fire regulations. Threatened closing scared some Chicagoans away from the box office and the week's take fell to $39,000. Great Northern, the other legit house ordered shuttered, remain closed, forcing "Windy City" to fold Thursday instead of Saturday as originally planned.

With the disastrous La Salle hotel fire, which caused the death of 60 persons, still in the public's mind, the possible closing of over 100 Chi entertainment spots for fire violations was foreseen. The spots were ordered shut a few weeks ago but have remained open, operating without official permits.

Gen. Reynolds New Army Pix Chief

Washington, June 9.—Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds succeeds Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Byron as chief of Army special services division, the War Department disclosed over the weekend. Reynolds will take charge of the Army's recreation program, including the screening of films, stage show presentations, etc. Byron has returned to civilian status.

ASC Book Proceeds

Proceeds from the souvenir book issued in connection with the 25th anniversary banquet of the American Society of Cinematographers at the Cocoanut Grove next Monday night will be used for improvements on the Society's property, including the erection of a projection room and a research laboratory for use of members.

Hal Wallis has done a stint before the lenses for a Paramount promotional film to be screened at the international convention. Five-reeler, designed to bring worldwide reps into closer contact with the studio, is being directed by William Russell.

TOP STARS SKEDDED FOR INT. MARITIME MEET IN SEATTLE

Seattle, June 9.—Plenty of entertainment is promised delegates to the International Maritime conference of the International Labor Organization who are meeting here all this month. Jane Withers and Eddie Miller and his band will be on tap at the Civic Auditorium in a Northwest Progress Exposition which opened yesterday for a week which is sponsored by the towns' three dailies; Bob Hope and company were at Sick's Stadium the night of the 8th, the Andrews Sisters open at the Orpheum for a week's run, and Mae West comes into the Metropolitan for two weeks beginning tomorrow "Come Up, (Ring Twice)".

There'll be strippers, too, for Gypsy Rose Lee heads the re-opening show at the Show Box the 17th, Faith Bacon will be at the Oasis, north end night spot, and Yvette is booked into the Rivoli, town's vaudefilmer.

Legit is also represented with a one-nighter of Eugene Linden's English translation of "Abduction from the Harem" at the Moore, June 13; the University of Washington's Showboat has "Taming of the Shrew," and the Repertory is currently doing "Home of the Brave."

That the town is ripe for road shows is shown by "Harvey" with Joe E. Brown pulling $40,500 in its first 11 days at the Metropolitan. Show's eighteen day run wound up yesterday. Was scaled from $3.75. in "Come Up, (Ring Twice)".

By JACK HELLMAN

We were wondering—just wondering, mind you—whether the grisly tales enacted on some of the mystery shows have any real entertainment value. True, we'll concede, many million mags carrying such macabre goings-on are bought every week but here we get to the point. Those who buy them are adults and not youngsters who must cringe at the gory mayhem committed on the airlanes. Most of the blood-curdlers come at night and if that doesn't start junior's flesh creeping then we're no authority on juvenile behavior. Clubwomen, we know, have campaigned against such sordid doings but the effect has been next to nil. Get a load of "Inner Sanctum" some night and you'll get an idea of how far they go to scare up a nightmare for you. The shivery come-on of the commentator is alone enough to bring on those grimy beasts conjured up by the d.t.'s. Mebbe it's good showmanship and conducive to whopping sales but we're reminded of Arch Oboler's remarks on "Lights Out" when NBC and Biow sought to set it up for Schick Razor. "Don't be a sucker," said Oboler, "it's only for psychopathics and it won't sell your product." That in spite of its high rating coupled with the fact that Oboler owned the rights.

Judy Canova is still bellwether of the Saturday night flock. At a time of the year when most shows would be content to take a fractional drop, the singing comedienne hitched her program to a two-point rise and lords it over the rest with an extra fancy 13.4. And incidentally the answer to "Can You Top This" (12.5), which figure is shared with "Your Hit Parade." Other Coast shows fared as follows: "Academy Award Theatre" 5.3, off .1; Dick Haymes 7.9, up 1.4; "Mayor of the Town" 9, off .9; Ralph Edwards 11, off 2; "Life of Riley" and Tony Martin not available.

Chain breaks . . . Joe Rines has agencies calling for the record of his new idea show, "Hollywood House Party," even before the first rough draft has been run off. It's something novel in Hollywood shows and to our knowledge never been done before . . . Frank Healy and Edith Hophan were stitched in Las Vegas last week . . . Lou Kosloff draws the baton on Frankie's summer standby, "The Sad Sack," kicking off Wednesday . . . Hoagy Carmichael will be the first instrumental guest soloist on the Ford Festival of American Music bowing in June 30. RKO's Ann Jeffreys is the gal singer flanking Alfred Drake and Leigh Harline's music . . . Lyons agency is offering around a revamped version of "Request Performance." Interested, Mr. Wheelock? . . Henry Hoople, who with Fred Fox whips up those funny lines for Judy Canova, will see a Chicago medico about an old back injury . . . Don Ameche gets in today to orient his talents for the new Drene exhibit . . . Comedy spot written by Ben Freedman and John Murray for Lennie Sherman and Anita Ellis will run for 10 minutes on the Hoagy Carmichael program . . . Fletcher Wiley to Chicago for client talks . . . Wilcroot's buy of "Sam Spade" through BBD&O doesn't affect its current Coast entry, "Dark Venture." More coin is being poured into radio as sales mount . . . Bernie Milligan was elected head of Public Relations Ass'n. of So. Cal. . . . Hal Peary and Frank Pittman feted cast and production crew of "Gildersleeve" after season's finale. Jim and Marian Jordan did likewise . . . Frank Sinatra will do a benefit in Chicago en route to the Louis-Conn fight and then double back to start work at Metro in "It Happened in Brooklyn."

It made good conversation and copy for a couple of weeks but it's all frosted over now. Which is by way of saying that all deals for Joan Davis are out the window and she'll finish out her contract with Lever Bros. (Swan). That means Eddie Cantor stays where he is and will have to postpone with debut with Pabst until '47, and Eddie Gardner will still have Bristol-Myers products hawked in the tavern. "Archie" had asked $250,000 as his waiver price on the Wednesday time to have been vacated by Cantor if and when. So now everyone stays where they are unless a fast deal comes along and the time and price are right.

Hitch hikes . . . Metro paid Fred Wakesman an additional $100,000 to forget about staging "The Hucksters." Deal with studio gave him the legit rights after year and a half. That runs the price for the book up to $300,000. Not bad for a novel kidding radio and lookee all the fun he had . . . Bob Hope will audition singers on his p.a. tour in the hope of discovering a successor to Frances Langford. Joe Alvin, in advance of the junket, will record the hopefuls and Hope makes the choice when he gets to town. Winning candidate appears with him and the one adjudged best when tour ends may be the Popsodent chirper next fall . . . That will be Joe Reichman at the 88's on tonight's Contented Hour broadcast . . . "Hap" Felch started his 20th year as KNX engineer. In 1912 when he was a radio "ham" he intercepted the distress signal of the sinking Titanic. He called a downtown sheet but the editor refused to believe him, thereby muffing one of the biggest scoops of all time . . . Mercedes McCambridge is back in radio after a spell of stage work and will be heard tomorrow night on "Inner Sanctum" . . . Frank Hemingway handed another year's contract as newscaster for L.A. Soap . . . Legion of Merit was awarded to Lt. Col. Fred Brisson for "proposing the idea of sending combat radio operating teams to all theatres of operations in order to record and report the actual war in the air and thereby contributing in a great degree both to troop and home front morale" . . . Maestro Irving Miller has changed his billing to Roger Vance . . . Bud Dant taps the beat for four weeks on the Dick Haymes show while Gordon Jenkins takes a breather . . . There was L to pay at a certain network last week for passing a comic's script, which had too many cuties in it.

GROUP FILES TO INC. REPERTORY THEATRE

Harry Zevin, Jack Present, Adrian Awan, Paul Schreibman and John Moss have filed incorporation papers for the Los Angeles Repertory Theatre. Awan is executive producer of the $50,000 corporation, which temporarily has offices at Crossroads of the World. Organization will present first in a series of eight plays Sept. 16 at the Mayan theatre, neither the play nor talent for the Repertory Theatre has been set as yet. Overall plan of operation calls for the LART to have a season of 32 weeks, with both old and new plays during that time. Each play will be presented for four weeks, with star film names and a stock company in support. Toppers of LART are dickering with several film personalities now for roles during the 1946-47 slate.

Casino Gardens Eyed For 'Fabulous Dorseys'

Charles R. Rogers is scanning Casino Gardens, at Santa Monica, with view to leasing it for scenes in his forthcoming UA production, "The Fabulous Dorseys." If deal goes through, ballroom will be revamped to represent Glen Island, L. I., where Dorseys played in their early days.

20th Star Chores For Darnell, Guild

Series of starring assignments were made by 20th-Fox over the weekend. Stars set include Linda Darnell, "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now;" Richard Greene, "No Wedding Ring," and Nancy Guild, "The High Window."

Robbins, Elliott Stint

Jerry Fairbanks signed Gale Robbins and Scott Elliott for juvenile leads in his untitled Bob Burns starrer, which starts lensing next week.

Biberman Signed

Abner Biberman signed as test director and coach over the weekend by Universal. He also will work with Robert McIntyre, casting director, in the developing of new player talent.

MONDAY EVENINGS — COAST-TO-COAST COLUMBIA NETWORK

1ST SHOW BIZ VET SUIT LOOMS IN PIED PIPER ROW

First known job refusal to returning show biz ex G.I. is case of John Huddleston, original member of Pied Pipers. Refused his former position within group, now occupied by Hal Hopper, Huddleston has put matter of his 25 percent interest in group in hands of his attorney, and has been promised assistance of government.

Out of the Army since late February, Huddleston claims he got run around from Chuck Lowry, Clark Yocum and Hopper, who are now singing with June Hutton. After two months of double talk, he avers, he was given the brush and told he wouldn't be taken back in. Group then offered him $1,000, plus $100 weekly for a year. Assertedly having originated and named group, Huddleston considers interest to approximate $15,000. Lawyer is working on offer before taking matter to courts.

Leslie Free to Work Pending Appeal

Joan Leslie is free today to work where she pleases pending Warner Bros. appeal from a court decision voiding her $1500 a week contract. Superior Judge Alfred E. Paonessa denied a studio motion for a temporary injunction forbidding the actress to work elsewhere until the appeal is decided.

Enterprise to Star Stanwyck In "Sarah"

Barbara Stanwyck's second starring chore for Enterprise will be "The Love Story of Sarah Q." Film is based on an original story by Christopher Isherwood.

AT LIBERTY

Dick Diamond, after three years in the Army, returns as production aide to Jerry Fairbanks.

Deal in the Sun

Al Jolson seems to stay put in California. Had intended going to New York last week, until they told him it had been raining there for ten days. So Al got hold of Guy Price and said he would like to buy a home. He did and it set him back around $150,000 fully furnished. It's located at Coldwater Canyon and Mulholland Drive. Al also bought the Jay Paley home at Palm Springs last winter, so traveling for him at present is remote.

also will reshuffle percentage requests on the 1946-47 product.

Desire not to be tied on pacts for new product was behind the wires that went to the entire sales force last Thursday advising it not to make further deals. Another meeting of home office execs, district and branch managers is slated for Chicago June 17 to explain details. Sales officials will confab with Harry Cohn and other executives in the interim. Cohn is due in Tuesday for trial of Columbia's suit against Norman Krasna over asserted plagiarism on "Dear Ruth."

various studio unions. It is understood Johnston will try to bring about a reconciliation between union demands and studio offers on increases so negotiations can be speeded up.

Production code will be another matter to get Johnston's attention while here. Joseph I. Breen, code administrator, also will point up the need of code enforcement in a speech to be made at the same dinner.

INJUNCTION RULE NEAR IN CHICAGO FILM BID CASE

Chicago, June 9.—Decision of the injunction sought against the film releasing system used here is being awaited after matter was taken under advisement by Federal Judge Michael Igoe Friday. Jackson Park Corp., filed for the injunction last week.

System, according to the complaint, prevents the Jackson Park theatre from bidding on an equal basis with the large circuits. Brief, asking for the injunction, further asks that price fixing be enjoined and that the use of double features under the system be eliminated. It also asks that the Jackson Park theatre be given playing dates ahead of Balaban & Katz' Maryland theatre and a day-date run with Warners Jeffery theatre.

That admission prices be fixed by competition rather than by combination and agreement was also asked, as was the right for earlier showing than that caused by artificial restrictions of the Loop and successive-run setup of the preset system of releases. Suit asks the for the exhibitor to negotiate for earlier runs without being faced by a distributor combination designed to deny this right in order to protect their own theatres from competition.

with "persecuting" him and declared that newspapers and radio represented "the vested interests of Wall Street."

Proposals for a high powered public relations campaign were rejected after Petrillo commented "it would be like throwing money down the drain in view of the antagonism of the American press." He recalled that the AFM spent $1,750,000 on its campaign against canned music on the screen, to no avail. Also rejected was the proposal for a home for sick and impoverished musicians when delegates pointed out "there are too many of them, and the treasury would be exhausted in a year or two."

Discussion on how to dispose of the $1,000,000 royalty fund brought 475 different proposals, and the convention decided that the union's executive board will determine the split-up some time before Jan. 1.

First Run Biz Off But 'O.S.S.' Takes $53,000

Majority of other houses range from fair to average in contributing to the approximately $285,000 overall gross in sight on the frame. HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

IMPORTANCE with which Hollywood producers view foreign market is seen in Hal Wallis dispatching two of his stars overseas to make personal appearances in conjunction with foreign showings of two of his latest pictures. Lizabeth Scott last night left New York via Clipper for London, to be present at special charity preem of "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" at Carlton theatre, and otherwise plug picture through BBC broadcasts and newspaper interviews. Ann Richards today leaves U.S. for Melbourne, Australia, traveling as first passenger on Australian National Airways flight, and will do similar duty for "The Searching Wind." Wallis a month ago spent number of weeks in Europe making contacts for his product.

PRECEDENT will be set, one way or another, when American Federation of Musicians' exec council hands down decision on whether Harold Oxley, band and act agent, will be given license to operate own record company, which he has proposed to start under label of Bongo. Oxley, who has offices both here and in NY, made a formal application to AFM after having elicited an advance oral opinion from one of union toppers in NY that probably AFM would nix an agent a license to operate both businesses. Last year American Federation of Radio Artists would not let Ben Pollack keep franchise to represent radio performers when he opened Jewel Records. Oxley, however, has no ether performers. Under his banner are personnel belonging either to a musicians' local or to American Guild of Variety Artists. There is nothing in bylaws of latter union to prohibit agent from operating both an agency and plattery.

UNIT pre-fabrication may prove to be the answer to the $15,000 ceiling on set construction. Initial use of the innovation on Loew-Lewin's "Bel Ami" has successfully resulted in some lavish sets. Under ordinary construction methods some of the sets would cost several times the current ceiling, but now are accomplished well within government restrictions. Idea was worked out by Gordon Wiles, associate producer and production designer on the film. Actual building of the units was well underway long before script requirements were known. All sets in the film are now made of small, wild units, standardized in size so that they may be shifted and interchanged from set to set. Repainting and redecorating allows them to be used for a variety of purposes, and smallness of the individual units permits more fluidity and imagination in set design.

ONLY radio comic invited to Vancouver's Diamond Jubilee Pageant July 1 to 13 is Eddie Cantor. Irony of it is that several months ago Cantor's radio show was banned in Canada for reasons never fully explained. Surprised at the invitation to play 12 nights in the pageant, Cantor was told by the promotional head of the project that he was the favorite comedian with Canadians and that when his broadcast was kept out of the Dominion the dialers tuned in stations across the border. This was borne out by a survey showing that his popularity had not been affected by the ban. Likely that in view of Cantor's acceptance of the Vancouver bid and his willingness to help make the pageant a success the ban will be lifted next season.

FOR first time since the war commenced there is a plenteous supply of shellac for record and transcription manufacture in the U.S., but almost all of it is being offered at prices well above OPA ceiling of 35½c per pound. Average figure quoted is 45c, with importers explaning that they cannot offer it cheaper and make a profit. Talk is that resumption of open trading in the stuff in London kited the costs. Shellac, which comes from India, is basically controlled in large measure by British trading companies. Currently the price in Calcutta is 12c per pound, but it is almost impossible to buy directly.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The Mihailovic trial has implicated the United States along with the first man who headed a guerrilla force against the Nazis. The indictment read yesterday says that the head of the American military mission in Yugoslavia went with Mihailovic when he conferred with the Germans. That sounds bad as it stands. And it may have been intended that way. One of the reasons we have been anxious to have our American officers testify is to clear our name and state the facts. The meetings did take place. But Mihailovic did not want to accept the German invitation for them. We urged him. And at the meeting, Mihailovic found that the Germans—in September, 1944—wanted to offer surrender to the Allies, excluding Russia. We refused that, insisted on unconditional surrender to all the Allies. That is a story the Yugoslavs will not get, and that people of many other countries, who do not get all the facts, will not get. The effect on our prestige will not be good.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village Theatre, Westwood Village, Cal., June 5, 1946. Running time: 93 MINS.

"Three Wise Fools" is one for the whimsy and fantasy fans. The film is tailored expressly to feature Margaret O'Brien and that talented moppet carries an acting load that would tax many a more mature star. The story carries strong appeal for the women and children and with such marquee names as Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone and Edward Arnold to supplement the O'Brien it looks like a natural box office bid for the family trade.

The O'Brien child is inclined to excessive acting in spots, but deserves high credit for making herself convincing as a staunch believer in the "little people" and as a regenerating influence in the lives of three crusty, selfish and none too scrupulous old men.

Barrymore, Stone and Arnold give characteristically smooth and finished performances as the three old men and Thomas Mitchell, as Miss O'Brien's Irish manservant (with a weakness for the bottle) successfully meets the demands of the chief comedy role.

Others of the cast earning special mention are Jane Darwell, Ray Collins, Charles Dingle and Harry Davenport.

The picture opens with Davenport, as the Ancient of the fairies living in an old oak tree on the Fairchild place, telling the story of the elopement of Rena Fairchild (Cyd Charisse) and "The O'Monahan" (Warner Anderson) to a group of skeptical young fairies who don't believe in humans. It cuts from there to the elopement scene in which Miss Charisse dismisses three suitors who seek to "save" her from The O'Monahan. And The O'Monahan bestows a somewhat left-handed blessing on the trio as he rides away with his sweetheart.

The three become the "three wise fools" of the story—a famous doctor, a famous judge and a multimillionaire. And one day little Miss O'Brien, daughter of the eloping couple, appears at their home, consigned to their care by her dying mother and accompanied by her man-servant.

They at first turn her away, but think better of it when they discover they have need of the Fairchild place, to which she is heir. Their plans for the place call for removal of the fairy tree and most of the plot suspense is concerned with their machinations to get her consent to destroy the tree. Their final trick is to hire a troupe of midgets to play fairies and announce that they are leaving the tree for a new home. When the child discovers this deception she loses faith in both fairies and humans and runs away from her trio of scheming guardians. Tearfully "renounncing the world" she begs admission to a convent.

The sister superior (Jane Darwell) not only comforts her but makes a point of looking up the three guardians and giving them a piece of her mind. They have already discovered, however, that the child means more to them than anything else, make a last minute dramatic move to save her tree and manage to restore her faith in fairies and themselves.

Everything ends happily with the fairies believing in humans and the humans in fairies.

The yarn is of the type that teeters dangerously on the hairline between the sublime and ridiculous, but clever scripting by John McDermott and James O'Hanlon and Edward Buzzell's direction keep it from toppling over at the danger points and make it generally plausible.

Picture has been nicely mounted and given good production values by Producer William H. Wright. Photography by Harold Rosson is used to good advantage in developing the fantasy.

Film Shutdowns Caused By Influenza Attacks

Illness of Hedy Lamarr will hold up shooting on Hunt Stromberg's "Dishonored Lady" until at least tomorrow, with possibility star may not be able to report back until later in week. Filming on picture was called off last Friday noon, when actress had to go home with serious case of flu.

Flu bug has hit widely during past two weeks, causing shutdowns of anywhere from one day to two weeks. Albert Lewin resumed direction of "Bel Ami," Loew-Lewin production, last Thursday, after hospitalization had kept him away for two weeks, and Merle Oberon returned yesterday to International's "Bella Donna," following two-day absence which halted company.

A single day was lost early last week when sickness forced George Cukor off direction of Metro's "Sacred and Profane." Victor Saville has been subbing for him ever since, with Cukor still incapacitated. This picture earlier had lost nearly a week on location at Monterey, when Greer Garson, its star, was injured in water. S. Sylvan Simon, directing "Thrill of Brazil" for Columbia, had to stop work early one day last week, too, but was able to resume following morning.

Union Control of Actors In Tele Tops AFRA H'd Agenda

New York, June 10.—Television—and union control of actors in it—will be prime matter for discussion and action at forthcoming convention of American Federation of Radio Artists at Roosevelt hotel, Hollywood, Aug. 23 to 25. With Hollywood looming as nation's video center, both in special video films and live programming, AFRA's first western conclave is deemed proper locale for gunning dormant actor-in-television problem.

Matter has been before Associated Actors and Artistes of America for long time. Assignment of jurisdiction is reportedly in its hands, and AFRA, Screen Actors Guild, Actors Equity and American Guild of Variety Artists have all made pitches for it. There has been no indication to date as to which, if any, would get rule. Attitude has been much like American Federation of Musicians which virtually ignores existence of medium.

But with television licensing being imminent and video activity generally stimulated lately, AFRA, which lays claim through already being established in video's sister industry, will take bull by horns and push for action on problem.

Equity pitch is on basis of membership trained to scriptless acting, a prerequisite of video. Its weight is in east. SAG may be salved with jurisdiction over special video films, and Hollywood is its strength. Variety artists, on other hand, expect to be in considerable demand due to nature of talents and adaptability already demonstrated in radio. Others see Four A's retaining overall jurisdiction that permits holders of any actor union card to work in television. But AFRA, like others, is intent on cornering control and hopes to come up with a sock plea.

Faithful In My Fashion

(Comedy-Drama)

METRO RELEASE. Producer - original screenplay, Lionel Houser. Director, Sidney Salkow. Photography, Charles Salerno. Editor, Irvine Warburton. Musical score, Nathaniel Shilkret. Sound, Douglas Shearer. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Harry McAfee. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis, Mac Alper. Costumes, Irene, Howard Shoup.

CAST — Features Donna Reed, Tom Drake, Edward Everett Horton, Spring Byington, Harry Davenport. Supporting players, Sig Ruman, William "Bill" Phillips, Margaret Hamilton, Hobart Cavanaugh, Warner Anderson, Connie Gilchrist, Fred Essler, Wilson Wood, Jack Overman.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village Theatre, Westwood, Calif., June 6, 1946. Running time: 82 MINS.

"Faithful in My Fashion" is a pleasant enough little comedy-drama with an up-to-date basic idea which should appeal to audiences. Film could benefit by considerable editing. elimination of one whole drinking sequence would make proceedings more closely knit, and there are times when action goes overboard through direction, but as a whole picture provides light entertainment.

Plot revolves around return of Tom Drake, a GI, to the girl he's dreamed about, Donna Reed, for four years, intending to marry her immediately and settle back in his old job in the shoe department of a metropolitan department store. But, it seems, femme has other ideas. GI merely took it for granted she is in love with him, after they had gone out together number of times before he went away—and she was afraid of hurting him by returning his ring, when he sent it to her from camp.

There's an amusing quality about situation of a small group in store's "shoes," headed by Edward Everett Horton, banding together in effort to persuade gal to play along with GI through his two-week leave, as though she actually is in love with him. This consists, too, in not letting lad know she no longer is a stock girl, but buyer, in the department, and plan also has her moving back to her old boarding house from her comfortable new quarters. Gal also thinks she's in love with store exec, which further complicates matters.

Two toppers turn in good performances, but Drake's character is over-stressed in sentimentality. Miss Reed's portrayal, on other hand, is a gem in comedy indecision. Horton assumes his expected fluttery impersonation, playing this to the hilt, Spring Byington is excellent as his accomplice in trying to bring kids together and Harry Davenport scores solidly as Drake's understanding great-grandfather. Wilson Wood is standout in brief clerk role and Warner Anderson has few comedy moments as "other man."

Lionel Houser, as producer of his own original screenplay, handles assignment satisfactorily, script carrying out germ of the idea. Sidney Salkow's direction, while rough at times, savors of good taste, and musical score by Nathaniel Shilkret plays up comedy mood of different sequences. Other technical credits are standard.

THE GRAPEVINE: Raymond Massey was offered the F.D.R. role in Metro's "The Beginning or the End" but turned it down yesterday morning, in a conference with Sam Marx, because he felt he wasn't the type. Incidentally, why doesn't the Metro casting office look up Capt. Jack Young, who portrayed President Roosevelt in Warners' "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and who is an exact visual and vocal double of the late President? Page 542 in the 1945 Academy Players directory . . . Ann Sheridan is heading for New Milford, Conn., following her New York and Cuba visits . . . Ann Doran returned to town from her motor trip through the southwest, during which she survived a case of the hives and a Kansas tornado . . . George Marshall leaves this week for a three-week vacation in Tucson to rest up from directing "Perils of Pauline" . . . Jerry Wald is being profiled by Life . . . The Brackett- Wilder combo is trying to get Irwin Shaw to write the screenplay for "An American Tragedy" . . . Three studio bigshots are buying into the airline and will soon join its board of directors . . . OFF THE LOTS: Martha Vickers and Fred de Cordova at Romanoff's. Don McGuire and Juanita Starke, Mercedes Marlowe and John Carroll, at Henri's . . . Radie Harris, the renowned Broadway runaround, will become a fugitive from the Broadway heat June 21 and come out here to do her column for Daily Variety.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Western tradition is taking a beating in Bill Boyd's next Hopalong Cassidy feature, "Fool's Gold." Picture, which starts next Monday, won't have: 1—a sheriff; 2—a western street; 3—a sheriff, in the entire footage. Now if they can make one without a horse or cowboy! . . . Lieut. Gen. Now he's sending light bulbs around, with picture's title painted on them, plus a tag reading: "Just so you won't be in the dark about that picture, we are sending you what we think is an illuminating fact" . . . Louella Parsons was taken home from the hospital Sunday, 24 hours ahead of schedule. While she was being carried into the house on a stretcher, she insisted on being carried through every room. "I was so homesick," she explained . . . Red Skelton has finally ended his harpooning of Harry Beaumont, director on "Carnation Charlie," the comic's last picture. For weeks Skelton has tagged every obnoxious character in his radio shows "Mr. Beaumont," until the latter pleaded with Skelton on the grounds that "even my children are beginning to sneer at me." This week Beaumont will be portrayed as a kindly neighbor.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Those London (England) newspapers spend pound notes like they were cigar store coupons on trans-ocean phone calls. Yesterday the London Times called Jimmy Dunn on the set of "That Brennan Girl" just to check on a report he had signed with J. Arthur Rank for a British film. Dunn told the Times it was news to him . . . Mikhail Rasumny takes exception, if no umbrage, to our recent description of him as a "Russian Barry Fitzgerald," and inquires (with justice) "Why not call Fitzgerald the Irish Mikhail Rasumny?" . . . Dept. of Confusion: Working on the "No Trespassing" set are five girls named Allene, Arlene, Eileen, Elaine and Valeene—Allene Roberts, leading lady; Arlene Aston, body makeup; Eileen Saper, wardrobe; Elaine Ramsey, hairdresser, and Valeene Calkins, stand-in for Miss Roberts. Director Delmer Daves has about given up using first names . . . Law and Order note: Although the entire population of Jasper, Alberta—1500 souls—turned out to receive Paramount's "Emperor Waltz" company, only one Mountie was needed to keep order and escort the stars to their cars. Quite a contrast to the hysteria prevailing this side of the International boundary . . . Martin Field says he'd like to contribute a story about the jail turnkey's daughter, but it's slightly off-color.——D.D.T.

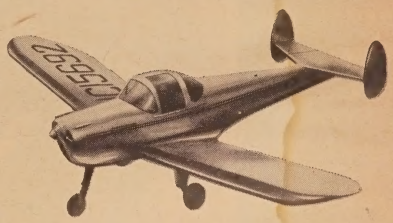
ERCOUPE

THE SAFEST AIRPLANE IN THE WORLD TODAY



It's the simplest and easiest airplane in the world to fly.

You can actually learn to fly the Ercoupe in less time than it took you to learn to drive a car. And you can get a Federal license to fly the Ercoupe with a third less instruction time than is required to fly any other type of plane.

It is the safest light plane in the air today. You can't spin it. You can't stall it. Ercoupe tricycle landing gear prevents ground loops and nose-overs. It is "certified spin-proof" by the Civil Aeronautics Administration (U. S. Government). For no other plane now being delivered can these claims be made.

Visit Grand Central Airport in Glendale and let us explain and demonstrate the simplicity of Ercoupe's coordinated controls, that do away with spinning and stalling.

Feel for yourself how easy the Ercoupe handles, how simple it is to fly and land.

For the sportsman, professional, executive, farmer or family man—Take off in an Ercoupe, just the plane for your personal use. It is safe, economical and you can make a 500 mile trip in an afternoon.

"To emphasize the importance of show business in radio advertising," says an announcement from Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, "the radio department is being incorporated as a separate entity under the name of Feature Productions, Inc." Since this looks like a new departure in radio-agency relations, let's get on with the announcement: "The people in this operation will be the present radio department and additional creative show talent. Present operations maintained by the agency in Hollywood and Chicago will be continued in the same quarters but will be turned over to this new corporation. H. M. Dancer actively heads up this new corporation with the major portion of his time to be devoted to the radio, motion picture and television activities of this branch of the agency's operation.

"Advantages of separating the radio and show activities from the business-advertising side of the agency operation are felt to lie in a clean-cut compartmental operation of the show business to be run as show business, while the brand-building activities of the agency concentrate on the money mechanics and the creative selling developments. It is planned that Feature Productions, Inc., will be in operation in 30 days."

Whether this partitioning of the company's activities is innovational among commission houses or an enlargement on what has been done in the Hollywood agencies can be judged only after the plan has been in operation for a few months.

PLATTERIES SPEED SESSIONS AS WAGE DEMANDS LOOM

After month-long lull, almost all pop-platteries on Coast this week have begun feverish sessions of recording orks and sundry musical combos, in anticipation of American Federal of Musicians tilting waxing pay-scales in October, when present pact ends. The disceries will spend summer stocking up on platters which they will stash on shelves for release next winter.

AFM prexy James C. Petrillo has not announced what terms he will seek, but several times recently he intimated that union will demand more money. It is known that matter was brought up during private talks among AFM toppers during annual convention at St. Petersburg, Fla., last week, and one report sifting here over weekend rumored that Petrillo will ask $30 per musician per side for platter-making; another report claimed he would seek double present scale, which is $30 for not more than four sides, providing they are completed within three hours.

MPTOA MERGER BLOCKED

for action tomorrow but any chance of ATA affiliation appears remote.

Bob Wilby of Wilby-Kincey Circuit, Atlanta, was the sole champion of ATA but his remarks were made as an observer and not as an MPTOA representative. Because of ATA's policy of steering clear of trade practices, consensus was that any organization that side-tracked that all-important issue was not doing right by its members. There also was the accusation that ATA was producer-controlled through membership of affiliated theatres.

DOUBTS INDIE MAJORITY

Kuykendall, in his address to the directors, questioned the preponderance of independent exhibitors in ATA and pointed out that ATA prexy Si Fabian also was in opposition to Paramount in other situations.

Wilby said that affiliated theatres fought high percentage terms as actively as the indies and that the affiliated circuits were the first to combat them. He said his circuit had refused to play several top pictures, indicating that independents and circuits have the same problem.

Wilby took a pot shot at commercial advertising finding its way into features and shorts. He recommended that efforts be made to curb the practice on the part of the producers. Products such as Coca Cola, Yellow Cabs, Willys Jeeps and others get into pictures through the influence of representatives in Hollywood. He said he cuts out all such footage in films playing his theatres and that if others would do the same thing the practice may be halted.

ACTION DUE TODAY

Overall discussions of general problems will be turned into positive action today when reports of findings, based on the round-table confabs, go to the executive committee.

Because of his health, which is the reason for meetings being held here, Kuykendall will not be a candidate for re-election as president, a post he has held since 1933. The executive committee today failed to reach an agreement on a nominee for the office. R. R. Biechele of Kansas City looks like a live prospect. Kuykendall may be named honorary president and be given special duties on salary. A paid executive director and general counsel also may be elected.

Approximately 30 representatives are here, including H. A. Cole, Allied leader, who is sitting in as an observer of the MPTOA board meeting.

SHELL OIL, KRUPA ORK IN DEAL FOR ONE NITER TOURS

Johnny Gluskin, personal manager of Gene Krupa band, has received an initial, tentative okay from Shell Oil Co., on plan whereby the gasoline firm will underwrite 45-day one-niter tours by ten name orks next winter. Proposal is that Shell dealers give away dance admission ticket with each purchase of ten gallons of gas and Shell will rent hall and pay for the music.

Events will be held in several hundred cities across country, larger keys getting a whole series of dances, with different band booked in for each session. If deal jells, Gluskin will handle selection of ten orks to be used and the spotting of them. Cost to Shell for music alone will approximate $650,000.

By RADIE HARRIS

Mary Martin again proved her deserved popularity when she stayed after her closing night performance in "Lute Song" to give Dolly Haas any helpful advice she wanted, and gifted her with two dozen roses for her opening. What a striking contrast to Eddie Dowling, who refused to rehearse even once with Margaret Wycherly, when she took over Laurette Taylor's role in "The Glass Menagerie," and instead of giving her any cooperation on stage, is hogging every scene—something he could never get away with in the Taylor presence! . . . Lucille Ball is maad to stay in N.Y., not only to be near her heart's "Desi"-re, but to play the femme lead in Katharine Albert and Dale Eunson's "Loco." That's what she wants. What Metro wants is something else again. Which explains why she must return to the Coast to check in at RKO on loan-out for the comedy lead in "Time to Kill" . . . Alexander Kirkland, long absent from the Hollywood and Broadway scenes, while he's been overseas for the USO, has been added to the impressive cast line-up of "Rue de Madeleine" . . . When Paul Douglas takes his fortnight's holiday from "Born Yesterday," his part will be taken over by Larry Fletcher, who will assume it as his own for the Chi company along with Eleanor Lynn, who will pinch-hit for Judy Holliday during her holiday breather . . . The reason that Eddie Albert came back for a second o.o. of "Are You with It?" is because he'll recreate the Johnny Downs role in the Ben Bogeaus screen version. Incidentally, Dick Kollmar assembled the entire company on stage of the Shubert last night to deny the report that he had bowed out as co-producer with Jimmy Gardner, now that the grosses have fallen off. He assured everyone that he was still "with it"—which is more than Dolores Grey could have assured him. She's leaving the cast this week for another nose plastic—the better to be photographed with for a screen test, my dear!

SECOND GENERATION: Following in the footsteps of a famous parent is a tough job for any offspring. If they fail, the comparisons are odious. If they succeed, they are suspected of getting there on "pull." Which explains why Gertrude Lawrence's daughter has always been afraid to emulate her famous mother. Now, however, she has suddenly decided to ignore her misgivings, and completely on her own, using the name Pamela Gordon, she has landed herself a job in summer stock, teeing off with "Ten Little Indians" in Cambridge. The one straw-hat she has avoided contacting is the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, managed by her step-father, Richard Aldrich. She wants to prove herself this season, so that next summer if she wants to appear there, no one can accuse her of family drag. Now Gertie can paraphrase the same wire that Noel Coward sent her for her debut in her first straight part, "Legitimate at last, darling, and Mother is pleased."

BULLETIN BOARD: The Walter Abels, who swapped their Westwood home to the Henry Ephrons for their Turtle Bay residence are swapping back again in Aug., when the Abels head west and the Ephrons head east. In the meantime, Walter has just bought his own private mansion in the East 70's, so that when he returns in the fall, he'll have headquarters in N.Y. as his permanent base of operation, with Hollywood a wonderful place to visit—to help pay for his home here! . . . Johnny Meyer, too lonesome at El Morocco without his pals, Howard Hughes and Cary Grant, is heading back to Hollywood via detours to Havana and Mexico . . . Louis Suritz, just back from a nine-week business survey of the West Coast, pulled a fast coup when he tagged "her nibs, Miss Gibbs" to an exclusive Majestic contract. Georgia, holidaying here for two weeks Constellations to the Hollywood-Roosevelt today to guest shot on the Tony Martin etherizer (15) . . . John Dall and Helmut Dantine, two ex-Warnerites, are doing the town with two praise agents from the Warner flackery! . . . As soon as Dennis King winds up "Blithe Spirit" at Buck's County, he's Hollywood-bound to test for "The Robe" . . . Tilly Losh, who coached Jennifer Jones in her dances for "Duel in the Sun" lunched with her at "21" and spent most of the time raving about her performance in "Cluny Brown." No, D.O.S. wasn't within earshot! . . . Betty Lou Hunt, formerly of MCA's legit dept. here is joining the Bob Wachsman-Jean Pettibone West Coast praisery . . . Getting a reservation at the Beverly Hills hotel is like getting a whole glass window from Cartier's. But to Sally and Tony de Marco, who check in on the 23rd, it's as easy as their dancing on your eyes. They were just smart enough to get in on the ground floor (literally!) when the new syndicate was formed. Their visit this trip won't be confined to the pool and gin rummy only—they open at Ciro's next month, where, if J. L. Warner should happen to be a ringsider, he might find his "Sally"—alias Marilyn Miller.

Rogers Closes Deal On "Golden Fleece" at the Belmont, Los Angeles, Egyptian and Wilshire theatres, clocked an average $77,500 estimate. "Renegades" and "Talk About a Lady" at the Guild, United Artists, Ritz and Vogue hit only fair $34,000 estimate for its week closed last night.

Among the holdovers, "The Outlaw" in a 10th frame at the four Music Halls remains rather steady at $28,500 outlook. "From This Day Forward" and "Man Alive" at the Pantages and Hillstreet is off, showing prospects for approximately $23,000 on its second week. Third week of "One More Tomorrow" at the three Warner first runs is still okay, despite only five days on the frame, at estimated $21,000 for blowoff. "Somewhere in the Night" and "Colonel Effingham's Raid" is sighting no more than $23,000 for a five-day second week at the State, Chinese and Uptown, and "Cluny Brown" is being brought in tomorrow for run.

Orpheum goes straight first run today after 13 years of filmvaude operation. Closing bill, a straight vaudeville show, hit estimated $20,000. Today Orpheum, in tieup with the El Rey and Vogue, brings in "Badman's Territory" to launch film policy.

Vaude policy shifts down Broadway to the Million Dollar, which opens today with the Ink Spots Revue on stage and "Crime of the Century" screening.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH HOLLYWOOD

The text of a telegram sent yesterday to Eric Johnston, president, Motion Picture Association of America:

We are glad to know you will be in Hollywood this week, Mr. Johnston, for studio workers have suffered a most embittering experience in recent years, and only here can you get the real story.

That story is an unhappy one of falling living standards, insecurity in our jobs, and tension and strife among men and women who have long worked side by side. Its background is one of evasion and delay in contract negotiations, as a result of which most studio groups are without the security of contracts. In some cases negotiations have dragged on more than two years.

The key to this story lies in a curious fact. There are two kinds of unions in the studios. One kind is democratic, run according to the best American tradition. Its members meet regularly, decide their own affairs by majority vote, elect their own representatives and officers. There are many such locals in all branches of the Hollywood labor movement, in the I.A.T.S.E., the C.S.U., the talent guilds and other groups.

The other kind of union operates differently. Its members meet infrequently if at all. They are told what to do by men they had no voice in choosing. Racketeering has been freely exposed in this type of union. Millions of dollars have been taken from members by arbitrary assessment and the money never accounted for.

The curious fact is this. Our employers—and yours—have given the unions of the first type —the democratic ones—a bad kicking-around. At the same time they have been friendly and cooperative with the men who so arbitrarily run the second kind. And it is these men who, so favored, fan inter-union strife and threaten the jobs of men long in studio work, who spend recklessly to slander opponents and start witch-hunts to discredit those opponents.

That is why the 1945 studio strike is over, but the peace not yet won, and why negotiations are stalled. Some may think this good business on the part of employers. But it is wretched labor relations. It is the mainspring of all the ill will, the factional violence and the enormous waste which now characterizes this industry.

We union stewards, who work on the job and who know the men and women of the industry, want you to know these facts, Mr. Johnston. We probably represent a majority of those workers, and this action was voted at our meeting of June 6. We would be glad to have you come to one of our weekly meetings on Thursday night at Carpenters Hall and discuss the situation with rank and file representatives. We ask you to check these facts with workers on the lots and with union officials who are responsible to their membership and close to that membership's problems.

Then you, too, will agree that labor-management relations in this industry are the opposite of those you advocate. You will understand why so many of us have fought for our unions and why we will fight again if necessary. You may succeed in convincing the top executives of this industry that it is time to abandon such relations, time to give honest consideration to the problems of their employees, time to return to sane, orderly, efficient production.

That would make this an enjoyable industry to work in again, Mr. Johnston, also a better industry of which to be a part.

STEWARDS IN PLEA TO JOHNSTON ON LABOR ACCORDS

Plea for Eric Johnston to take steps to bring about better labor-management relations during his current Hollywood visit was made in a wire to the president of Motion Picture Association of America yesterday by the Motion Picture Stewards Council.

Charge that industry's top executives favor an undemocratic union faction in the studios over the democratically operated unions was made in the wire, signed by Helmer Bergman and Ed Gilbert. Wire charges that democratic unions get a "bad kicking around" while at the same time studios are "friendly and cooperative with the men who so arbitrarily run" the undemocratic unions.

Invitation was extended to Johnston to attend the regular Thursday night meetings of the Motion Picture Stewards Council and discuss the situation with rank and file representatives. Council believes that if facts were checked Johnston would find out who to blame for stalling of contract negotiations and continued strife in the studio labor field.

Town Hall Talk Hits Dr. Gallup Poll

Polls conducted by Dr. George Gallup do not reflect a cross section of public opinion because there has been no exchange of ideas among those interviewed, Prof. Ernest Hocking of UCLA declared yesterday in an address in Town Hall at the Biltmore hotel. Public opinion, he said, can only be measured accurately through the process of individuals educating each other.

MILLER, RYAN SET MEET ON NAB

Meeting will be held here between Justin Miller, National Association of Broadcasters prexy, William B. Following meeting Miller goes to Portland to attend conclave of Pacific Advertisers Association on June 25, and will then return to Washington, D.C. headquarters.

No Trespassing?

Joe Small, who has been assistant on International's "Bella Donna," switches over today to a similar spot on "The Return of Monte Cristo" at Columbia.

Korda is due to return to Hollywood at the end of July.

Tax Pare Move

New York, June 11.—Possibility of paring down 20 per cent federal amusement tax looms with meeting tomorrow in Washington of Fred Vinson, U.S. Treasury secretary who was designated last week for Supreme Court; Ted Gamble, American Theatre Association board chairman, and Robert Coyne, exec director of ATA. Showmen will present same argument which succeeded in blocking hike in Illinois state tax—that film theatre tax hits poor man hardest.

U-RANK MAY TOP BIZ FIELD

New York, June 11.—The Universal-J. Arthur Rank setup looms as the biggest international production-distribution-exhibition combine in the business. Rank is planning to push his theatre holdings from present 1,280 houses to about 2,000, including those in the United States. This plus Universal's acquisition of Enterprise product last week, jumps former company from its "Little Three" spot to top place among the "Big Five," and portends a significant change in the lineup of the U.S. film industry.

Gotham Hotel Jam Looks Good for BO

New York, June 11. — Present jammed occupancy of New York hotels is a favorable indication of Broadway's show business chances this summer. Major midtown hotels are refusing to accept reservations for the balance of the month.

U.S. Court Allows Big Five To Keep Theatre Chains

New York, June 11.—Drastic changes in selling of motion pictures have been ordered by U.S. District Court in the anti-trust suit against the major film companies, but majors are to be permitted to retain theatres. Long-awaited decision split honors between the government and the "Big Five" but set up formulas that will be completely new to the industry.

Ruled out were price fixing, block booking, formula deals, master agreements, pooling arrangements, franchises and moveovers. Court held that clearance or runs are not violative of anti-trust laws when reasonable, but setup of the majors is such a uniform system that it is illegal.

The three-judge statutory court, in a 73-page opinion, provided a new selling setup that requires the auctioning of individual pictures on the block to all theatres except those actually owned by the company itself. Court said "the only way competition may be introduced into the present system of fixed prices, clearances and runs is to require a defendant, when licensing its picture to other exhibitors, to make each picture available at a minimum fixed or percentage rental and (if clearance is denied) to grant reasonable clearance and run. When so offered, licensor shall grant a license for the desired run to the highest bidder if such bidder is responsible and has a

ARMY BONERS SNARLING AUSTRIA BIZ

New York, June 11.—American picture interests in Austria are sharply on the downgrade as a result of the Army's screwball "board of directors" system of handling operations.

Morale is bad in the motion picture unit of the information services branch, U.S. forces in Austria, and there has been a sharp loss of influence, with the Russians pushing hard to dislodge our distribution combine from its predominant position, according to experienced industry people recently returned from Europe.

Feeling is that only a stiff protest by the picture people in the United States to the Army's top layer and the State Department in Washington can reclaim the situation before it disintegrates further.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

WOLFE Kaufman, who recently appointed himself guardian of journalistic morals, and moaned that film reviewers are a pack of free-loaders, chiselers, four-ply spongers and what have you, has been caught with his own fat fingers in the jam-closet. It seems that Simon & Schuster, the publishers, have had to withdraw his book, "I Hate Blondes," from the bookstands because portions of it bore a startling resemblance to the work of Eric Ambler. Earl Wilson, in his syndicated column, tells the story of a Wolfe who cried wolf once too soon. Says Wilson: "One of the strangest cases in modern literature—involving photographic memory—has led Simon & Schuster and author Wolfe Kaufman voluntarily to withdraw Kaufman's mystery book, 'I Hate Blondes' from sale. 'I wrote Ambler in England that I was terribly sorry I have that kind of memory and asking what I should do,' Kaufman said. 'I had read his book some years back.' Below is a sample of Kaufman's trick memory: From Ambler: 'Don't you think you're being rather foolish, Mr. Kenton?' 'Why?' Colonel Robinson's yellow skin tightened suddenly. 'Because whatever your prim notions of responsibility may be, I want those photographs and intend to have them. Furthermore,' he added slowly, 'I am prepared to take any steps that may be necessary to overcome your scruples.' 'Such as?' FROM KAUFMAN: He said, 'Don't you think you're being foolish, Mr. Anderson?' 'Why?' His skin tightened suddenly: 'Because,' he said, 'whatever your prim notions of responsibility may be, I want that photograph and intend to have it. Furthermore, I am prepared to take whatever steps are necessary to overcome your scruples.' 'Such as?' And that's the payoff on Wolfe Kaufman.

RECENT benefit show put on in NY by Music Publishers' Contact Employes (songpluggers' union) was most successful yet, netting the charity fund of treasury $11,650. Ads in program totaled $16,100 (of which $5,000 was collected from members and pub firms here in Hollywood), ticket sales totted up to $9,354 and ASCAP kicked in with a $1,000 donation to event. After expenses were paid, $7,600 was earmarked to pay premiums on insurance policies which automatically are given all members upon joining. The remainder comprised the net. Meanwhile, plans of local songpluggers to hold charity caper here in autumn are being held in abeyance while Coast members determine if union will permit gain to be retained here and dispensed among local members out of work or in need, rather than revert to national treasury in NY.

When jockey exited couple of months ago it had Hooperating of .9 Now it's 1.5 and is 100 per cent sold as compared to fluctuating 75-80 per cent sponsored, while featuring a maximum of straight music and commercials, and minimum of chatter as anonymous staff announcers plainly introduce record titles.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

President Truman outlined a basic political and social philosophy when he vetoed the Case Bill—a philosophy that is somewhat missed in the excitement of newspaper headlines and leads. The President's idea was that industrial strife is due to economic maladjustments. He said the present ones have been due to our moving from war to peace, in itself a disturbance. Long-range legislation, he argued, should not therefore aim only at the effect, but at the cause. He therefore again urged improved unemployment insurance, fair minimum wages, better health and medical service for low-income families, continuance of the price and stabilization programs, and whatever further measures might be recommended by a thorough study of the situation. There may be argument with the President's proposals to improve the operation of our system, but there can be none with his logic.

TRADESHOWN at Ambassador Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., June 7, 1946. Running time: 105 MINS.

"Till the End of Time" packs a wallop which should find reflection in high grosses. Story of returning Marines and their problems once they are ensconced again in civilian life, picture has been sensitively directed and handled throughout and is a fine example of quality production. A new star emerges in film, too, Guy Madison, and co-star performances of Dorothy McGuire, Robert Mitchum and Bill Williams likewise rate highly.

There is a rugged strength to "Time," even in the love scenes, which commands attention, a feeling that though the uniforms have been discarded this is still the story of fighting men carrying on. Plot more particularly follows one Marine, Madison, and his reactions when he is mustered out of the corps and returns home. He cannot adjust himself to civilian pattern; a girl, Miss McGuire, widow of a combat pilot, enters his life the first day home to upset his thinking; he is faced with helping out a cowboy pal, Mitchum, who has a silver plate in his head, and encouraging another Marine, Williams, an ex-prize-fighter who lost both legs at Guadalcanal, to face life on two artificial limbs.

All these elements have been expertly juggled and seasoned with a fine hand, although the story itself is too slow in getting started. A generous splash of sentimentality and melodrama maintains interest generally at high pitch. Allen Rivkin caught the spirit of Niven Busch's book, "They Dream of Home," and Edward Dmytryk in his direction made the whole a moving document. Character of Madison could have been better managed for motivation, but indecision of returned men may be attributed as factor here. Picture is an achievement for Dore Schary from a production standpoint.

Miss McGuire delivers strongly and both Mitchum and Williams are standouts in colorful roles. Tom Tully as Madison's understanding father does yeoman service with part and Ruth Nelson's interpretation of the mother is an emotional experience. Jean Porter as girl next door is cute, and Selena Royle, Loren Tindall, Harry Von Zell, William Gargan and Johnny Sands are excellent.

Production credits generally are of high calibre, Harry Wild's photography matching the quality of the acting. Albert D'Agostino and Jack Okey handled art direction, Darrell Silvera and William Stevens set decoration. Title takes its name from song, "Till the End of Time," written by Buddy Kaye and Ted Mossman, based on Chopin's "Polonaise."

U.S. Studios Seeking Quota Figure on Pix to France

Washington, June 11.—American Studios, through MPEA, are trying to arrive at a figure for a self-imposed quota on exports to France, Ex. Gov. Milliken, MPEA head, told a press conference today.

With a backlog of six years of product to draw from, Hollywood has a real problem on its hands in selection and limitation, he pointed out. Flooding such reestablished markets as France with American pix would nullify benefits under the recent French agreement, Milliken said. Self-imposed quotas have already been reached for Italy, and will probably become policy in the next few years.

Asked about criticism on the French deal, which appeared in a New York paper, Milliken said it was a reprint of an article in "Ce Soir" the communist organ in France. He labeled such criticism as inevitable—result of the political situation in France and the overproduction of French films. He reminded that number of French producers jumped from about 15 to 50 during the Vichy regime.

The hurdles still to be taken by the industry are remittances and taxes. U.S. companies have four blocks of money now tied up in France—revenue accrued before the war, money accumulated in southern France during the partial occupation, funds from distribution of OWI films after D-day, and money from several hundred old pictures, dating back to the 1921 "Ben Hur," which suddenly came out of hiding after the war. How and when we get our money out of the country are details to be worked out, said Milliken.

Taxes, too, complicate the situation. The double taxation treaty with France, approved there before the war and here after D-day, brings up the question of what the effect will be on film funds now in France. In addition, the 5 per cent capital tax assessed on all moneys in France on June 4, 1945, remains to be clarified.

To date, Marshall Field has sunk $4,000,000 into PM.

Crime of the Century

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Walter H. Goetz. Director, Philip Ford. Screen play, O'Leta Rhinehart, William Hagens, Gertrude Walker. Original story, O'Leta Rhinehart, William Hagens. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Film editor, William P. Thompson. Musical director, Richard Cherwin. Sound, Ed Borschell. Art director, Gano Chittenden. Costume supervision, Adele Palmer. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr., and James Redd. Makeup, Bob Mark.

CAST — Stephanie Bachelor, Michael Browne, Martin Kosleck, Betty Shaw, Paul Stanton, Mary Currier, Tom London, Ray Walker, Don Costello, Earle Hodgkins, Garry Owen, Charles Cane, Charles Wilson, Frances Morris, Frederick Howard, David Fresco.

REVIEWED at the Million Dollar, Los Angeles, June 11, 1946. Running time: 55 MINS.

"Crime of the Century," is a rather tired melodrama. Its best recommendation is brief running time. Plot and players fumble through 55 minutes of footage seeking a solution that has been apparent to the audience for some time. Strictly filler material for bookings where any picture will do.

Plot basically offered good melodrama formula around which to spin an interesting tale, but between the writing and filming, plenty of holes developed. It concerns a newspaperman who disappears while hot on the trail of a big news beat. His brother, just released from prison (why he was ever jugged is never explained), tries to find him but sundry characters manage to keep him thoroughly confused. Windup makes a stab at explaining that it's all a plot to conceal the death of the head of a big corporation. The newsman discovers plot and fact that dead man is being kept in cold storage in an ice-filled bathtub in his mansion until after the corporation's annual election. Plotters have to hide the reporter, too, but his brother stumbles through to the rescue at the climactic moment and all ends as anticipated.

Philip Ford directed too ineptly for suspense. Stephanie Bachelor, Michael Kosleck, Betty Shaw, Paul Stanton and Mary Currier head up the cast. Best work is contributed by a couple of supporting players, Don Costello and Earle Hodgins.

O'Leta Rhinehart and William Hagens did the original, with Gertrude Walker aiding them on the script. Physical production values are okay under Walter H. Goetz's supervision. Lensing and other credits are standard.

Lover Come Back

(Comedy)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Producers Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano. Executive producer, Howard Benedict. Director, William Seiter. Original screenplay by Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano. Photography, Joseph Valentine. Art direction, Jack Otterson and Martin Obzina. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and Ted Offenbecker. Music score, Hans J. Salter. Sound, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, Robert Pritchard. Gowns, Travis Banton. Makeup, Jack P. Pierce. Assistant director, Fred Frank. Film Editor, Ray Snyder.

CAST—George Brent, Lucille Ball, Vera Zorina, Charles Winninger, Carl Esmond, Raymond Walburn, Wallace Ford, Franklin Pangborn, Louise Beavers, Elisabeth Risdon, William Wright, George Chandler, Joan Fulton.

PREVIEWED at Universal Studios, Studio City, June 11, 1946. Running time: 90 MINS.

"Lover Come Back" is smartly produced comedy with a touch of sophistication and more than a fair share of laughs. The lines are bright and crisp, the farce situations get fresh treatment and subtle handling and the gags stem legitimately from the story. It's the sort of picture that will please the customers generally and leave the carriage trade nothing to get snooty about. George Brent, Lucille Ball and Vera Zorina are good names for the marquee and combine with the entertainment values to promise hefty box office.

Brent performs with effective smoothness in situations that combine hectic love-making and hot embarrassment about fifty-fifty. Miss Ball, as his wife, wins an even break or better in the acting honors and they score notably as a romantic comedy team. Vera Zorina handles her acting chores successfully as the principal one of numerous gals who figure in Brent's extra - marital romancing.

Charles Winninger, as Brent's father, and Elisabeth Risdon as his mother, provide a large measure of the comedy in a like-father-like-son sub plot that backgrounds the domestic difficulties of Brent and Miss Ball. Wallace Ford makes a brief role productive of laughs.

The yarn is based on an idea that has served for many a problem play — the philandering husband who feels that it's all right for him to play in the by-paths of love but gets highly indignant at the mere suspicion that his wife may be similarly inclined. Fessier and Pagano, in doing the script, haven't worried themselves with the problem, but have worked the idea exclusively for laughs. Brent is made a returning war correspondent who has dallied sentimentally with one willing femme and another while his attractive wife has scrupulously and conscientiously fought off the wolves at home. When hubby's peccadilloes are disclosed (and the exposure begins when she meets him aboard ship at the dock) wifie promptly counters by using the three wolves who have most constantly besieged her (Carl Esmond, Raymond Walburn and William Wright) to give him something to worry about.

The marital storm climaxes with Miss Ball going to Las Vegas to start divorce proceedings. She is followed by both Brent and Esmond. There's a last minute reconciliation and it all ends happily after a series of bedroom farce scenes with an original twist.

The piece has been ably directed

'JUST FOR VARIETY'

THE GRAPEVINE: Wonder whether the local British colony is drinking its tea these afternoons or smoking it. It seems the "Henry V" opening at the Laurel Friday evening, for benefit of the Hollywood Bowl Association's building fund, is not doing so well in its advance sale despite optimistic publicity. One reason is that a number of Britishers now resident here (not all of them, but too many) are trumpeting, ala Colonel Blimp, that they "won't pay $12 to aid an American institution." Just so nobody gets the idea Anglophobia is rampant—this information was passed along by a disgusted Britisher. Notable exception is Filippo del Giudice, the British producer, who bought the biggest block sold so far, 30 tickets. If chauvinism must rear its ugly head, the crumpets-and-cricket set might recall that "Henry V" is hailed as the best British picture ever made . . . The Van Heflins expect their baby to arrive next month, with high hopes for a boy . . . Humphrey Bogart will sell his power cruiser, "The Sluggy," for $7000 . . . While on the nautical theme, Peter O'Crotty has 28 whaleboats for sale. In a moment of exhuberance, while attending a Maritime Commission auction last week, he found himself bidding wildly for whaleboats and walked out the owner of 29. He only needs one himself . . . American Medical Association's Journal reports that you absorb the same amount of nicotine by inhaling 30 cigarets or by smoking six cigars. Jack Benny please note . . . Audrey Totter, now playing the lead in "Lady in the Lake," is starting a one-woman campaign to persuade Metro to let her play the role of Joan, the nightclub singer, in "The Hucksters."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: The inter-flackery feud between Alex Evelove of Warners and Henry Rogers, the indie publicist, has reached menacing proportions. Evelove barred Rogers from the Warner lot. Now Rogers claims he is retaliating by barring Evelove from the Sunset Strip . . . Another feud, in the higher realms of literature, involves William Saroyan and Irwin Shaw. Shaw reveiwed "Adventures of Wesley Jackson" in the New York Times and tore it apart, whimsey by whimsey. On a clear night you can see Saroyan burning in San Francisco. The other reviewers, as a matter of record, weren't much kinder. Most of them feel that Hans Christian Andersen is still the best writer of fairy tales, and wonder whether they weren't taken for a ride by the Saroyan legend . . . Niven Busch's "Day of the Conquerors," which just hit the bookstalls, is built around San Francisco on V-J Day and packs many pages of brilliant observation. Looks like a tough one for screen translation, however, as the main theme of the novel concerns the Krafft-Ebbing tendencies of the hero's wife . . . Dennis O'Keefe's role in "Dishonored Lady" is a switch on his recent comedy parts. He plays a famous scientist . . . Republic front office has offered Joan Barton a long-termer after viewing rushes on "The Angel and the Outlaw."

CALL SHEET: JOHN CARROLL is importing thoroughbreds from Australia for his Valley ranch. Horses, of course . . . WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 11.—Just to clarify recent reports from Shanghai that our companies are not getting a break in getting their dough from China into the U.S., here are the facts:

Last year, with the black market in money running wild, rate of exchange varied from 2000 to 3000 Chinese dollars to one American dollar, so that no film company knew from day to day where it stood. In addition, a foreign company had to get permission, after locating dollar exchange, to remit this. Frequently the companies couldn't get permission, even if they could find the dollars.

State Department went to bat for films. This was the only commodity for which an agreement was made, since at that time there was no private trade and China needed our pix.

State arranged a deal which was highly preferential. Under it, our companies could remit to the U.S. 15% of their funds at the official rate of 20 to 1. This was considered a great break in an inflationary market such as China. Rest of the funds had to be spent there.

Due to various financial fluctuations, after clearing our money during the first two quarters of 1945, an impasse was reached. Eric Johnston's office called this to the attention of the State Department which instructed our Embassay to make representations to the Chinese government. Bank of China was then directed to live up to the agreement for the second half of 1945.

With 1946 came the reestablishment of private trade in China and the termination of the deal. Everybody was put in the same boat. All biz has to apply to the Foreign Exchange Bank, part of the Bank of China, for remittance of exchange.

Present remittance rate is 2000 to 1, which means we have to turn in $2000 Chinese to get out $1 American. However, the pix companies stand a good chance of getting the full amounts of their funds out, although the net remittances will be less than under last year's deal.

State Department will take no steps to improve this. Comment is that pix have no right to better treatment than any other industry and must take their chances in an inflationary situation.

War Department denies reports that it has withheld public release of the Signal Corps film, "The Atom Strikes," four reeler made for Major General Leslie Groves, on ground the subject was too strong for the public to take.

Army spokesmen say "certain legal restrictions not controlled by the Army" prevent general distribution of what is said to be the most forceful and most complete pictorial record of the havoc wrought by the atom bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Army, according to these spokesmen, has turned over to the newsreels all footage it controls on the subject. No details are given of what is meant by "legal restrictions." It was claimed, however, that the German priest who appears as eye witness of the destruction said he would narrate parts of the film only if it was not released publicly.

Pic will be shown non-commercially at the first of the Government Film Workers evening screenings here tomorrow.

Eric Johnston, who appeared before the House Banking and Currency Committee in support of the British loan, said in part: "The motion picture business, with which I am associated, has succeeded over the years in building up a substantial overseas business. "STATE OF THE UNION" is billed as a comedy, and it is. It is full of laughs and it's grand entertainment from beginning to end. But it's more than that. In its cumulative effect it is a political speech by the warm-hearted, farseeing Wendell Willkie. It is a moving editorial on the need of vision, rather than expediency, as the guiding motive for America. It is the theatre at its vital, important, best, and it's as up-to-date as tomorrow's newspaper."

"This is the story of a thought. It just happens to be a play. That play is entitled "STATE OF THE UNION." It is written by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse. "If I were show shopping, I would clippity clip it posthaste, if not faster, to the Nixon Theatre today to become a charter member of those who, in seasons to come, will be bragging that they saw 'STATE OF THE UNION' before it went to Broadway. It won't be back, you may be sure, for a long, long time.
"The advance reports on the new Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse play were extraordinarily cheerful. They were not exaggerated. It is, in the vernacular, a swell show, a time bomb that explodes with hilarious accuracy under both the politicians and the voters. 'STATE OF THE UNION' is a play that should have been written a long time ago. Indeed, the authors of 'Life With Father' and the producers of 'Arsenic and Old Lace' and the impending 'The Hasty Heart,' may have something here as important to a national problem as 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was to another generation of Americans."

ture business. The committee is made up of both Army officers and civilians—experts in law, finance, administration, economics, etc.

They make their decisions by majority vote and appear to be having a lovely time controlling film production, distribution and exhibition. Big boss of the operation is a Lt. Col. McIntosh, who works on the theory that Army experience qualifies him as an expert on the intricacies of a highly technical business.

TRUST AUSTRIANS

Fact that the American film interests have pix being screened in Austria and would like to get their money out some day is of minor importance to the "board of directors."

Board leans exclusively on Austrians for expert advice. What was formerly a smooth clicking operation has been buried under a wave of red tape paper work for the Army. Operations have slowed down because nobody on the committee—which meets weekly to vote on all decisions—speaks the language much. Thus nothing can be done until the interpreter shows up to translate papers, etc.

Austrian civilians who occupy many of the jobs in the film unit, now lack competent leadership and direction and their morale and loyalty have fallen off.

MPTOA ELECTS FRED WEHRENBERG

Columbus, Miss., June 11.—Board of directors of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America today took no stand on the American Theatre Association but agreed to cooperate with any organization representing any branch of the industry for the purpose of discussing and acting upon problems and questions relating to the welfare of the industry.

Reports that MPTOA would line up with ATA were proved without foundation as the organization set a course for greater activity on its own.

Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis was elected president of MPTOA. Ed Kuykendall, retiring prexy, was elected president emeritus. J. J. O'Leary of the Comerford Circuit, Scranton, was elected treasurer, succeeding Walter Vincent. Lewen Pizor was elected chairman of the board to succeed Wehrenberg. All other officers were re-elected.

U.S. Kills Block Booking; Allows Big 5 Keep Chains theatre of the size, location and equipment to present the picture to advantage." In short, where two theatres' bidding is fairly comparable, the one offering the best terms is to receive the license.

PRICE FIXING VOIDED

Price fixing was voided because the court found "conspiracy" in the uniform system used among majors. It also held that the "Little Three" were in the "conspiracy," the consultation table of theatres and cities evidenced the uniformity, the court said. Elimination of price fixing is not to prevent the distributors from continuing present methods of determining film rentals, or charging flat or percentage rentals, according to the judges.

Joint ownership of theatres by majors among themselves or with independents also was found illegal. The court ordered divestiture where more than a 5% interest is held.

Theatre divestiture is not necessary, the court thought. "We think that the opportunity of independents to compete under the bidding system for pictures and runs renders such a harsh remedy as complete divestiture unnecessary, at least until the efficiency of that system has been tried and found wanting."

Despite the government's contention, clearance should be determined by the size, location, quality, prices charged, competetive system, etc., but the court ruled the evidence showed a uniform system set up by the majors and held present clearance invalid.

LOCAL ARBITRATION CURE

New auction selling would take care of objections on clearance, the court said. Local situations can be cured by individual suits or, better yet, arbitration.

Formula deals, master agreements and franchises running more than one year, have, for the most part, been restraint of trade. Consequently, most of them are out, as are moveovers, and overage and underage contract provisos.

Any form of block-booking is contrary to the Sherman Act, the court said. Even if two pictures are sold when one is dependent on the other. However, there is no objection to a distributor selling a number of pictures simultaneously provided the sale of one is not dependent on the sale of others.

Blind selling is not totally objectionable, provided licensing contracts grant the exhibitor the right to reject a percentage of the films.

The arbitration system now in force cannot be maintained, the court said, unless the majors consent to it. Court urged majors to do so, saying it would help iron out the difficulties of the new sales system, save time and money.

The decision was unanimous, written jointly by Judges Henry W. Goddard, John Bright and Augustus Hand.

WALSH SUES PAIR IN RENT CASE

Raoul Walsh yesterday sued David S. and Ruth Ann Garber for $7200, charging that they violated O.P.A. rental ceiling regulations in renting him a house at 13141 Addison street, Van Nuys. Walsh asserts he rented the house for $600 a month for six months, but was required to pay $2400 for an option to buy when his lease expired. He contends that this was a "sham, fraud and fiction," that the Garbers knew he didn't intend to buy the house and that the deal brought his rent to $1000 a month for his six months occupancy.

With the camera being used subjectively to tell his story through the eyes of the leading character, Montgomery's hands are all that are seen of him in a number of scenes. Laughs are found in odd places. As for instance, who'd expect to find a yock in the Hooper listing? It may not be funny to a certain group of radioites but it gave us a titillating sensation. It may be funny to you too. Scanning the table of Sunday aft shows we came across a new one called "Right Down Your Alley." The figure hung up beside it was 1.7. It's the title that made us titter and the program undoubtedly went down the wrong alley. Alright, it ain't funny, so let's get on with the rest of the ratings.

Carmen Cavallaro 7.8, up .2; "Darts for Dough" 2.7, off 1.9; Gene Autry 5.2, up .6; Hollywood Star Time 4.5, up .3; Westinghouse 6.4, off .8; Nelson Eddy 5.8, up 1; "One Man's Family" 7, off .7; "The Shadow" 11.3, up 2.1. We rung in that last one just for the fun of it.

Radio Review

Fine musical programs like that of "An Evening with Romberg" are beset with a double hazard in radio. Their audience has never been large and in the summer the dialer's fancy turns to thoughts away from the receiving set. Sigmund Romberg cut a wide arc with his baton last night and the summer standby for Red Skelton was off on a 13-week jaunt along the NBC right o' way. That it will do as well as other quasi-class musicals is foregone. But it won't be any great shakes in the Hooper listing.

Fronting an orchestra of 51 men and two women (Margit Hegedus, of course), Romberg laid out a tuneful, lilting repertoire for the inaugural. It ran the gamut of tastes among the better patrons of music and seemed to set well with the studio audience, which applauded long and loud at the finale. Handling the vocals were Genevieve Rowe, also known as Irene Hill, and Reinhold Schmidt, both from the Chicago company of Carnation Contented Hour. Few sopranos in radio rank Miss Rowe, or Miss Hill, in class or quality. Schmidt's stout baritone isn't the exact blend for her silken tones albeit of the right strength and fibre for some of Romberg's more virile works.

It required four announcers to get over the commercials for Raleigh with plenty of the G.W. Hill (Luckies) repetitious malarkey about how good their weed is. Fort Pearson handled the narration and occasionally took a hand in the connectives with Rod O'Connor, Ned LaFevre and Garnett Marks.

Just how well Romberg fares rating-wise might be drawn from his previous summer commitment, last year for Hildegarde. Picking up a 12.9 from the chanteuse, he slumped to 6.8, hit a low of 4.7 and bounced back to 6.9. When Hildy resumed in the fall she opened with an even 11. This semester he's at a greater disadvantage, inheriting one of the top ratings of the season from Red Skelton. But it's still a fine musical program and too bad it is that there aren't more devotees of that type of class entertainment.

PRC Sets New Release Schedule

PRC has set up a new release schedule for June, July and August, it was announced yesterday. Initial film of the seven pictures to go out will be "Avalanche," due for release June 20. El Rey Bows as 1st Run

El Rey theatre, in the Wilshire boulevard Miracle Mile, bowed in last night as a first run theatre, teaming with the Orpheum, downtown, and the Vogue in Hollywood to give a new de luxe outlet for feature film bills. El Rey, long operated as a neighborhood house, was completely redecorated into a postwar showcase.

Unusual drapes, color scheme and indirect neon lighting, as well as four unique wall fixtures of modern design, new box office, etc., were among redecorating done to bring the 861-seater up to showcase standards. Addition of the El Rey to the first run list, and yesterday's opening of the Million Dollar under a filmvaude policy, gives Los Angeles 27 first run outlets, a total greater than in any other city.

Opening bill for the El Rey, Orpheum and Vogue is "Badman's Territory," RKO release, plus short subjects.

4-STAR, GILT EDGE $15,000 ROYALTY DEMAND TOLD

It is understood that Cliff McDonald and Don Pierce, who last month bought 4 Star and Gilt Edge Records from Dick Nelson, have been told by Harry Fox, Music Publishers' Protective Association trustee, that waxery will get no more licenses to disc tunes until $15,000 in royalties owed various publishers has been paid. Fox, when on Coast in February, discovered that labels were that much in debt for copyrighted songs sliced into wax sans payment to owners.

Pierce stated that he and partner were willing to assume liability, though debt was incurred during Nelson regime. New owners, however, are seeking to amortize payments and it is understood that Fox is demanding the sum in a lump and forthwith. Local attorney Jerry Ralston, who is representing MPPA on Coast, says situation at present is snarled because though Pierce and McDonald have assumed physical possession of waxery, Nelson actually has not been paid off.

Actress charges she signed with firm for 10 per cent of weekly salary of $2,000, but that studio since then has upped stipend to $3,000 and agents ask increased fee.

VIDEO MAKEUP IS TELEPREEMED

Max Factor's "Television Make-Up" was telepreemed last evening for trade and press at Don Lee's video station W6XAO. Demonstration, narrated by Max Firestine was picture of development of special pastes necessary to television.

For uninitiated, it was revelation of simplicity, dispelling common belief that video requires excessive and grotesque dermi-dressing, which in turn requires overbearingly hot lighting. Telecast over monitor set from stage to adjoining room, it showed effects of original make-up of 10 years ago, "Indian make-up," heavy motion picture type later used and latest types. For clinching effect models wearing one of each type was viewed together, with latest proving best all around, in close-ups and distance views.

Shubert Burns at More Play-Say for Writers

New York, June 12.—Proposals to give playwriters more power over legit production drew a fast spurn today from Lee Shubert at a luncheon meeting of the League of New York Theatres board and the Dramatists Guild to discuss revisions of their basic agreement. Dramatists are asking the right to select dance and music directors and the contractor. Shubert, however, replied, "I'd rather lease the theatres for radio than agree to such proposals." Another proposal would give writers the right to approve all deals other than actual production. Current agreement expires June 15.

WILL SEEK THEATRE DIVORCE

Washington, June 12—The anti-trust division of the Justice Department will appeal yesterdays decision in the Big Five case, it was announced here last night. HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

MATT Shelvey, national director of American Guild of Variety Artists, is seeking confab with James C. Petrillo, American Federation of Musicians' prexy, in effort to enlist aid of AFM in dealing with niteries which refuse to sign contracts wth AGVA. Shelvey hopes to arrange huddle in NY this month and he will ask Petrillo for arrangement whereby musicians will walk out of any spot live-talent union deems "unfair." At present two unions have no working agreement nationally, although in some local situations the musicians will work in sympathy with AGVA members. In most, however, there are no ties and AGVA has found that in many instances when floorshows are ordered out by union, the niteries keep on flourishing using orks only. Shelvey believes that by getting support of AFM everywhere he will have a powerful lever in obtaining contract-agreements with niteries and in making them abide by AGVA rules.

WARNERS doesn't intend to repeat its recent experiences while on location in Arizona for "Cheyenne," for forthcoming location jaunt on United States Pictures' production, "Pursued." On "Cheyenne" trek, understood that company couldn't line up suitable living quarters and facilities for troupe and that members had plenty of beefs. To offset this, studio now is trying to buy 20 to 30 big Army trailers, the type with seven rooms, and will set up elaborate trailer camp somewhere in either New Mexico or Arizona, where number of weeks will be spent filming exteriors in Technicolor. Trailers are air-conditioned, and as would be refurbished by studio would be last word in location comfort.

WARNERS publicity department was set back on its toes in matter of responses which greeted efforts of a crew to dig up yarns for use in company's 20th talkie anniversary. Members approached with some trepidation the idea of phoning and setting up interview dates with femmes who were identified with pre-talkie era, or who were in business just at time of the switch from silents to talking pictures. Subject of a gal's age normally is no man's biz, but in more than 120 stars and feature players contacted not one gal did a brimstone. On other hand, five males wanted not part of proceedings and begged off, saying they didn't want to be identified with any such anniversary.

ALBERT Lewin, directing "Bel Ami," is claiming good results from reversing customary procedure of shooting the master shot first and the close-ups afterwards. He tried out the new technique in a dinner sequence with cast toppers and numerous other players at the table. Original schedule called for a day and a half for the master shot and three days on individual close-ups. By shooting the closeups first the cast was made letter perfect in lines and business and also got good idea of the entire scene. Result was that they were so well rehearsed by the end of the third day of close-ups that the master shot was completed in an hour and a half.

PRODUCER Harry Rapf thinks he's finally hit on the permanent tag of the Metro film dealing with the story of a boy and his horse. Studio tagged the film after the equine's name, "Gallant Bess." The Cinecolor pic was originally tagged "Star from Heaven," which shortly after was changed to "Lucky Star." It took a nation-wide survey to sample public preference and arrive on the final decision. Horse, incidentally, is to be featured in several forthcoming films.

Panzer was the villian of the original serial and Hale was Pearl White's leading man in her "Exploits of Elaine."

Trip takes four hours each way.

A prize fight in the elder days was scorned by wealthy folks Who left the game of knuckles to the common lowbrowed blokes.
The manly art of sluggery, discussed in beer saloons,
Was then considered proper for the
roughnecks and the goons.
And now the film stars hasten east on high expensive wings
To see a pair of heavyweights exchanging weary swings,
To pay a hundred bucks per seat beneath the summer skies
And revel in the notion that it pays to advertise.

There is something in a heavyweight championship fight that attracts people from near and far. An atavistic urge dating back to the Neanderthalers. A couple of lightweights can put more artistry, vigor and enthusiasm into one round than a couple of heavyweights can unleash in fifteen, if one of them can stand up that long. The big idea is that a heavyweight makes more noise when he hits the canvas. Joe Public likes his amusements in king-size packages.

'SAD SACK' MAY PROVE GOOD FILL IN SINATRA SPOT

There should be a sizeable audience of ex-GI's around the country to make a dialing habit of "Sad Sack," the cartoon character, which last night moved into Frank Sinatra's time for the strawhat season. Most former servicemen and quite a few home folks know about George Baker's dopey private and here we have him back from the war easing into civilian stride. The theme is timely and the back-home antics of the lowly private fertile ground for Scripters Charlie Isaacs and Artie Stander, who delivered a good first treatment.

From the opener it can be drawn that only the humorous side of the returning GI will be treated in the ensuing installments. Lightly touched on were some of the problems faced by the vets such as getting a going-over from unsympathetic friends and complete lack of understanding of his plight to win back civilian respect. The writers will have to move cautiously lest they tread on tender toes in view of the gripes that have been reaching home ears.

Herb Vigran was the agency choice for the title role and in his first important part came through handily. He made the voice-etching of the mopey, beaten character stand out and shaded the lines with seasoned finesse. Able support was given him by Jim Backus, Patsy Moran, Dora Singleton, Wally Maher and Ken Christy. Ted Sherdeman directed for Lennen & Mitchell, Lou Kosloff handled the music bridges and Dick Joy presided for the sponsor.

If "Sad Sack" can hold half of Sinatra's audience it will have proven a good summer buy. The budget is low and the production headaches should be few. It may, after all, prove a sleeper and carry over into season. The writing will be the determining factor and a good start was had.

TRADE SHOWINGS

Crack-Up

(Melodrama)

RKO RELEASE. Executive producer, Jack J. Gross. Director, Irving Reis. Screenplay by John Paxton, Ben Bengal, Ray Spencer. Suggested by a short story, "Madman's Holiday," by Frederic Brown. Photography, Robert de Grasse. Special effects, Russell A. Cully. Art direction, Albert S. D'Agostino and Jack Okey. Set decorations, Darrel Silvera and Michael Orenbach. Music, Leigh Harline. Musical direction, C. Bakaleinikoff. Sound, John Cass and Terry Kellum. Gowns, Renie. Dialogue director, Leslie Urbach. Assistant director, James Anderson. Film editor, Frederic Knudtson.

CAST—Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor, Herbert Marshall, Ray Collins, Wallace Ford, Dean Harens, Damian O'Flynn, Erskine Sanford, Mary Ware.

TRADESHOWN at the Alexandria Theatre, Glendale, Cal., June 6, 1946. Running time: 93 MINS.

"Crack-up" is another one of those psycho-suspense melodramas. It carries enough thrill, tension and skull-duggery to hold audience interest but it isn't going to cause any high excitement at the box office. Much of the entertainment value of a pretty good script has been lost in production and direction and the film is definitely in the supporting feature class.

Pat O'Brien struggles manfully with the lead part which is the sort of role for which he was never intended. Claire Trevor, Herbert Marshall, Erskine Sanford and Mary Ware had better luck in parts assigned to them. The entire cast suffers from evident theory that heavily-muted dialogue would add to the eerie mood of the story. The audience suffers as well and a good portion of the lines are virtually inaudible. Wallace Ford, in particular, playing the part of a homicide squad lieutenant delivers most of his lines behind closed lips, though otherwise giving a good dead-pan interpretation.

The photography, handled by Robert de Grasse, has been given the same repressive treatment as the dialogue and in most of the scenes is keyed far too low.

The story deals with the blackout of O'Brien on a train and his vivid memory on recovering consciousness of having been in a train wreck. He comes to smashing his way into the museum where he is a lecturer on painting, slugs a policeman and creates a fine, dramatic uproar until knocked out in the struggle with the cops. Just why the homicide detective is called in isn't made quite clear, but his checking and questions bring out the fact that there has been no train wreck such as O'Brien describes. So everyone suspects O'Brien of being a bit off his nut and he is half inclined to believe it himself. Starting to hunt his train wreck and prove his sanity to himself he runs into a lot of dirty work among the Old Masters in the museum, with more than a bit of murder involved.

Through his detective work and with the aid of Claire Trevor, as museum secretary, and Herbert Marshall, mystery man of the piece, everything is finally straightened out in a thriller finish.

Aside from the treatment of dialogue and photography production and direction of Jack Gross and Irving Reis, respectively, are adequate. Reis has paced the action well and pointed up the drama and suspense successfully.

Smoky

(Western-Technicolor)

TWENTIETH-FOX RELEASE. Producer, Robert Bassler. Director, Louis King, Screenplay by Lillie Hayward, Dwight Cummins and Dorothy Yost. Based on novel by Will James. Photography, Charles Clarke. Technicolor direction, Natalie Kalmus and Richard Mueller. Art direction, Lyle Wheeler and Chester Gore. Set decorations, Thomas Little and Harold Cramp. Music, David Raksin. Musical direction, Emil Newman. Orchestral arrangements, Arthur Morton. Sound, George Leverett and Harry M. Leonard. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen. Equine supervision, Jack Lindell. Costumes, Bonnie Cashin. Makeup, Ben Nye. Film editor, Nick De Maggio.

CAST—Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter, Burl Ives, Bruce Cabot, Esther Dale, Roy Roberts, J. Farrell MacDonald.

TRADESHOWN at Twentieth-Fox Studio, Westwood, Cal., June 10, 1946. Running time: 87 MINS.

"Smoky" is horse story and Western combining the best features of both. It contains none of the they-went-thataway hokum of the stock Western and none of the maudlin sentimentalism sometimes associated with horses in fiction and film, but is plenty thrilling and makes a legitimate pull at the heart-strings of an audience, nonetheless.

"Smoky," the horse of the title role, holds the position proper to star billing throughout. He is not only one of the most spectacular pieces of horse flesh so far screened, but proves himself a thorough trouper as well. Scene where old, decrepit, long banished from the rodeos and condemned to haul a junk wagon he stirs to the music of the band and joins the Frontier Day parade in Cheyenne is as good a bit acting as any in the piece.

This is not meant to detract from the performances of Fred MacMurray and Anne Baxter, the romantic leads, or from those of Esther Dale, Roy Roberts, Bruce Cabot and J. Farrell MacDonald. They all give top portrayals that are closer to real Western characters than customary.

Burl Ives, cast in the role of ranch blacksmith, is stand-out feature of the picture with his guitar playing and singing of Western folk songs.

The story is a quiet and smooth picturing of the capture of "Smoky," the wild stallion, his training by MacMurray as a cow horse and his flight back to the mesas after he has killed a cowboy who mistreats him. MacMurray searches the hills and canyons vainly for "Smoky" from then on. Meanwhile, the horse is captured and featured as a bucker in rodeos, is injured and ends up on the junk wagon, where MacMurray finally finds him.

Sequences include authentic horse-breaking, cattle branding and rodeo scenes that show the West and the labors of the cowboy much as they really are. Producer Robert Bassler has made skillful use of his materials in turning out a spectacular show. Charles Clarke, with the color camera, brings the rugged, rainbow-hued Western scenery to the screen in full glory.

Louis King directs to bring out full dramatic value of the yarn and has been highly successful in handling the big riding and round-up scenes.

The Man From Rainbow Valley

(Western-Trucolor)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Louis Gray. Director, Robert Springsteen. Original screenplay, Betty Burbridge. Photography, Bud Thackery. Art direction, Hilyard Brown. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr. and Earl Wooden. Musical direction, Mort Glickman. Sound, William E. Clark. Costumes, Adele Palmer. Makeup, Bob Mark. Film editor, Edward Mann.

CAST—Monte Hale, Adrian Booth, Jo Ann Marlowe, Ferris Taylor, Emmett Lynn, Tom London, Bud Geary, Kenne Duncan, Doye O'Dell, Bert Roach, Sagebrush Serenaders—Enright Busse, John Scott and Frank Wilder.

PREVIEWED at RCA Studios, Hollywood, Cal., June 12, 1946. Running time: 56 MINS.

"The Man from Rainbow Valley," latest of Republic's Monte Hale tinters, sets a new standard for the series. First off, the color shows immense improvement and though still a bit on the chrome-and-sepia side and inclined to blur a bit, comes close to natural effects in the scenery shots. Production is frankly a quickie, but gets more elaborate production than previous pictures of the series. Film should help build up Monte Hale following, has a special appeal for the kids and looks like a winner in the Republic market.

Hale shares feature honors in the picture with a wild stallion, and story is concerned with theft of the horse by a bunch of rodeo troupers. Adrian Booth, as one of the troupe, gets mixed up in the deal and decidedly in bad with Hale, but ends up on the side of righteousness and in a clinch with Hale. Story varies from standard Western hoke to the extent of making Hale the author of a comic strip depicting the adventures of the stallion, "Outlaw." But he does enough bronc riding and rough-and-tumble fighting to prove to his fans that the paper work hasn't sissified him.

Film features four musical numbers for Hale and the Sagebrush Serenaders—all adequate to the demands of singing-cowboy technique.

Picture has been ably directed by Robert Springsteen and Louis Gray has given it top production for its class. Bud Thackery deserves a hand for his camera struggles with the new color process.

CIRCUITS ADJUST TO P-TA IDEAS

New York, June 12.—Responding to pressure from Parent-Teachers groups, circuits around the country are increasingly following the practice of setting screen programs on Saturday afternoons exclusively for kids of school age. Exhibs thus can answer criticism against allegedly showing a lack of social responsibility by pointing out that it's up to the elders to send the juves to the special shows as the latter keep them away from the type picture called questionable.

Absentee Angle

New York, June 12.—Abstenteeism is as bad in picture offices and theatres now as during the war. One executive says absenteeism is more rampant among the new employees.

THE GRAPEVINE: Advertising and publicity space for motion pictures is shrinking at an alarming rate throughout the country due to the paper shortage. In Prescott, Ariz., a mob of fans pulled hairs from his tail for souvenirs . . . Jack Benny, en route to Hollywood from Chicago by motor, is going to take his summer vacation from radio in the best of causes. He's going to entertain the occupation troops in Japan for a month. Then he returns to prepare for Warners' "Always Leave Them Laughing."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Paul Henreid is a best bet to play the Crown Prince Rudolf role in "Mayerling"—Charles Boyer played it in the French version widely shown in the U.S.—when Seymour Nebenzal does a re-make here . . . Nita Hunter, now in the title role of "Miss Television" at Comet, is out to make herself some dough and get a new coat. She's investing in a Persian lamb ranch with her father . . . 20th-Fox is looking for another lad to replace Roddy McDowall in "Green Grass of Wyoming," third of the studio's "Flicka" series. He recently bowed out of his contract . . . OFF THE LOTS: Peter Lawford waited seven months for a new car, got delivery yesterday, but will have to forego tooling it around for a few weeks. He had to plane out to New York on several commitments. Robert Ryan leaves for a 10-day visit to Chicago by plane, then returns to RKO for the start of "Trail Street." Charles Wakefield Cadman, noted composer, was guest of honor at dinner at Harout's Har-Omar. Before leaving for New York, Alan Carney drove two friends to Las Vegas for a quickie marriage, then turned his house and car over to them for five weeks . . . William Powell is getting rigged with a new wardrobe for "Life with Father," having gained 11 pounds since production began . . . John Twist, the RKO writer, has spots before his eyes—in Technicolor. "Sinbad the Sailor" was just finished, and now he's scripting "Tycoon" and "Out of All Time," all getting the color treatment.

CALL SHEET: FRITZ LANG is arranging to send Min Selvin, his executive assistant, to Germany to search for a print of "The Girl in the Moon," which Lang made in 1928, later confiscated by the Nazis . . . ROSLYN KING, Miss Michigan of 1945, is singing in a Hollywood boulevard spot . . . BOB TUTON says he recently attended a very swank dinner party where lamb chops wore silk panties and the frogs' legs were clad in nylons . . . BING CROSBY is Paramount's top star with teen-agers, a recent survey showed, with Alan Ladd second, and Bob Hope tops as a comedian . . . JOHN BARTON, still Jeetering in "Tobacco Road," celebrates his golden wedding anniversary today with his wife, Anne Ashley. They were a vaude team for most of that time, twice touring the world. She retired from the stage in 1933, but since then John has played Jeeter Lester 3500 times . . . GEOFFREY HOMES turned in the screenplay of "Build My Gallows High," his own novel which has sold over 100,000 copies, and will get another RKO assignment . . . MEL TORME and the Meltones are looking for a manager . . . ED GARDNER said he once had an ambition to play with the St. Louis Cards but got lost in the shuffle . . . KENNETH RICHTER'S "Mexican Storybook" is being given an English soundtrack, Lloyd Friedgen and Edward LeVeque having bought in . . . RENE PEDRINI, formerly operator of The Penthouse in NY, is attracting a flock of film and radio people to his Cameo Room on the Strip.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: The terrible-tempered Walter Winchell was practically incommunicado for a couple of days. In a flare-up, he tore the telephone out by the roots and hurled it against the wall. Telephone company punished him by withholding service for 48 hours . . . Law partners Gordon Levoy and Albert Spar must have worn the rugs in their office pretty thin by now. Both their wives are expecting babies any hour . . . If you want to reach Bette Davis, Cafe Paesano in Bevhills is her almost-daily haunt . . . Barbara Britton is guest of honor tonight at the Junior Chamber of Commerce dinner in her hometown, Long Beach . . . George Pal becomes an American citizen tomorrow . . . Richard Llewellyn, under Metro contract, finished the screenplays of "If Winter Comes" and "Forsythe Saga," plus a play for the Theatre Guild, in the last six months . . . New tenant in Constance Collier's NY apartment is Sir Cedric Hardwicke, while she's out here working for Paramount . . . There's a dancer at Florentine Gardens named Eryll Flynn . . . Tom Drake and Beverly Tyler wonder whether "The Beginning or the End" isn't a sequel to "The Green Years." In the latter Tom's ambition was to become a scientist and Beverly's was to become his wife. In the atom bomb picture, Tom IS a scientist and Beverly IS his wife. That ought to satisfy the happy-ending fanatics, even if they have to sit through two pictures to reach it.—D.D.T.

RELIGIOUS GROUPS HIT FOR MISSING RADIO CHANCES

Chicago, June 12. — Religious groups were blasted today for failures in radio technique instructions at theological seminaries by Rev. Everett Parker, director of Joint Committee of Congregational, Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches in U.S., at closing session of annual meeting of American Association of Theological Seminaries. Church leader accused theologians of being more backward than any other social organizations.

He charged that quality of religious programs of all types presented were poor when measured by standards of good radio broadcasting, and based his complaint on survey of religious programs made by Council of Churches and by himself, with aid of Sterling Fisher, director of NBC's University of Air.

The survey revealed little known fact that there are almost as many interdenominational programs broadcast on weekdays as on Sundays. However, it was pointed out that only nine such weekday programs are aired during best hours, and of number eight are concentrated on Saturday night. Bulk of weekday airers are made at time when listening audience is predominently female.

It was also reported that only 21 seminaries are currently planning future developments to provide radio training, with most current radio work in schools is conducted as part of courses in speech or reading. "Get hep or get off the air," or words to that effect, was the reverend's closing line.

Son Enters $ Million Hart Estate Case

Two-way battle over the $1,000,000 estate of William S. Hart was indicated yesterday as actor's son, William S. Hart, Jr., filed a petition in Superior Court opposing the appointment of Francis Gudger and G. E. Frost as co-guardians of his aged father. Young Hart seeks the guardianship himself. The elder Hart is currently critically ill in the California Lutheran hospital.

"The sky's the limit for Green Years ("A wonderful motion picture.") Promotion!"

When the production wizards of M-G-M created a wonderful motion picture like "THE GREEN YEARS" it was a challenge to promotional ingenuity. We have reached high! SHIFT IN SO. CAL. BROADCASTERS SETUP MULLED

Executive board of Southern California Broadcasters yesterday mulled program of expanded activities which would, if consummated, scotch amalgamation with National Association of Broadcasters, plan previously considered.

Idea is to strengthen present setup and operate similarly to local newspaper organization. Latter group is getting increasingly tough with radio and further limiting coverage and standard "breaks" such as logs, etc., while also generally fronting for newspaper industry. Radio needs the same jolt and concerted representation, it's felt.

SCB will under plan being submitted to full membership confine itself to strictly local problems, civic and otherwise, and leave national radio picture to NAB. For first time SCB would hire a paid employe to attend all civic affairs, political and legislative activities, business meetings, etc. as industry front.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

Don Lee's new program chief, Charles Bulotti, Jr., has some definite ideas about band remotes on the network and most of them have to do with the need for a change. So to his staff he has issued a new set of rules incorporating the reforms he feels are necessary in handling band remotes. Summed up they are:

1—No joking or humor by announcers. Short and simple announcements.

2—Band leaders not allowed to speak on the air except in special cases which must be referred to his office.

3—No boisterous applause or yelling. Absolutely no whistling.

4—No lag between the end of a tune and announcement of the next number.

5—Only three 15-second credits to the remote point in a half hour and two credits in quarter hour.

6—Opening theme not to exceed 45 seconds.

7—Opening credit to be read not later than 20 seconds after theme and closing credit to be read through to coupling with announcer name and system cue.

Comes a time in every man's life when a windfall plops into his lap and the feeling overcomes him to shriek from the housetop, "Finally my big break has come." If such good fortune hasn't crossed your path don't despair, it's everyone's just due. Like, for instance, Arch Oboler, who has been asked by Metro if he'd like to direct "The Hucksters." Would he? What's been your lifetime ambition? Knowing Arch as we do we can speak for him and say nothing would please him more and he'd be willing to close the book on his professional career if he could direct Freddie Wakeman's satirical tome on the agency business. Not that he bears any grudge against radio or the people in it but he has tossed many a harpoon into the commercial aspects of radio. And what a job he'd do on the picture. Metro couldn't make a wiser choice.

Chain breaks . . . Encore Theatre, Schenley penicillin-sponsored sub for "This Is My Best," has already run into story trouble. Gripe seems to be that factual tales of the medical profesh hew to the same theme and do not allow for enough freedom of thought in making the series palatable through the 13-week summer span . . . Martin Block has bought a home in Encino and moves in toward end of the year . . . Gale Gordon takes over the title role of "Jonathan Trimble, Esq." from Donald Crips on Don Lee-Mutual Saturday . . . Jean McFarland, Coast publicity head for N. W. Ayer, and Bob Shanley, singer on the summer "Electric Hour," will make it a church wedding July 8 . . . Barbara Luddy joined the Chicago influx and back home to do her mike emoting from there . . . Incidentally, those Chicago lads are brightening up the sartorial scene. No sweat-shirters they.

It's not a new device but every now and then a smart operator comes along and takes advantages of its benefits. Cutting a record of an audition is a fairly costly venture considering that it's strictly on spec but there's a way to get around this layout of coin with the accomplishment of the same results. Latest to seize upon the "rain check" audition is Ken Dolan, and his packaging of George Raft in "The Private Eye" will get a free waxing in addition to a paid performance on Silver Theatre June 30. Disc will be taken off the line, copies run off and Dolan will be in business with "Private Eye." It has been done before on C. P. MacGregor's "Hollywood Skippy Theatre," "This Is My Best" and others of lesser importance. It also has the added advantage of having been heard on a regulation broadcast. So kiddies, if you have something real good you can save yourself the audition charge and get a free platter.

"Junior" Parsons is making it a little tough on her ma with her carrying-on in the Woodbury spot during the mater's illness. Posting the best gain of the Sunday aggregation in the Hooper advance, a lush 3.7, she has hiked the rating to 11.3 and that's going to be hard to maintain through the torrid weeks that lie ahead. Sharing the top increase with LOP's little girl is Jim Doane's "Amazing Mrs. Danbury," taking a 3.7 lift to 7.5. Other sabbath scores: "Ozzie and Harriet" 8.2, up 1.4; Cass Daley 11.2, off 1.2; "Blondie" 10.3, up .9; "Corliss Archer" 5.2, off .6; Fanny Brice 8.8, up .5; Frank Morgan 9; Fred Allen 16.3, off 3.5; Jimmie Fidler 4.9, off 1.9; "Parky's" 7.2, up .1; Walter Winchell 20.1, up 2.7. Sagging with the Monday list were Lux 16.4, off 2.6; Screen Guild Players 16.2, off 3.5; Jackie Coogan 4.6, off 1.1; Hedda Hopper 2.3, off .5; Lum and Abner 4.5, up 1; Supper Club 9.1, up .2.

Hitch hikes . . . It will be a rowdy hour of comedy for CBS when Lux washes out for eight weeks this month-end. Jack Kirkwood takes the last half and deal set by Jimmy Saphier rates him commercial coin for his insanities. Milton Berle leads off the hiatus segment . . . Doris Rader, one of the top commercial writers in radio, goes to N.Y. the 25th to lather up the Eddie Dunn summer sub for "Glamour Manor" with Ivory Snow . . . G. W. "Johnny" Johnstone in town for 10 days on a tour of duty for National Ass'n of Manufacturers of which he is director of radio public relations . . . Don Thornburgh to N.Y. Friday for two weeks of high brass huddles . . . Elliston Vinson, in charge of Foote, Cone & Belding motion picture division, has been made a veepee . . . Eddie Cantor broadcasts next week from Denver, which city was one of the winners in his safety drive, reducing fatalities by 80 per cent during May . . . Tom Lewis due back Sunday from program sessions in New York . . . William Gargan's "I Deal in Crime" will be heard locally for the first time July 8 after spanning the country over the ABC lines

MARTIN, CRYSTAL PREP 'TOO SOON' SIMULTANEOUSLY

Both Martin and Crystal Music companies have prepped for publication tunes of same title, "Too Soon", it was learned yesterday. Martin's version is work of Lou Alter and Eddie De Lange, written here on Coast, while Crystal composition, by Leo Cherne and Erwin Drake, was cleffed in NY. To heighten confusion, both will be ASCAP songs.

Artie Schwartz, Martin Music chieftain, evinced no intention of altering title, although he was tipped to similarity yesterday when round-robining all pop-plattery with announcement of availability of his "Too Soon". Neither firm has hit sales stalls with sheet copies as yet, although Crystal's version already has been disced, by Paul Cavanaugh Trio for Encore Records. Acording to copyright law, titles may be identical provided notes and lyrics are not; such is case in this instance.

Several months ago two songs simultaneously were issued under title "Kilroy Was Here". Paradise Music published a version by Paul Page and F-M Music a ditty by Ted Fio Rito and Slim Coates. As result, there was much confusion among singers, orks, dealers and recorders, even though Paradise publication was a BMI tune and F-M version an ASCAP song. Prior to that instance, titles had not confilcted for about a dozen years.

U.S. WILL TAKE BIG 5 CASE TO HIGHER COURT

court clash is expected over specific terminology.

A number of questions raised by the opinion would be determined in the decree itself. Among these are whether bidding for pictures is to be sealed or open, the length of time for the majors to make adjustments, whether the majors will consent to arbitration of disputes raised on bidding, and a more exact defnition of when a major can turn down a bid on the grounds that size and equipment of a theatre are inadequate.

PENDING SUITS ANGLE

Another problem currently being studied by legalities is whether the door is now open to a host of anti-trust suits by disgruntled exhibitors because of the judicial ukase that the majors have been violating the Sherman act in a number of respects.

Should the majors appeal, stay will be granted, which would delay the decree's operation until a Supreme Court ruling, ordinarily a matter of many months.

Meanwhile, a possible scramble for first run product by subsequent run houses shapes up. Big names could boost admission prices then put in formidable bids. It is pointed out also that theatres with plenty of coin could grab off the cream by picking up the top pictures of all companies. This would be particularly so in the smaller situations.

Industry lawyers are in hectic activity and all are practically impossible to reach as they huddle with company toppers to seek interpretation of the decision. Paramount legal staff, largest in the industry, was locked in with theatre executives the entire day.

WARNER LIGHTEST HIT

Single picture auction block sales affect Columbia and Universal most drastically, as each release more pictures annually than other companies and sell the entire year's quota in one block. Warners, which has been selling virtually all its product singly is seen as the one least likely to be affected. Other companies have been selling in blocks ranging from two to five films as ordered by the old consent decree.

Despite drastic effect decision may have on the film industry, stocks of the majors remained firm in today's trading, practically all closing slightly ahead on the day.

Universal has an early national sales convention scheduled and method of handling next season's product under terms of the decision will be presented to executives and salesmen at the huddle, provided analysis of decision is completed in time by company attorneys.

Decision is not likely to be popular one with either the government or the majors. Government was pressing for complete theatre divorcement as well as other reforms it considered necessary for distribution-exhibition operation. Whether either side will appeal is not know, Majors' attitude on appeal question will be determined after thorough interpretation of the decision.

PIED PIPER PEACE FIGURE 10G SAYS HUDDLESTON

Johnny Huddleston, former partner in Pied Pipers, has agreed to settle claims against group for $10,000. Under agreement now in the works, singer would get one-third of total as down payment, and would receive remainder in time payments. Amount is top offer of group to date and Huddleston's attorney has submitted acceptance on that basis. If there is any change on part of Pipers, two suits will be filed, one for an accounting, and one charging conspiracy of present foursome to expel him from his member-partnership following his discharge from Army in February.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

According to Francis Alstock present crisis facing our motion picture industry is due in greater part to human element within the industry. Alstock says as our films have been very successful in the Spanish speaking countries during the past few years, many Mexican cinematographers have come to believe that "they know it all", and are no longer interested in studying, investigating and trying to better our product.

"There is an alarming lack of good screen writers, directors and actors," he declares, "the Mexican cinema needs new talent; all you have to do is look around for it. There's plenty in Mexico."

Definitely, we agree with Francis Alstock. We do need new talent and there is too much of a genius complex floating around our studios.

During sermon following Mass for film colony, Jesuit priest Padre Benjamin Perez del Valle spoke of enormous possibilities of cinema as moral influence in this unmoral world. He suggested Catholics offer constructive criticism to our motion picture producers.

Directors, actors and technicians filled church pews. Representatives from practically all Hollywood companies local offices, as well as Mexican producers were present.

One of our dailies publishes story about composer Consuelo Velazquez, author of "Besame Mucho." Several of her songs have been used in Hollywood made films, records of her music are sold throughout the U.S. and played not only in America, but also in Europe. Yet Miss Velazquez has received, in total, thirty thousand pesos, that is, about six thousand dollars.

Cinemactress Emilia Guiu claims that she permitted sculptor to copy her face in marble, but the inconsiderate artist placed Emilia's face on statue, so that it appears the actress posed for the nude statue which is part of publicity of film.

SARNOFF SUBPENA FOR FCC HEARING IS DEMANDED

Sarnoff questioned on RCA's policy, chiefly as it affects unions, on volume production of FM receiving sets.

Mattson said that since RCA is one of largest manufacturers of sets, possessing 60 percent of all FM patents issued thus far, it would be impossible for UAM-CIO Broadcasting Corp., and other indies not now in AM business, and who are completely dependent upon success of FM for their continuance in broadcasting business, to make success of FM ventures if set production is curtailed.

"On the other hand," Mattson continued, "the failure of FM would affect NBC very little, since it intends merely to pipe its AM programs into its FM transmitter at little extra cost. Success of FM is likely to decrease its advertising revenues by reduction in population in the service area of metropolitan FM station as compared with that of its 50 kilowatt clear-channel standard broadcasting station."

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

Bevin's stand against admitting the 100,000 Hebrews, still a year after the war in detention camps in Germany, into Palestine, looks like a bid for the support of Arab leaders against Soviet expansion into the Middle East. The British foreign minister said he was against the entry for military and economic reasons, but it's hardly likely the ones stated are those in Bevin's mind. He says he'd have to send another division of troops to Palestine, but he already has moved much of the old Egyptian garrison there, and the Arab states have small armies. He's probably afraid of an uprising in which the Soviet might intervene, or the United Nations. Further, he knows that Palestine is not British territory, but a mandate. And he wants British troops over there in strategic places to protect the British oil interests and the route to India . . . Unfortunately it is true there are some elements in this country who prevent bringing more of the homeless Hebrews here, but those who have agitated for a home in Palestine are not these same persons, but those really interested in the Hebrew people. The Anglo-American Committee found that 95 per cent of the displaced Hebrews want to go to Palestine. The point is that it is wanted for a home.

THE MUSICAL REVIEW OF THE AMERICAS

The Musical Review of the Americas opened the five-performance run at the Wilshire-Ebell theatre last night. Carlos Valadez production is a melange of night club acts assembled in what appears to be a hurry and with very little rehearsing. Chuy Reyes is billed as the star and when he performs alone on the piano he is. His orchestra, however, is very weak, and is mainly responsible for a lot of low spots in the show. Other toppers in the bill are the Garcias, a dance team that is always a pleasure to watch. Bertica Serrano, a cute little package, dances and sings to garner sharp applause. The de Castro sisters do a singing act that goes over OK. The comedy act, Manyo Lopez and Tony Martinez, performed in some primitive humor and caught a few laughs that could have been dispensed with.

Trimmed down and rehearsed more, the show looks like a natural for a one-nighter tour but is not cut out for lengthy stands in big cities.

New York, June 12.—Hal Hodes, assistant to Jack Cohn, was Columbia's first witness today in company's plagiarism suit against Norman Krasna, author of "Dear Ruth," and play's producers, Bernard Hart and Joseph Hyman, tried in New York Supreme Court before Justice Samuel Null.

Charging Krasna had access to Columbia's screen property, "Dear Mr. Private," by Joseph Hoffman, when work made studio rounds in 1942, Hodes testified on alleged similarities between the two pieces in family backgrounds, locales, Young Sister antics, etc.

Depositions for various story departments of Hollywood producers was partially inserted in record, establishing date Hoffman submitted story to studios by author's agents, A. & S. Lyons. Harry Cohn is expected to testify tomorrow.

New Film Sales Policy Long Way Off, Belief

New York, June 13.—With appeal of the government trust suit certain and cross-appeals equally sure, the new type of selling, even if upheld by the Supreme Court, cannot be enforced for a minimum of another year, lawyers say. Fixing of the decree by the statutory court alone is expected to take months as both sides battle it out. The Schine case, which was decided in November, is still awaiting the final decree. Supreme Court generally takes from six months to a year to hand down a decision. Meanwhile a stay of execution is automatic.

Exhibitors who have been canvassed are in complete confusion, but reaction generally is unfavorable to the decision. It is widely feared that auction block

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

MUSICAL Revue of the Americas, which is playing a stand at the Wilshire Ebell, actually is a victim of the building material shortage. Revue originally was booked for the would-be reconverted Hollywood Canteen. That spot was supposed to open April 30 and the AGVA contracts were set for that date. With clampdown of building materials, nitery re-opening was postponed and the show found itself without a home Bookings have been hastily arranged for local spots in order to take down the nut on the play-or-pay four week tickets which AGVA insisted must be fulfilled. Producers of the show are now figuring to take the opus on the road and maybe take up the rest of the economic slack as well as show a profit.

One of the most important reports since the end of the war will be made public today—the proposal on international atomic development made to the United Nations by Bernard Baruch, one of the nation's most respected elder statesmen. Some of the details in connection with the proposed international authority were suggested yesterday in what was said by Senator Connolly. But you'll have to hear about it over your radio today and in the newspapers this afternoon to make certain whether we should, under the authority, stop making atomic bombs, and arrange by treaty that no nation, becoming a member, would have the later power to draw out. Although the story about how atomic energy is handled, for war or peace, is the story of most staggering import for our future, we are likely to be more concerned with something immediate—the fate of the OPA. Are we on the way now to high production, full employment, fair prices, and prosperity—or on the way to sky-rocketing prices, a period of feverish production and false prosperity, halted by a wave of strikes, and either an historic depression, or chaos? Prices are already on the way up, even with controls. The future is one into which we move with mixed fear and hope.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

In ancient days the poets wrote that prison walls were strong
That iron bars were durable and lasted very long.
But not in western pictures where the rustlers ride the trail
And take the sheriff's gun away and wander out of jail.
Along about the second reel they shoot
a lot of shots
And break the jail as if it were a can of apricots.

Looking at a galloping screen drama, you get the idea that an old western sheriff was elected to that office on account of his handsome mustache, or because he was kind to dumb animals, or something. It takes him about four reels to discover that the mysterious rider is working for the Texas Rangers and that the real crook is Abner Twigg, the village banker, who also owns the Silver Dollar gambling joint and is working hand in glove with the rustlers. Not only that, the sheriff's chief deputy is always in cahoots with the baddies, and the prisoners walk in and out of the stronghouse as freely as if it were the Southern Pacific Railroad station. It makes you wonder how a guy of his age and experience can be so dumb.

Bill Shakespeare never dreamed, when he was working for peanuts at the Globe theatre, that his "Henry V" would be performed by celluloid shadows for the benefit of Hollywood Bowl.

Out yonder in the valley where the California sun
Was hitting on all cylinders as Arctic reels were run,
The actors walked in Polar snow that burned their plodding feet,
And finally they had to quit because of snowy heat.

It's no news when a hoss player gets a runaround, but when a hoss gets pushed all over the marquee it is an item of interest. What started out as "Star from Heaven" was kicked into "Lucky Star" and later booted into "Gallant Bess." As a rule hosses get better treatment than riders around Hollywood.

Sometimes you wonder, when you hear the criminologists on the radio and their devious ways of detecting crime—sometimes you wonder why they don't buy ringside seats at a big fight. By a simple twist of the neck they could envision the nation's leading racketeers.

Now the film fans are demanding X-ray pictures of their favorite thesps, as if the columnists hadn't X-rayed 'em.

At times you see a picture show that makes you sad and sore.
In half an hour you learn that you have

At any rate the popcorn and candy bars are new.

CAST—Stars Frances Langford. Features Russell Wade, Ralph Edwards. Supporting players, Iris Adrian, Richard Martin, Jane Greer, Glenn Vernon, Paul Harvey, Regina Wallace, Jean Brooks, Tom Noonan, Dorothy Vaughan.

TRADESHOWN at Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Calif., June 11, 1946. Running time: 67 MINS.

"The Bamboo Blonde," turned out to be a gay soldier piece, doesn't quite reach the level intended, but nevertheless contrives measure of entertainment to fit into satisfactory supporter spot. Film would have benefitted considerably by making characters stronger instead of reducing some of them to sap proportions, and situations are amateurishly constructed, but overall spirit is frequently engaging and songs by Frances Langford, in star role, pleasing and melodic.

Story is told in flashback style, which doesn't strengthen it. Mag writer wants to know why a manufacturing concern tags all its products with Bamboo Blonde label, and explanation is basis for plot. Crew of a bomber going to South Pacific sees a blonde with their new skipper on eve of shoving off, and when they appear to be jinxed their luck changes when femme in strictly glamour pose is painted on body of plane. Boys dub her The Bamboo Blonde, and immediately they're sensation of Pacific war theatre in point of Zeros brought down and Jap ships sunk. Connection between bomber and products comes in through head of company having been manager of Miss Langford, nitery singer, the blonde.

Miss Langford does nice job with part, pleasantly warbling four numbers by Mort Greene and Lou Pollack. Russell Wade enacts plane skipper, but script doesn't do anything for him and he's presented in cluck role where there's no need for it. Ralph Edwards is Bamboo Blonde Products head, in whose small night club Miss Langford and Wade meet and where story has its beginning, offering stylized comedy performance which gets number of laughs. As Wade's finacee who doesn't work at it, Jane Greer is a pretty but inept heavy. Other characters are satisfactorily filled.

Anthony Mann didn't have more than half a chance with script as written by Olive Cooper and Lawrence Kimble, but his direction generally is good and he manages lightness for good effect. Herman Schlom handled production end and Charles O'Curren created and staged musical numbers. Photography by Frank Redman maintains high level, with balance of technical departments contributing effectively.

My Pal Trigger

(Western—with Songs)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Producer, Armand Schaefer. Director, Frank McDonald. Screenplay, Jack Townley and John K. Butler. Story, Paul Gangelin. Photography, William Bradford. Art, Gano Chittenden. Sets, John McCarthy, Jr. and Earl Wooden. Musical director, Morton Scott. Orchestral arrangements, Dale Butts. Film editor, Harry Keller. Sound, Richard Tyler. Costumes, Adele Palmer. Special effects, Howard and Theodore Lydecker. Makup, Bob Mark.

CAST—Stars Roy Rogers. Features George "Gabby" Hayes, Dale Evans, Jack Holt, LeRoy Mason, Roy Barcroft, Sam Flint, Kenne Duncan, Ralph Sanford, Francis McDonald, Harlan Briggs, William Haade, Bob Nolan and The Sons of the Pioneers, Alan Bridge, Paul E. Burns.

PREVIEWED at RCA studios, Hollywood, Calif., June 13, 1946. Running time: 79 MINS.

Starred along with his master in this one is Trigger, Roy Rogers' Palomino horse, and quite fittingly, for by and large it is Trigger's picture. Republic expanded the budget beyond what usually is earmarked for a Rogers vehicle and built a yarn glorifying the animal which comes off very well. Film nearly emerges from the western class of celluloid, but wisely just enough trappings were retained to suggest the sagebrush aroma and thereby please star's following.

Picture looks sure to earn back extra moola put into it, for in addition to attracting western addicts, through exploitation and special campaigning that vast horde of animal fanciers can be lured.

Story is modern, presenting Rogers as an itinerant breeder who tries to get a Palomino breeder, Gabby Hayes, put his stallion Trigger with a Rogers-owned brood mare. Refused, foaling is accomplished through a ruse and villain Jack Holt accidentally kills the stallion and eases blame onto hero. Hayes, as well as his daughter Dale Evans, try to prosecute Rogers, who jumps bail and hides out till foal is dropped. Youngster is Trigger revivified, and the man and his steed are at a loss how to ingratiate selves with sire's owner. It all resolves when Rogers goes to work for Holt, learns and publicly proves the straight of the killing and manages to save Hayes' ranch. Apparently the gal was dropped into the deal.

Focus of film never really leaves Trigger, his travails and triumphs. Horse romps through all his tricks and a lot of animal lore has been worked into script, all of it warmly pleasing and natural.

Rogers, Miss Evans and Hayes play with more restraint than usual, turning in highly creditable acting jobs. Holt's work in several cuts above that of average western heavy. Rest of cast are confined to merely bits, save Bob Nolan and The Sons of the Pioneers, who supplied their usual neat pace-change with oatunes.

Technically, picture far outshines usual Rogers fare. Producer Armand Schaefer gave generous gob of habiliments and director Frank McDonald extracted full measure of value. William Bradford's lensing was of an especially high order; his framing of the horse was properly pitched all the way to draw all possible dramatic effect. Other departments weighed in with telling accomplishments also.

Inside Job

(Melodrama)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Executive Producer, Ben Pivar. Producer-director, Jean Yarbrough. Screenplay, George Bricker, Jerry Warner. Original story, Tod Browning, Garret Fort. Photography, Maury Gertsman. Editor, Otto Ludwig. Music director, Frank Skinner. Art direction, Jack Otterson, Abraham Grossman. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman, Leigh Smith. Sound, Bernard B. Brown, Charles Carroll. Gowns, Vera West.

CAST—Preston Foster, Alan Curtis, Ann Rutherford, Joe Sawyer, Joan Fulton, Milburn Stone, Jimmie Moss, Samuel S. Hinds, Howard Freeman, John Berkes, Harry Brown, Joe Kirk.

PREVIEWED at studio, June 13, 1946. Running time: 65 MINS.

"Inside Job" is the story of a quarter of a million dollar robbery, and efforts of a racketeer and police to locate the man who turned the trick. Picture is mildly entertaining which should suffice for second billing. Alan Curtis, Preston Foster and Ann Rutherford enact top roles for all parts are worth, and Jean Yarbrough handled dual chore of producer-director with deft touch.

Curtis, wed to Miss Rutherford, is called in by Foster and told that if he doesn't come in with him on robbery his past as convict will be disclosed to store he's working for and he'll lose job. It's happened before, and Curtis decides to pull feat himself, setting himself up with enough capital so he and his spouse can live in clover thereafter. After the burglary of store, racketeer goes after hiding Curtis for his share, meeting his death in surprise ending.

Story by Tod Browning and Garrett Fort, as scripted by George Bricker and Jerry Warner, doesn't always ring true, particularly in case of ex-con's wife agreeing to turn crook with him moment after she learns her husband has prison record. Plot remains static through several reels, too, and finale carries Jimmy Valentine theme, without satisfactory wind-up of that earlier story.

Foster gives rugged impersonation as racketeering chief, but Curtis suffers through indecision of script writers whether to make him hero or heavy. Miss Rutherford's character, too, is none too clearly cleaved. Jimmie Moss will score with audiences as small youngster who is innocent cause of couple being caught by police. Joe Sawyer has brief role as lad's policeman father, and Milburn Stone is district attorney. Howard Freeman and John Berkes fare well in smaller roles. Technical credits are standard.

Renegades of the Rio Grande

(Western)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Associate producer, Oliver Drake. Director, Howard Bretherton. Original screenplay by Ande Lamb. Cameraman, Maury Gertsman. Musical director, Paul Sawtell. Art director, John B. Goodman. Sound, Bernard B. Brown and Glenn E. Anderson. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and Ray L. Jeffers. Film editor, Edward Curtiss.

CAST—Rod Cameron, Eddie Dew, Fuzzy Knight, Jennifer Holt, Ray Whitley, Glenn Strange, Edmund Cobb, Dick Alexander, Iris Clive and John James.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post theatre, Hollywood, Cal., June 13, 1946. Running time: 56 MINS.

Rod Cameron, falsely suspected by the Texas Rangers, does a lot of riding, shooting and pugilistic haymaking to solve the mystery of "Renegades of the Rio Grande." Rod is ably assisted by Eddie Dew and Fuzzy Knight, Rangers, who pinch Rod early in the picture as a baddie but discover later on that he is a goodie. Their efforts to re-establish law and order along the Rio Grande are helped along by Jennifer Holt, daughter of the wealthy ranchero who has been bumped off and robbed of 50 grand.

The plot is all about a map of the hidden treasure trove, mapped by Rod's younger brother, John James, who is rubbed out by Glenn Strange's gang of varmints. Rod is riding with his brother through the canyon when the kid is rubbed out, and at the same time the two rangers butt in and place Rod in custody, thinking he is a wrongie. Rod is the only one in the cast who knows where the map of the treasure trove is. It is secreted in the six-gun holster worn by the chief heavy, Glenn Strange, who doesn't know it.

The hunt for the map goes through a flock of adventures, with the holster kicked around during a roughhouse in the village saloon and tossed out of a window by Fuzzy Knight, who expects to pick it up when the fracas is over. Meanwhile Edmund Cobb, one of the miscreants, has been sprung from the jailhouse and picks up the holster, not knowing that the map is hidden therein.

It winds up at the hacienda where Jennifer lives, where the boys shoot and slug all over the balconies until the treasure map is found in the villain's own holster.

There is a revolutionary change in the final scene. Instead of riding out into the sunset, the Rangers ride out into the moonlight.

THE GRAPEVINE: Ann Dvorak was offered the choice role of Kate in "Arch of Triumph" by Enterprise. She turned it down, however, because studio wanted her to sign a three-year contract giving her services exclusively to Enterprise . . . On completion of his role in "The Chase," Alexis Minotis will accompany his wife, Katina Paxinou, to England, where she will work in Rank's production of "Uncle Silas." He will then proceed to Greece to reorganize the Greek National Theatre, of which he was a pre-war leading light. He plans to bring the company to the U.S. later for appearances in the Old Vic, Abbey theatre, Moscar Art theatre tradition . . . Bob Ryan must have read that New Yorker article on the lovable qualities of Sardinian donkeys. He's importing one from the Long Island breeder . . . Rosalind Russell is putting up the for sale sign on her northern California ranch . . . Arthur Blake tosses a cocktail party next week for all the famous faces he reddens with his impersonations . . . Mother and sister of Curtis Bernhardt have been notified they passed their final exams for U.S. naturalization . . . Los Angeles newsmen will stay close to their phones over the weekend, due to the threatened Maritime strike . . . Warners "Life with Father" is shooting around Irene Dunne. She's ill at home . . Coming out of a number silence, Jack Carson has now revealed how he happened to bet on Old Silk at Lincoln. He has six letters in his name, so—He bet on the sixth race, six furlongs, sixth entry on the sixth day of the sixth month (June 6) at Lincoln Fields. That was Old Silk. Carson's system worked perfectly. Old Silk came in sixth.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Sam Ruman, veteran assistant director, who has probably yelled "Quiet!" more often than a crow caws, is noted as a chain-smoker of cigars. So when Claire Trevor and Lawrence Tierney threw a birthday party for him on the set of RKO's "Deadlier than the Male," the birthday cake was decorated with 33 smouldering cigars . . . Merle Oberon, who has been ill for the past several weeks, was scheduled to take a bubble-bath in a scene for "Bella Donna" yesterday. Director Irving Pichel, advised the doctor had advised against any such capers, even for Art, changed it to a massage . . . Mike Todd is producing F. Hugh Herbert's play on Broadway this fall, and looked forward to many happy hours counting the fresh green stuff. Few days ago a newsman asked him what the play was titled, and Todd said, "Noblesse Oblige." Former had a tough time spelling it. So Todd immediately put in a call for Herbert and told him, "Here's a newspaperman, a Yale graduate, and even he is stumped by your title. How about changing it?" The new title, which won't cause any fumbles, is "For Love or Money" . . . Bird life behaved abominably on "The Chase" set. Shooting was held up several hours while the crew shooed out birds which had nested in trees on a patio set . . . OFF THE LOTS: Mary Lewis and Bob Eaton hosted a dinner party at The Kings for Li Ling Ai, Chinese woman producer-director, on her way back to China . . . Necks swivelled. Mouths gaped. And Louis B. CALL SHEET: AGNES MOOREHEAD brought her pet skunk, Flower, to Metro while she took costume tests for "Summer Holiday." All those people needn't have run for cover. ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Ben Hecht, whose "Spectre of the Rose" gets a splash preem tomorrow night at the Carthay Circle, will continue his own private psychological film cycle. "Spellbound" concerned a mad doctor. "Spectre" revolves around a mad dancer. His second Republic production will center on a mad musician. How much mad money this will amount to is still problematical, but it will probably be enough to allow Hecht another bout with the NY critics . . . Speaking of splashes, the reopened drugstore at Hollywood and Vine sold eight grand worth of rayon hose on its first day . . . Irwin Shaw will devote the rest of 1946 to writing a novel after finishing "Arch of Triumph" screenplay . . . Pity the poor extra note: On an Encinas location 450 players sweltered in winter clothing for scenes in—oh, the irony of it!—"It's a Wonderful Life" . . . Earl Wilson and wife will be out here June 21 for a two-week visit. Headquarters will be the Beverly Hills hotel . . . Kay Kyser's wife and daughter are back from the hospital . . . A writer was assigned to do a polish job on a noted colleague's screenplay. He returned it to the producer without a change. "I told you to do a polish job," the producer howled, "not an apple polish job!"—D.D.T.

KRASNA DEFENDS 'DEAR RUTH' PLOT IN STORY TRIAL

New York, June 13.—Second day of trial of Columbia's suit against Norma Krasna, charging latter with pirating his Broadway hit "Dear Ruth" from one of the studio's story properties, was climaxed today by testimony that Harry Cohn, Columbia president, had tried to buy rights to the play in July, 1944. To this claim by the defendant, Jules Stein and Lew Wasserman offered supporting testimony.

Another highlight was Krasna's claim on the witness stand that the role of "Miriam" in the play was taken from his observations of the letter-writing activities of Groucho Marx's daughter, Miriam — around which the Krasna play was constructed. Another section of the play was written around his experiences with his wife, Krasna testified. Writer also stated that basic idea for "Dear Ruth" was given him by Moss Hart, whose brother Bernard later produced it.

Krasna also stressed alleged dissimilarities between "Dear Ruth" and the original story by Joseph Hoffman bought by Columbia in 1942.

FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW FOR BUTTERWORTH

Charles Butterworth, 49, died early yesterday morning shortly after his automobile crashed into lamppost on Sunset Blvd. in 8500 block. He suffered fractured skull when thrown from car.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon, 3:00 p.m., at Pierce Bros. Beverly Hills Mortuary, 417 N. Maple Drive., for veteran stage and screen comedian. Body will be shipped to South Bend, Ind., his home town, immediately afterwards.

Following graduation from Notre Dame with law degree, Butterworth entered newspaper work at South Bend, later going to Chicago. From reporter he turned to vaudeville, and went on stage in 1926, in revue, "Americana." His monolog of a club president was so successful that he won later roles on Broadway, and in 1930 he came to Hollywood, where his first film was Warners "Life of the Party." Thereafter, he was known for his droll characters.

Two years ago, Butterworth spent eight months touring South Pacific. Returning, he went to New York and appeared in "Brighten the Corner," coming back to Hollywood six months ago.

Li Ling Ai Here, China-Bound

Li Ling Ai, femme Chinese film producer and lecturer, arrived yesterday for a 10-day stay. She is en route to China after spending last five years in the east lecturing on behalf of her country. In 1941 she worked in Hollywood as technical director on "Kukan," film dealing with China.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Frank Case died last week. And with him the Algonquin. Not that it won't continue to attract visitors to its famous doors on West 44th Street. But now, it will just be a hotel. With Frank it was, as Edna Ferber once said, "A club, refuge, free hospital, rendezvous, salon (one o) and mother's knees."

For 43 years, it was "home" to the great and near-great of the world. I doubt whether there is any well-known personality in the Seven Lively Arts who hasn't at one time or another lived in the Algonquin. Its hotel register with the names of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, John Barrymore, Irwin Cobb, Gertrude Atherton, John Drew, Joseph Hergesheimer, the Jack Whitings, Elsie Janis, Gene Markey, Hedda Hopper, Elliott Nugent, Tallulah Bankhead, Hendrik Van Loon, Bette Davis, Paul Lukas, Peter B. Kyne, Dave Chasen, Charles Brackett, Marian Anderson, Noel Coward, Rex Beach, Louis Bromfield, Joan Crawford and Jim Tully—just to name a few, is worth an autograph collector's ransom.

Frank and his Bertha entertained them all—not as owners of the hotel, but as hosts in their own home. The two winters I lived there—for I, too, enjoyed that distinction, I had only one complaint. I never caught up with my sleep. I'd come home after a late date, and optimistically, head for the elevator. But there, sitting in the lobby were Arthur Byron, Blanche Ring and Bijou Fernandez, reminiscing about "David" (Belasco) and "Charlie (Frohman), and "Maude" (Adams). I joined them for five minutes, and three hours later, I'd still be sitting there, held spellbound by their stories of the glamour in the theatre as they knew it, before gossip columns had robbed it of all illusion. Finally, arriving at my door, I'd be waylaid by Shirley Booth, who, separated at the moment from her husband, Ed Gardner, was sharing a room with Edith Van Cleeve. We nicknamed it "Girl's Dormitory," because it was the gathering place for all us bachelor girls. I'll never forget the evening that Ed stopped by to visit his pooch. As he stood framed in the doorway, looking at us sitting around in various negligees, he turned to Shirley and asked, "Tell me, darling, do you prefer college or marriage?"

More memories: Betty Field, who never knew what the weather was like before calling down first, because George Abbott hadn't as yet discovered her, and she couldn't afford a front room with a view . . . Constance Collier, holding court in the Rose Room . . . Orson Welles and his pretty wife, Virginia, who never dreamed then he would be "Citizen Kane" and she Mrs. Charlie Lederer . . . Julie Haydon, giving an impersonation of Julie Haydon in the lobby . . . Samson Raphaelson writing "Skylark" in Suite 1208 . . . Margo keeping the switchboard busy with her long distance calls to Francis Lederer . . . riding up and down the elevator with a discouraged actor who confided he wanted to stop singing and act, but no one would give him a chance. He finally made it—Walter Pidgeon . . . Martha Scott splurging in the Chinese Room with a whole table d'hote dinner when she received the news that she had the part of "Emily Webb" in "Our Town" . . . Johnny Weaver, writing his last book of poems . . . Meeting a pretty red-haired colleen who had just arrived from Ireland, and predicting Hollywood would grab her quick—ever hear of Geraldine Fitzgerald? . . . And finally, the maid on my floor who solemnly announced, "Such smart people in the Algonquin. Typewriters in every room!"

Yes, careers were born, and careers flourished in the Algonquin. And Frank Case watched them, discouraged or gay, with a paternal interest. Thirteen years ago, on the occasion of the 30th anniversary of the hotel, John Barrymore wrote him the following letter:

"Dear Frank:

"On the thirtieth anniversary of your picturesque and delightful hostelry I feel impelled by many fond and quaint memories to tender you my congratulations. The Algonquin, if I may say so, played a very pungent part in the kaleidoscopic fabric of my early manhood. I shall always remember most gratefully that whatever uneasiness I might have caused you, you bore with the equanimity of a celestial Boniface, which is not only a glittering commentary on your character but a distinct tribute to your arteries. Long may you wave!

"My affectionate greetings to you always.

Jack Barrymore"

It was Barrymore, too, who best summed up Frank when a visiting fireman once asked him what kind of a guy this innkeeper was. Barrymore hesitated for a moment, and then answered, "You see this tie? It's his!"

Now they have both caught up with each other again, and I'm sure the "celestial Boniface" and his incorrigible boarder are having a grand time swapping "Tales of a Wayward Inn."

SCOOPING AROUND: George Jean Nathan flabbergasted himself—and the U.A. press department when he turned up for a projection room showing of "Henry V." It was the first movie he had seen in ten years, and he claims it will be the last, because he knows he'll never again see another he considered so worthy of his superlatives. Such praise from this "Caesar" is almost equivalent to Larry Olivier's latest tribute—the M.A. degree which Tuft University is conferring on him in Boston (16). The only other fellow artists so honored were Otis Skinner in 1893, and his daughter, Cornelia, in 1935 . . . Kenny Baker is asking triple the salary he received in "One Touch of Venus," plus a percentage, to appear in the S. J. Perelman-Al Hirshfeld musical, "Sweet Bye and Bye," which is the reason why producer Nat Karson is shopping for another tenor . . . Clark Gable, George Raft, Sonja Henie, the Gary Coopers and Tyrone Power are just a few of the Hollywood celebs Constellationing here for the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight, but a lot of wisenheimers who refuse to be suckers for the black marketeering ringsides are settling for television parties . . . Rex Harrison is at the Drake . . George Kaufman is finding it easier to live on "Park Avenue" than putting it on paper with Nunnally Johnson. According to scuttlebutt, this Arthur Schwartz musical will get to Broadway much later than anticipated .

TELE TOPPERS SET FOR D.C. TREK ON HEARINGS

Parade of prospective televisors start east over weekend to attend engineerings hearings of local applicants for stations before Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D.C., June 20.

H. A. Crossland, g.m., heads group repping Howard Hughes. E. A. Hayes, engineering head, accompanies him. Howard Hughes and possibly Howard Hall, assistant secretary of Hughes Tool Co., will also appear. Hughes is out of town now but is definitely expected to put in appearance in capital.

Klaus Landsberg, director of Television Productions, Inc. (Paramount), leaves today. George Curran, engineering and research head of KFI, will leave over weekend, as will Paul Schultz, engineer of KLAC, who will rep Dorothy Thackrey video plea.

Others are expected to go to Washington from other points in country, principally New York. Don Lee pretty much covered its engineering here and it's unlikely that anyone will leave here to elaborate. Reps for Times-Mirror Co., National Broadcasting Co., and American Broadcasting Co., will also go from New York or are capital residents.

TECHNICOLOR PIX OUT OF BOUNDS FOR PAINTERS

Painters Local 644 notified all majors yesterday that its members will not work on sets intended for productions in Technicolor. Edict remains good as long as IAM Lodge 1185 members are not permitted to service the color cameras.

Latest movie in the jurisdictional scrap over machinists is aimed at rallying members of the IAM, non-AFL group, a number of which have swung over to AFL Federal Charter local to continue studio work. Curious angle is that Painters, an AFL union, is supporting a non-AFL local. Its support, however, is based on fact that the AFL directive of Dec. 26, 1945, gave machinists jurisdiction to Local 1185.

Painters, in notice to studios and Producers Association, charge that hiring of Federal Charter machinists to service Technicolor cameras is a violation of the AFL jurisdictional directive. Until such time as the asserted directive violation is halted, no painter will work on a color set. Approximately seven productions will be affected by the stop work order.

Studios were reported disturbed by Painters action. Indications were that most planned to dismiss any painter refusing to work on a color set. There is a probability that outside brush-wielders will be brought in from downtown to fill the jobs if production is hard hit.

GUILD PUTS BAN ON 'INSANITIES'

American Guild of Variety Artists has declared vaude unit producer J. F. Taylor nationally "unfair," and notified cast of "Hollywood Insanities" that they must stalk out of show or also be tableted. Unit is layout of a dozen performers, which has been sporadically touring along Coast, chiefly in Army camps. AGVA put Taylor, who operates local office, on its list after he refused to sign contract with union and post cash bond covering one week's salary for all performers in "Insanities."

"Hey, Abbott, what goes on around here? Didja see our new Hooperating? Well, it ain't good and let's do something about it?"

"Uh huh."

Such an imaginary conversation might pass between Lou Costello and Bud Abbott if it weren't so close to season's end and there was some doubt about their option takeup for next fall, which there isn't. Still and all, they certainly didn't take with a big broad grin the 4.3 dip which plummeted them to their year's low—10.6. Their fans didn't love them in May like they did in December but that goes pretty generally for the rest of the Thursday listing. Let's have a go at 'em:

Dick Haymes (new time) 7.3; Jack Haley 14, off 2.3; Lum and Abner 3.3, off .6; Meredith Willson 4.9; Kraft 7.6, off 4.7; "Rogues Gallery" 5.1, up .2; Rudy Vallee 9.4, off 3.4; "Suspense" 12, up 1.9; delayed return gives Tony Martin 6.1, off .7.

Durable Durante In 30th Anni

NOVELTY, NOSE KEEP JIMMY ON TOP

By GEORGE PHAIR

Jimmy Durante, in one of his zany moments years ago, ad-libbed his dramatic philosophy: "I know dere's a million good-lookin' guys, but I'm a novelty."

The Great Schnozzola has been a novelty in all the kaleidoscopic changes of the show business for 30 years but the novelty never wears off. His humor is as fresh and basic today as it was in a less opulent time when he functioned as a barker and lifted his mastodonic proboscis amid the salty breezes of Coney Island to plug the masterful musicianship of The Great Jimmy Durante, a maestro then unknown except to Jimmy Durante and the gang around Catherine street, Manhattan, where his industrious father conducted a barbershop without a mandolin or guitar or quartet hanging around.

Jimmy's musical career began when his old man bought a piano for home decoration. In that neighborhood it was a mark of social distinction to have a piano in the house. His thumping on the ivories resulted in numerous exchanges of thumps with the kids on Catherine street, which may or may not have developed the now celebrated schnozzle. It may also have developed his tendency to wreck pianos.

During the boom after World War I, Jimmy opened his own jernt, the Club Durante, one flight up over a used car salesroom on 58th street near Broadway, and there he hooked up with Lou Clayton and Eddie Jackson to form the wildest entertainment trio ever seen outside of a zoo. In the years that have passed Jimmy went on into wider fields but the trio still carries on.

In 1936 he took his nose to Europe, and great was the wonder thereat. In Glasgow, Sir Harry Lauder, climbed from his seat to the stage and joined Jimmy as a volunteer guest comedian. In London his proboscis was acclaimed in the sedate old Times as "a promontory among noses."

With his snoot hailed as an international phenomenon, along with Mount Everest, the Pyramids of Egypt and the Empire State Building, Jimmy had no trouble getting top roles in Hollywood. The producers realized that he had something colossal. Today he can point with more or less pride to a record of 27 films, including "Roadhouse Nights," "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "The Cuban," "Her Cardboard Lover," "The Passionate Plumber," "The Phantom President," "Blondie of the Follies," "Speak Easily," "Hell Below," "What No Beer," "Broadway to Hollywood," "Meet the Baron," "Palooka," "Hollywood Party," "Student Tour," "Strictly Dynamite," "George White's Scandals," "Carnival," "Land Without Music," "Start Cheering," "Sally, Irene and Mary," "Little Miss Broadway," "Melody Ranch," "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Two Girls and a Sailor," "Music for Millions" and his latest release, "Two Sisters from Boston," in which he plays his most sympathetic role.

STUDENT OF "FORM"

A hoss player in his younger days, Jimmy studied the racing form with the same enthusiasm that he now devotes to his film and radio roles. He was an authority on geography and knew every spot from Coast to Coast where it was possible to lose a two dollar bet. Naturally he played 'em on the nose.

Since those carefree days, Lou Clayton has taken over the manipulation of the Durante earnings, and Jimmy is current rated as a millionaire — but the hardest-work millionaire in show business. His energy at the age of 53 is astounding, but the coin that rolls into his exchequer is not the chief cause of his untiring industry. He spends little on himself and gives plenty away and would give away plenty more if it were not for the eagle eye of Clayton, his chancellor of the exchequer.

Jimmy eats sparingly, rarely takes a drink and does not believe in wasting much time on sleep—not while there is so much going on in the world about him. He has used every known tonic to preserve his hair but, as he explains it himself, "I'm the surrey with the fringe on top." The Great Schnozz has developed wider literary tastes since his early study of the form sheet. Now he reads a broad assortment of books, including an encyclopedia, to keep abreast of the changing world.

A man of robust humor, Jimmy keeps his quips clean, both at work and in his hours of leisure. On or off stage, he steers clear of off-color stories.

In the course of his long career in show business Durante has averaged at least two benefit performances per week. In one year he is known to have appeared in 372 shows to help out some person or group less fortunate than himself. Statistics estimate that he has done 4,120 benefit programs and appeared in at least 600 camp and hospital entertainments.

Jimmy's wife, to whom he was singularly devoted, died three years ago. His father, mother, sister and two brothers have long since passed on. He is a lonely man, except for a host of friends, and his closest friends are those he knew in the old, unprosperous days. Loyalty is his middle name.

No 4-Timer She Looked like Schnozzola would be captured in wedlock recently and pals didn't blame him. But the dame backed off. She said she couldn't go for four husbands at the same time.

"If I marry Jimmy," the gal stated, "I'd have to take Clayton, Jackson and Cohen (Leftie Louie). Those guys are with him always."

Newsweek Does Right By The Schnozzola

This week's issue of Newsweek Magazine gives Jimmy Durante an unprecedented salute on his 30th anniversary in show business. Besides a photograph of The Profile on its cover, magazine devotes five columns in its entertainment section to his career.

NO LASAGNA FOR JIMMY

By DAMON RUNYON

I think one of the saddest spectacles I ever witnessed is Jimmy Durante on a diet.

When he did not have two white quarters to rub together in his pants pocket he dreamed of a day when he could step into a restaurant and order all the food he pleased. Now he is making maybe $200,000 a year and he has been limited as to food by his croaker, or M.D.

"It's ironical," I said.

"No," said Jimmy, "It's gall bladder trouble."

"Do you mean you can't have even pasta fagiole?" I asked.

"Oh," groaned Jimmy.

"Or lasagna?" I queried.

"Oh, Oh," moaned James.

"Your doctor is a sadist," I said.

HERE'S SIME REVIEW ON SCHNOZ

(Sime's Review in 'Variety,' March 16, 1927)
LOU CLAYTON, EDDIE JACKSON and JIMMY DURANTE (10)
"Just for a Laugh" (Comedy and Songs)
34 MINS.: One and Full Stage
Loew's State (V.P.)

Here's a tough break, because it is necessary to say that these boys went over to a hit Monday night at the State, their initial vaude appearance as a trio.

It's tough because this was the chance awaited to send over a receipt in full for the many checks at their various sawdust joints. These, Lou Clayton, Eddie Jackson and Jimmy Durante, are cafe entertainers, by training, instinct, nature, good nature, ability, disposition, love (of coin) and anything else you may want to add.

New to vaude and how to frame a stage turn, with the cabaret or night-club floor so familiar, the boys did exceptionally well in routining by the Monday night performance. They clipped down to 34 minutes from 44 at the matinee.

Each of the boys go quite some on solo efforts. Those started with Eddie Jackson in his two individual tries, then Lou Clayton, who bowled them with his fancy step dancing, and finally, Jimmy with his negligee tax, or whatever it looks like.

Not overlooking Harry Donnelly's Parody Club orchestra, doing and sounding much better on the stage of the large State than it does in the one-flight-down Parody room. And it may be further particularized that the Donnelly orchestra can stand up with any in New York or on the road now, of its comparative size (10 men), for music or versatility.

With this trio of entertainers it's just a matter of routine for the stage. They have enough to select a corking act before the week is over, and hold that in reserve until they accept another stage engagement. Previously their only joint stage appearances have been for benefits, including their Winter Garden Sunday night engagements.—Sime.

DURANTE DEFIES MACHINE AGE

By The NOSE HIMSELF

Technocracy? Tryin' to turn the Durante into a nickel-in-the-slot machane, are they? It's humiliatin' to an artist like me.

I'm warnin' my constituents here an' now to vote against it.

Imagine me in the middle of a love scene, pressin' some haughty screen beauty to my lips—only to get my face cut by the wheels of a piece of mechanism.

Think of my beautiful works of art bein' exchanged at the boxoffice in terms of farm products an' factory wares. Imagine tradin' Garbo at the ticket window in Kansas for two pigs, a dozen ears of corn an' a can of tomatoes. Or lettin' the New York public see Clark Gable make love to Helen Hayes for six subway slugs, a strawhat and an armful of non-dividend payin' stocks!

If technocracy comes in we'll all be gettin' a mere $20,000 a year. Imagine the Durante havin' to struggle along on that. Why I spends more than that on me clothes. Jimmie-the-well-dressed man on $20,000 a year—why, it's preponderous!

Imagine me gettin' the same sallary as me valet, butler and other servants! When their payday comes, what am I going to do? Each of them muggs gets the same salary I do! Twenty grand. How're you goin' to pay off a retinue of 10 servants, when each is gettin' the same as you? Would I be mortified! Don't let Keaton talk you into votin' for technocracy. He's just jealous of my social position. The Durantes, Vanderbilts and Biddles ain't goin' to be stampeded at a time like this.

NEW FILM SALES POLICY AWAY OFF, BELIEF

method will shoot film rentals up. Smaller exhibs don't like the idea of never knowing where the next picture is coming from. Exhibs ahead of the last run are now worrying whether the subsequent will be able to outbid and take his run away.

Should the decision stand, it is expected to give strong impetus to theatre building by newcomers. Since old customers no longer have the inside track, the newcomer will be on equal competing basis and with a modern house can push the older theatres out of business. At least that's the fear of many exhibs operating old houses. Other exhibs are inclined to shrug their shoulders at the furore, pointing out that the appeal is an indication that the last word has not yet been heard. There is a strong feeling by Allied executives that an upset by the Supreme Court is certain.

After virtually all film stocks had advanced in Wednesday's market following the anti-trust decision, picture shares on today's market session began ignoring the ruling and followed the general mixed market trend. In today's trading, gains and losses were about even. Columbia slipped 75 cents, Universal was off 50 cents. Paramount rose $1, Loew's fractionally higher and Warners was up 50 cents. RKO and 20th-Fox were unchanged, although both climbed Wednesday.

had retired from all activity more than a year ago. He began his amateur hour on WHN, New York, during the depression and built it into one of radio's most successful shows. The program began its climb to national fame in 1935 when it went on the NBC Red Network under sponsorship of Chase and Sanborn, and later switched to Chrysler over CBS until 1939. For fourteen years he also conducted the Sunday Airer "Major Bowes Possesses Capitol Families." During the height of his amateur hour's popularity, he sent scores of troupes of his contest winners on tours of the U.S. theatres and reaped himself another fortune.

STAN KENTON TO TAKE ORK EAST

Stan Kenton has given up trying to wriggle out of eastern commitments and will take his band out of this area following vaudate at Million Dollar theatre week of Aug. 6. Maestro had wanted to stay on Coast with family and asked General Artists Corp. several weeks ago to get release from bookings agency had lined up. GAC was able to free him from stand at Pennsylvania hotel, NY, where he was to have opened on Sept. 2, but Eastwood Gardens, Detroit, and Cedar Point ballroom, Sandusky, O., would not release ork from commitments for weeks of Aug. 16 and 23, respectively.

Consequently, the batoneer now has GAC building up string of eastern bookings again, and he plans to remain away from Coast until next mid-winter. Kenton is vacationing this week in Mexico City and next week opens fortnight stand at Mission Beach, San Diego, following which he will come into Meadowbrook ballroom here for four weeks.

FED ANTI-TRUST RULES SEEN SHORT OF PEACE IDEAL

New York, June 13. — Federal Court's anti-trust decision is a step forward in fostering free enterprise, but the necessity for exhibitors and distributors settling trade practice differences is still not eliminated, said Harry Brandt, prexy of Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York in delivering his annual report today.

He warned that regulatory legislation would spell disaster and pleaded for grievance rectification within the confines of the industry. Divorcement, if granted, would have solved nothing since the rising number of percentage pictures makes distributors partners in every theatre in the nation, he said.

Brandt called for the formation of a new national association of indie exhibs supplying strong central leadership to destroy inequities currently burdening the industry. He also recommended a conference of exhibitors and distributors for formulation of a code of trade practices and solving of problems untouched by the court's decision.

Brandt said the ITOA is proud of its affiliation with American Theatres Association. Ted Gamble, chairman of ATA, said directors of organization meets next Tuesday to study the significance of the court order but also declared the industry must settle internal differences itself.

MAJORS AGREE ON FRENCH QUOTA

New York, June 13.—The eight majors making up the membership in the Motion Picture Export Association have voluntarily agreed not to release more than 124 dubbed features in France during the year starting July 1. Agreement was announced via cablegram sent the U.S. companies' European managers in France by Eric Johnston.

Johnston reiterated the statement, made during treaty discussions between Leon Blum, French envoy, and James F. Byrnes, that the American industry has neither the desire nor intention of flooding the French market with more pictures than it can absorb.

$30 MILLION PIC SLATE TOLD BY SELZNICK

pendents in cutting their top stars, directors, producers, writers in on profits to prevent them from slipping away to the indies.

Selznick also told a trade press conference last night that "Duel in the Sun," now being edited to two hours, 20 minutes, cost $5,250,000, with an additional million allotted for pre-release advertising and exploitation, and another million to be expended for the same purpose when the film is released.

Selznick said "The Paradine Case," which he will produce with Alfred Hitchcock directing, will roll in August; "Little Women," with Mervyn Leroy directing, September 15, followed by "What Every Bride Should Know" and "Intimate Notes," both to be produced by Allan Scott. Also on his schedule are "Joan of Arc," "Portrait of Jennie," "Sarah Bernhardt, "The Scarlet Lily," "Wings of the Dove," "Miss Hargreaves."

He declared that exploitation of the world market will act as a bulwark against the possibility of economic recession in the United States.

Plenty of competition from foreign producers will "shake Hollywood out of its smug attitude" and "force us to make better pictures." There is "no monopoly on art," he pointed out, and "film-making is an art."

Under Arizona Skies

(Western)

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producer, Scott R. Dunlap. Production manager, Charles J. Bigelow. Director, Lambert Hilliard. Assistant director, Eddie Davis. Photography, Harry Neumann. Recording, Frank McWhorter. Film editor, Fred Maguire. Musical director, Edward Kay. Settings, Vin Taylor. Screenplay by J. Benttley Cheney, based on a story by John McCarthy.

CAST — Johnny Mack Brown, Reno Blair, Raymond Hatton, Riley Hill, Tristram Coffin, Reed Howes, Ted Adams, Raphael Bennett, Frank LeRue, Steve Clark, Jack Rockwell, Bud Geary, Ted Mapes, Kermit Maynard and Smith Ballew and the Sons of the Sage.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post theatre, Hollywood, June 13, 1946. Running time: 56 MINS.

It starts with a no-good guy dealing a cold deck in a gambling jernt and winds up with justice in triumph as the pesky cattle rustlers are led away to the callaboose, something new in westerns, if you are looking at your first western.

Johnny Mack Brown and his humorous pal, Raymond Hatton collaborate in the foiling of skullduggery, aided in a feminine way by Reno Blair, also something new in Westerns. Reno, a blonde looker from Nevada, moved across the state line to ride for the first time on the screen in "Under Arizona Skies." She plays the honest daughter of the sheriff, who is also honest but kind of dumb, as most western sheriffs are on the screen. The sheriff generally tosses the wrong guy into the hoosegow in the second reel, causing the old reliable jail break, and it takes him three more reels and a lot of riding and shooting to discover who is the real leader of the culprits.

It was Steve Clark, a supposedly respectable rancher, who was chief of the rustling gang. It was he who had Brown and Hatton flung into durance vile on murder charges. Along comes Riley Hall, the honest son of an honest rancher, who opens the jail as easily as opening a can of tomatoes. Western jails are built like that.

Riley finally marries the gal, with music, and all's well. It is a mouthwatering picture, particularly during the rustling scenes, when 1,000 white-faced sirloin steaks look you right in the eye.

SEE 500G IN BOB HOPE BO

San Francisco, June 13.—After turning away 3,500 at Oakland auditorium Tuesday and running up a gross of $18,000 for one night's stand, Bob Hope's barnstorming vaude show jammed the Civic auditorium here last night for a record $20,000 take. If Hope continues his present money pace, his management says the 30-day junket will net half a million dollars.

Kill Kilroy

Current "Kilroy Was Here" gag interrupted production yesterday on Columbia's Humphrey Bogart starrer, "Dead Reckoning." After a shot showing Bogart inspecting caskets in a morgue, set decorator Lew Diage spotted an inscription a wag had written on one of the coffins—"Kilroy IS Here, I Hope." Footage had to be reshot—without the gag.

now with him on picture location at Jasper National Park in Canada.

Reports reaching here are that Crosby has virtually committed himself orally to the GM deal and that the papers will be signed when they return to Hollywood unless some hitch develops. Under GM sponsorship the program would go to ABC which has no policy against discs across the chain.

Under the proposal made to Crosby he could have a choice of live or waxed programs. He has indicated that he would start off the series in person and then platter remainder of the first cycle. He would do live shows while in town on picture work or cutting Decca records.

PETRILLO CHARGED BY U.S. ON LEA ACT VIOLATION of other means, did attempt to coerce, compel and constrain" the Drovers' Journal Publishing Co., owned and operators of the broadcaster, to agree to hire three men not needed by it to perform its services.

Petrillo has stated that he called the WAAF strike to test the constitutionality of the Lea Act, which calls for maximum of one year's imprisonment or $1,000 fine, or both, for anyone found guilty of compelling or attempting to compel broadcasters to hire more employes than they need.

According to Woll, action followed several days of investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other federal agencies. "The district attorney presumes that the Lea Act is constitutional," Woll stated today, "and any question about the constitutionality of it is for the court to decide."

Under a new court procedure, a summons was issued to Petrillo instead of a warrant, thus permitting the AFM prez to appear voluntarily in the case and not having to put up bail. Woll, in giving the summons, said he did not believe Petrillo would attempt to escape prosecution. The hearing has been set for June 21 in the court of Judge Walter J. Labuy.

COL B'CASTING SETS UP COLLAR CONTRACT DATE

Columbia Broadcasting System here has agreed to terminate existing contract with Office Employes International Union on January 1, 1947, cutting contract short one year of formerly agreed termination date. In place of ticket that had year and a half to go, net and union will negotiate a new ticket which will very probably contain pay hikes for white collarites.

OEIU assumed contract that was formerly held by Screen Office Employees Guild, and which had been for two years. Dissatisfaction with terms, particularly with wage scales ranging between $26 and $36 for clerical help, caused immediate beef. When employes concerned, union's sole radio "in" in town, demonstrated restlessness with situation, OEIU took action. Strike and placing on unfair list was threatened, while union sought placating change in tenure, if not improvement of conditions. Change was heavily pushed to brighten OEIU'S picture within radio industry, organization of which is expected to follow.

LEGIT OPENING

"OBSESSION"

"Obsession" opened a break-in run in Santa Barbara last night at the Lobero theatre. The play by Louis Zerneuil, which was adopted by James Hinton is actually 19 years old and shows its age. Precursor of the modern psychological play, "Obsession" was equipped with a lot of cheap theatrics, old style cliche-dialogue and corny melodrama. Its attempt at entertainment misses by far, and it certainly is not guaranteed to be commercial. Stars Basil Rathbone and Eugenie Leontovich get cloyed occasionally by the dialogue. Otherwise it is a losing fight on their part to keep the play going. Reginald Denham tried his best at direction. Stewart Chaney created and lighted a magnificent apartment set. Homer Curran produced the show in association with Russell Lewis and Howard Young.

Star, Director Ill; Halt 'Last Frontier'

EDDIE CANTOR

Dear Jimmy:

It was in the summer of 1910, wasn't it, when we first met in Coney Island? I was a singing waiter at Carey Walsh's and you played the piano next door. Your piano playing hasn't improved a lot in all the years—your voice has never lost its foghorn tone —you're certainly not any prettier! Now, why all this "to-do" about your 30th Anniversary in show business?

Stop wondering, because I'm going to tell you. You're one of the nicest guys show business has ever known. You never consciously hurt anyone. The size of your schnozzola is a peanut compared with the bigness of your heart. I look back through the years and remember with a great deal of joy all the benefits you played and the people you've helped, and you've done all of this with a modesty that is so becoming.

Sweetheart, you're a cinch to be around to celebrate your 50th Anniversary in the entertainment world. You deserve that and more. Oh, why the hell don't I quit beating about the bush? Jimmy, I love you—will you marry me?

Affectionately,

Eddie

Sorrell Wires Johnston, Demands New Contracts

Threat of economic action unless studios come through immediately with wage raises and contracts was made Saturday by the Conference of Studio Unions. In a wire demanding an immediate meeting, CSU charged producers with lack of good faith in carrying out contract negotiations and also with violation of the AFL arbitration directive of Dec. 26, 1945.

Conference move further complicates the muddled studio labor picture, which has darkened considerable in the past few weeks with jurisdictional squabbles, work stoppages and other

Washington, June 16.—U.S. film funds tied up in France stand to be clipped for up to $1,000,000 under the French capital tax of Aug. 15, 1945. HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

AMERICAN Federation of Musicians will soon notify all concerned that managers, agents etc., may not also be employers, thus discouraging attempts of many to go into recording business. Rex Riccardi, recording assistant to James C. Petrillo, is preparing official notification that will instruct (locally) Harold Oxley, Maurice Cohen and others that they cannot be both employer and representative of talent. Oxley will not be permitted, therefore, to continue with his Bongo Records, and Cohen's announced Palladium label is out, too. Significantly, Cohen recently released Paul Neighbors, singer, from personal contract. It's thought that he perhaps had wind of coming events, though stating he was too busy with other things to sufficiently rep Neighbors.

PINE-THOMAS have hit upon practical scheme for building up action of their pictures, after settling upon topic which they think can be exploited. Both former publicity men, and Maxwell Shane, who writes their stories, an ex-flack, trio huddles before picture is written on newspaper ads and how feature may be sold to theatre men. They try to figure out angles which may be interpolated into picture, as basis for theatre campaign, and otherwise set up format of story action which may be exploited when picture is ready for release. Recent case in point was "Swamp Fire," Johnny Weissmuller starrer, whose screenplay was entirely worked out from exploitation angle before it was written. Same held true in "Jungle Flight," their next film for Paramount release.

SONGWRITERS Irving Taylor and Dave Franklin have placed latest, "I Want a Doll with Great Big Blue Eyes," with Buddy Morris Music. Last three were published by Martin Music, with "Lilly Belle" and "One-zy, Two-zy" achieving hit rating. Reason for switch is that Martin yet has another Taylor-Franklin item, "My Honey's Kiss," which at present is scheduled for release around end of month and writers thought it better to get another publisher back of "I Want Doll" on basis of hopes that Morris will make song "No. 1 Plug" on its agenda, and they already were assured that Martin is behind "Kiss" to that degree.

WHEN the Warner Bros. brought on talking pictures 20 years ago, it was rough on players who were considered "strictly silent picture actors," therefore veritably mute. Among this group, who found it tough going because they "couldn't talk," were Francis X. Bushman and Herbert Rawlinson, who were both b.o. draws in the silent days. Payoff on the situation came about a few days ago. When the "Masquerades" radio opus moved to Hollywood from Chicago, about 300 radio, or "talking actors" were tested for a couple of character parts, and who got the parts but Francis X. Bushman and Herbert Rawlinson.

Deadline for Murder

(Melodrama)

TWENTIETH-FOX RELEASE. Producer, Sol M. Wurtzel. Director, James Tinling. Story by Irving Cummings, Jr. Screenplay by Irving Cummings, Jr. Production manager, Sherman Harris. Photography, Benjamin Kline. Art direction, Jerome Pycha. Set decorations, Sydney Moore. Musical score, Rudy Schrager. Sound, John Carter. Technical director, Frank L. James. Assistant director, Rex Bailey. Film editor, William F. Claxton.

TRADESHOWN at Enterprise Studios, Hollywood, Cal., June 13, 1946. Running time: 66 MINS.

"Deadline for Murder" is tense, thrilling, cops-and-robbers melodrama with both the cops and robbers putting on a most convincing performance. There are three interesting murders, and a murderer who is clever, ruthless and mysterious enough to keep most of the cast in trouble and the audience on the edge of the seats. Tossed in among the thrills for good measure is a femme menace with exotic glamour and an adequate amount of romance to lighten the drama. Altogether, the show is nicely fashioned to the taste of exacting whodunit fans and looks like a good bet for the box office.

Top role of the picture is that of the quiet-mannered, but tough and shrewd homicide detective, played by Paul Kelly. Kent Taylor, as the romantic lead, has an equally fat part as a doughty gambling man who turns amateur detective to help a lady friend recover a highly important missing document. They both do an excellent acting job. Taylor accounts nicely for the romantic sequences with Sheila Ryan and is equally successful with the fisticuffs and gunplay that fell to his lot.

Renee Carson puts on a good show as the foreign mystery gal who has her own interest in the missing document and keeps mixed up in the murdering throughout the yarn. Miss Ryan, as a girl reporter, carries conviction as Taylor's sweetheart if she doesn't seem quite probable as a newspaper reporter the fault is more with the script than herself. John Blair, Marian Martin, Leslie Vincent, Matt McHugh, Jody Gilbert and Edward Marr earn high credit in their respective roles and the balance of the cast matches up well with the principals.

James Tinling's direction and the Irving Cummings, Jr. script make every bith of action count in telling the story. Dialogue is snappy and held down to the minimum requirement of the yarn. Continuity is smooth and Tinling has pointed the drama sharply.

Sol Wurtzel gets full value out of his production materials to turn out a show that calls for no apologies. Camera work of Benjamin Kline and other technical elements are of top quality.

And it might be mentioned that the film has one character, Penelope, not named in the cast who isn't by any means the least of the mysteries and who contributes the final surprise.

Petrillo Turns Self In, Attorneys Reserve Plea

Chicago, June 16.—James C. Petrillo shucked out ten crisp $100 bills in Federal Court and today was free on bond after surrendering to the Government on charges of violating the Lea Act by calling a strike at Station WAAF. Petrillo, by surrendering before the U.S. marshal could serve him with a summons, pulled the spotlight back on his campaign to prove the Lea Act unconstitutional.

Petrillo appeared in Federal Court with his attorneys, Joe Padway and David Katz. Counsel for the AFM boss stated he "would like to withhold a plea at this time." With U.S. District Attorney J. Albert Woll in agreement, Petrillo was given until July 15 to file motions and until Aug. 5 to file briefs in support of his motions. The Government will be required to file its answer by Sept. 9, Federal Judge Walter J. Labuy ruled. Latter set bond of $1000.

PRESSBURGER TELLS EUROPEAN PLANS

Arnold Pressburger is formulating a program of two-continent production. Film topper plans, in near future, to resume operations in London of his British Cine Alliance organization. Fred Pressburger, producer's son and associate, leaves for Paris next month to get operations going.

Hollywood Bowl Cast Completed

Cast for Hollywood Bowl presentation of "Carmen" has been completed with Winifred Heidt signed for the title role. Others in top spots are Ramon Vinay, James Pease and Marina Koshetz. Leopold Stokowsky will baton the opera, which opens Symphonies Under the Stars series this year July 9.

Guild stand is result of accusation that "talent groups do not function honestly in protecting their members and have become sounding boards for ideologies inimical to the American way of life." SAG statement declared "The Screen Actors Guild has in the past, does now and will in the future rigorously oppose by every power which is within its legal rights any Fascist or Communist influence in the motion picture industry or the ranks of labor."

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

It doesn't seem natural—here we are without a major strike in progress. But don't take it too hard. The virtual ending of the OPA may start a new wave. One thing about this OPA. It seems that since the end of the war it has operated almost like Prohibition. Manufacturers, faced with a ceiling here, just don't make that item, and turn to another without a ceiling. If there's a ceiling on tumblers and none on glasses with stems, they make glasses with stems. If there is one on children's shoes, and none on sandals, they make sandals. The theory of the OPA, to keep prices at a point where a fair profit can be made, and prevent prices rising to fantastic and dangerous heights, is good—but it just isn't working. The removal of the OPA controls may be disastrous, but we have asked for it. We can only hope that controls have been on long enough to dull the effect of the blows to come—that production now can spurt forward at a pace almost equal to demand in a way to keep prices from precipitous heights. The coming period will be one to test whether the industrial conception of free enterprise includes not only the demand for opportunities, but also the assumption of responsibilities toward competitors, the consumer, the country, and the world.

Stormy Waters

(Drama)

METRO RELEASE of a Jean Gremillon production, produced in France. Director, Roger Desormieres. Script, Jaques Prevert. Adaptation, Andre Cayotte. Based on story by Roger Vercel. Photography, A. Therard and Lnee. Montage, Yvonne Martin. Music, Roland-Manuel.

CAST—Stars Jean Gabin, Madeleine Renau and Michel Morgan. Features Blanette Jean, Marchat. Supporting players, Nane Germon, Jean Daste, Bergeron, Poupon, Anne Laurens, Perez, Duhamel, Pons, Sinoel, Fernand Ledoux.

TRADESHOWN at Metro, June 15, 1946. Running time: 85 MINS.

For spots where French-language pictures are exhibited, "Stormy Waters" no doubt will meet with favor. For American audiences, however, picture is without promise. There are no English titles to enlighten the non-speaking spectator and without any such key to the plot the narrative fails to make much sense. Most interesting phase of film for American audiences is the photography, which is low-key throughout but catches the action admirably.

Jean Gabin, co-starred with Madeleine Renau and Michel Morgan, plays role of a French salvage tug captain, who falls in love with the wife of a captain whose ship he tries to save in a storm. When latter captain cuts hawser which is hauling him into port, to save salvage charges, Michel, in this role, leaves him, and her romance with Gabin is continued on shore later. Gabin's wife is played by Miss Renau, who endeavors to gett Gabin to leave the sea.

Plot is typically Gallic and generally well played for a French picture but is strictly not for theatres in this country. Gabin delivers strongly and has capable support in his two co-stars and balance of cast, headed by Blanette Jean, Marchat and Fernand Ledoux. Roles are atmospherically enacted. Technical departments particularly are outstanding, with direction by Roger Desormieres fluid and well paced.

When the 167-foot lighter-than-air craft pulls out of Hughes Airport it will be followed by an on-the-ground crew of 15, including: two jeeps, two house trailers, a portable mooring mast, two trucks, and the lead car driven by flight engineer George Studor.

JOHNSTON SEES LABOR LEARNING

Abuse of power is bad, no matter who is responsible, Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Association, declared in his commencement address yesterday at the University of Southern California.

"Business and unions are important, but they're not omnipotent," Johnston emphasized. "Only the people should be that. Just as I think that the employer must learn that labor is not a commodity, so must the labor leader learn that the worker is not a pawn in a chess game of labor power politics. I think unions, like business, are learning this slowly, but again, I think, surely."

SYMPHONY, ARA MERGE IN MASS PRODUCTION PLAN

Merger of Symphony Records with ARA was effected over weekend with Jacques Rachmilovich selling out to latter, which acquires all master platters formerly made under the Symphony label. In future, Rachmilovich and Santa Monica Symphony which he leads will record for ARA, and discs will be released under label, ARA-Symphony.

Deal in no way affects ARA which continues its pop platter operations under former single name. In effect, Symphony will continue to operate as creator, while ARA handles production and distribution of platters, with Rachmilovich group getting percentage of ARA-Symphony cuttings. Symphony will not share in ARA setup.

Hope is to mass produce symphonic and classical records on scale with Victor, Columbia and other toppers, with accent on what's believed to be an untapped reservoir of overlooked materials which have been lost in rush of other recorders to platter best knowns. Stress, therefore, will be laid on obscure but recognizedly great music, and contemporary composers. Methods will be very similar to those employed by Rachmilovich when independently recording. Santa Monica Symph and Symph Records have introduced many heretofore unheard contemporary pieces, and have recorded for first time certain works of Russian, French and other composers.

Rachmilovich leaves within 10 days on a Europpean tour that will include direction of concerts in Milan, Naples, Rome and Florence. He has also been invited to guest-direct at Zurich and Vienna but may not be able to accept, expecting to return here in August to prepare for Santa Monica season in October.

CIO BARELY MISS CBS COLLARS

New York, June 16.—United Office Professional Workers of America, CIO, came within nine votes of gaining recognition as bargaining agent for CBS white collar workers in the National Labor Relations Board election held Friday. UOPWA may still win the recognition, provided it can snag nine of the 23 challenged ballots. Validity of which are to be determined by NLRB.

There were 670 ballots cast, with 326 going to the CIO union, nine to IATSE; 103 for IBEW Class "B" local; and 208 for no union affiliation.

PASCAL PLANNING BERNARD SHAW PRODUCTION

New York, June 16. — Gabriel Pascal, who arrived last week from London for New York opening of "Caesar and Cleopatra," plans to produce George Bernard Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma" or "Arms and the Man" in England, with cameras rolling in September. Choice depends upon which can be cast better.

Producer will make Paul Gallico's "Snow Goose" as following picture in August, 1947, under a contract with J. Arthur Rank for film's release through United World in this country. He currently is negotiating with an undisclosed American company to produce Shaw's "Devil's Disciple" and "The Showing Up of Blanco-Posnet," in U. S. during spring of 1948.

Pascal says he has decided not to build outside sets anymore but to travel to location. Public interest is in human faces and human stories, not gigantic sets, he added.

British producer also plans London and Broadway presentations this coming fall of a stage play which Marcel Pagnol is writing, based on Pagnol's French film, "The Baker's Wife."

Taplinger Signed to Par Prod Post

Robert S. Taplinger has been signed by Henry Ginsberg to a production post at Paramount. He checks into new post this week, upon completion of current chores with Walter Wanger Productions.

SEE "RHAPSODY IN RYTHM" FILLER TOO MUSICRAFTY

Somebody got too serious about it all and went musicrafty with the summer replacer that might have otherwise joined the seasonal snacks as another unobtrusive but adequate filler. Instead, program emerged as being somewhat short of a musical relaxer, and demanding concentration that was unrewarded. Sometimes it was even disturbing.

The ingredients were there but someone apparently fell in love with the seasoning and missed making of it an all-around appealer, due particularly to the heavy stress on the Dixie school of music. Too often an arranger's holiday was evident . . . and that isn't ever commercial.

Summerweight personalities, such as Connie Haines, Skitch Henderson, the Golden Gate Quartette, and Jan Savitt's orchestra are sufficient to carry any of the types over the hot spell, if left to less empty and trick arrangements.

Individual performances were with it when not swamped by cleffed instruction. Even the commercials were less glaring. Perhaps those concerned tried too hard. They have many weeks in which to try again, and they have the stuff with which to please for summer.

Pritchett on Leave For Stint on Air

David Selznick has granted leave of absence to Florence Pritchett until Sept. 1 so she can appear on the Walter Winchell summer replacement with Quentin Reynolds and Ben Grauer. One of the "Four Urges" used in the exploitation of "Duel in the Sun," she will be given a five-minute segment each Sunday to talk on the woman's side of the news.

Alice Joyce Injured

Alice Joyce, stage and silent film star, and former wife of Metro director-producer Clarence Brown, was in serious condition in Hollywood Presbyterian hospital after her station wagon collided with another car and she suffered a fractured right leg and lacerations to the head.

Vivian Blaine Trek

Vivian Blaine opens engagement at Chicago theatre, Chicago, on June 28 on first leg of personal appearance tour. Trek will take her to Roxy in New York.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

In a razzle dazzle finish that left the field panting in his dust, Bob Hope broke the tape in the Hooper Sweepstakes to rule as undisputed champ of '45-'46. Topping off another red letter season, the master mimic checked in with an even 26 despite a last writeoff of minus 1.5. "The McGee's," who have one-two'd it with Hope the past few years, took their stiffest setback and skidded five points to 18.5, which dropped them into the fourth slot. Walter Winchell scooted into the runnerup position at 20.1 and Red Skelton finished in the money with 19.5. WW's opposish, Manhattan Merry Go Round, was clocked at 11.9 and the Jordans gave up 6.4 of the night's potential to "Encore Theatre." Others finished in this fashion (competish in parentheses):

Lux 16.4 (Info Please 9.5); Fred Allen 16.3 (Screen Guild Players 16.2); "Mr. D.A." 15.9 (Bob Crosby) 7.2); Phil Baker 15.5 (Hour of Charm 8.8); Kay Kyser 14.9; Jack Haley 14; Judy Canova 13.4 (Sat. Night Serenade 8.6); Eddie Cantor 13.3 (Frank Sinatra 7.2); We the People 12.8 (Parky's 7.2); "Can You Top This?" 12.5; Your Hit Parade 12.5 (Gangbusters 9.3).

Now for a few individual ratings: Jack Carson 7.3, off 1.6; "Date with Judy" 10.4, off .6; Alan Young 4.8, off .7; Duffy's Tavern 8.7, off 2.2; Durante-Moore 8.5, off .9; Maisie 7.8, off .6; Orson Welles 5; "People Are Funny" 8.9, off 4.9; Tommy Riggs 6.6, off .5. For first time this season Tom Breneman fails to show in the 10 top daytimers, being crowded out by a fraction.

Bing Crosby-GM deal will be finalized early next week after The Groaner returns from picture location in Canada. That is, of course, if no new bugs show up. The program will be set up like this: Peggy Lee (or her type) as femme vocalist; "Skitch" Henderson, piano solo and accompaniment; Les Paul, guitarist, The Charioteers and John Scott Trotter and the choir. Glenn Wheaton will produce and Bill Morrow looks after the script. First four or five shows would be done live and one or two others during the season at Crosby's option. Still hopeful that the GM deal may run afoul clinkers, Tom Harrington has dispatched Frank O'Connor to Jasper National Park to talk over a deal with Bing for a Ted Bates client.

Chain breaks . . . That's a novel idea cooked up by ABC's promotion manager, Jack O'Mara, to whip up trade interest in the network through the device of having guesses made on how high the Hooper will go on the Louis-Conn fight Wednesday night. Rating applies only to KECA and the five who come closest to the official count will be rewarded with wrist watches. It's smart promotion for the reason that the titular shindy is almost certain to set a new high for KECA and that makes potent ammunition for the time sellers . . . Wauhillau La Hay, N. W. Ayer's peregrinating press head, passing a couple of weeks here going over summer and fall campaigns with Jean McFarland . . . Bob Crosby gets an eight-week layoff after July 17 airing and CBS makes the hiatus fill from N.Y. . . . Dennis Day show for Colgate is all set and waiting for a good time to open up . . . Mann Holiner and the missus fly east today on the Constellation and after a biz session with his agency partners traipses off for a vacation, probably at Banff, Canada. Dorothy Lamour and Harry Owens' orchestra are being packaged in a musical drama of Hawaiian legends . . . Norman Blackburn will supervise the writing and production of the T. Dorsey summer series . . . Vaughn Monroe's music will be the summer fill for Abbott and Costello starting July 4.

Judge Justin Miller, prexy of National Association of Broadcasters, will have a few pointed remarks to make tomorrow to the Advertising Club on freedom of speech. He will take the international viewpoint but the crux of his talk will be a concentrate of domestic problems. He prefers to call them "dilemmas." Free speech, as it affects radio, has broad implications but getting down to cases it takes in a small group of so-called firebrands. To name a few there are Walter Winchell, Drew Pearson, Fulton Lewis, Jr., Gabriel Heatter and Hans Kaltenborn. Were these flame throwers to be eliminated or toned down the issue would be brought into bold focus. Naturally the politicos would like nothing better than to have them gagged but in a democracy like ours that could never get beyond the wishful thinking stage. Since the commentator crew started blasting and blistering the air there have been few national scandals and it's our guess that Teapot Dome and other sell-outs would never have gotten to the pay-off stage if the Pearsons, Winchells, Lewises and other stormy petrels, so-called, were on the firing line. We're in favor of gagging the guys who want to gag the commentators.

Hitch hikes . . . Columbia's program-minded prexy, William S. Paley, is due out in July and will pass two months with the production staff at KNX installing his own ideas and boning up on Coast methods . . . Deana Carlson ended her long Army service and resumes her free lance writing . . . Al Kaye put on wax last Friday at NBC the "Our Town" audition with Burgess Meredith and Jerome Cowan for Ass'n of American Railroads. Only the title was leased from Thornton Wilder and the air series will take nothing from the play . . . Sid Ziff, long an outstanding sports authority, takes over the Cal Tinney time (10 p.m. KECA) for Thrifty, five times a week, beginning tonight . . . Another ex-Army officer, Pat Bishop, resumes with his newscasting for Brooks on KFI Sundays . . . New executive setup at Coca Cola is reported to have ordered termination of the band series on Mutual.

JAMISON, SHANLEY KEEP EDDY SPOT ILLUMINATED

Timed for straw hat duty while Nelson Eddy is on mid-year sabbatical duty, Summer Electric Hour won't be too much of a let down from what the program offers in season. Full content is music of modern design within modest budgetary limits. Robert Armbruster holds over in the maestro's dock, Charlie Herbert continues as show pacer and cue flipper, and the voices of Anne Jamison, Bob Shanley and The Sportsmen calk the Eddy void acceptably.

Musical will hold its own in Sunday afternoon spot on CBS and do as well as most of its category. It will deliver only what it pretends to be—a hot weather filler with nominal singing voices and fine accompanying music. Miss Jamison has been around the kilocycles for a decade or more and has often done guest duty with Eddy. As sopranos go in radio, she cannot be rated with the best, yet she is a forthright singer. Her rendition of "Over the Rainbow" was in her metier, but the others betrayed a wisp of thinness. Shanley will be remembered in Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" and he dedicated his first number, "They Say It's Wonderful," to Berlin, which he prefaced with, "Berlin Was Like a Father to Me." A nice Father's day touch and the only reference to the occasion.

Armbruster's music has long been rated with the best that comes out of these etherized climes. His arrangements are earthy and lilty and there has been a careful avoidance of over-orchestration. The Sportsmen group their voices in an even blending of tunes in the pop catalog and are utilized for an occasional back-up of the vocalists. Herbert's direction is uniformly firm in keeping the tempo keyed so lightness and melody. "Tib" Corning intones the commercials with a feathery touch, a pleasant relief from the barking tobacco salesman.

For an institutional job the Eddy substitute should hold the line for the summer quarter and the rating won't dip too precipitatley. If it gets Hooperated around 6 there should be no complaints, considering the lightweight budget.

GENE AUTRY RIDES INTO AUDITORIUM WITH GOOD SHOW

Gene Autrey's "Flying A" Ranch Rodeo romped into town Friday and paraded a thoroughly satisfying show at the Pan-Pacific Auditorium. First time locally that lariat-whirlers and broncoes have been shown indoors, affair has enough savour of wide open spaces to please, plus added values accruing to production and picturesque routines by virtue of being housed where customers are afforded finer view and better lighting and staging made possible.

Rodeo has been sporadically shown to bounteous boxoffice in eastern keys and southwest, which shaped the smooth pacing evinced here. The tanbark arena is mite too small, certainly too narrow, to enable cowhands to work with complete ease while roping and steer-dogging, but few will notice. Autry at least rounded up a parcel of the top prize-money waddies in Far West and they sprinkle in plenty of thrills during the bronc - busting, calf - roping, steer - wrestling and bull-riding events.

Flash numbers are far more colorful than usually found in rodeos. A sock is six mounted couples doing a square-dance. Ray Ramsey is a standout with his Roman riding atop two milk-white steeds, and another scorer is the acrobatic and lariat act of Ray Berwick and Buff Brady. There's a session of trick riding by mixed sextet, also orb-opening.

Autry's two appearances pack plenty punch. In putting his horse Champion through succession of stunts and highly trained tricks, star evoked round upon round of ovations. Later, star signs, flanked by almost entire cast putting on a production setting of Old West

Clowns George Mills, Jack Knapp, Doug Alexander and Happy Kellems cavort around the arena throughout, an especially neat touch for the kids. Cass County Boys, oatuners off Autry's airshow, are augmented by Melody Ranch Boys in rendering specialty-spot prairie plaints. Herb Wilkins' band plays show, and well. Abe Lefton, who has piece of rodeo, along with star, Everett Colborn and local business Walter E. Smith, does the announcing and his patter is perfectly pitched for the thing.

The court will probably enter a preliminary judgment next month after which it will get motions from both the government and the film firms for amendments. These will have to be studied and acted upon in advance of the final judgment.

In view of the fact that the important provisions will be carried up to the Supreme Court on appeal, stays will probably be granted by the New York court on nearly all of them, to maintain a status quo pending final decision by the high court.

JURISDICTION ROW AS UNIONS EYE AUTRY SHOW

Jurisdictional fight looms between the American Guild of Variety Artists and the Rodeo Cowboys Association. Arthur Kay, Western regional chief of AGVA, will sit in with bronc-busters' union reps on Tuesday night to hash over matter. Flareup came when Gene Autrey's Rodeo opened here at Pan Pacific Auditorium on Friday and AGVA attempted to seek jurisdiction over, and hence enmember, the novelty and acrobatic acts in show.

Claimed by the live-talent union where trick roping turn of Berwick and Brady, acro drum-majorette Bobbie Mann and four clowns. In view of fact that AGVA already has facts with all circuses and carnival acts, plus several rodeos and horse-shows which have trouped through here, Kaye made his representations to Abe Lefton, Autrey's trick announcer as well as investor in spectacle. When Lefton staved off approach, the Cowboy's Association red tangled with the AGVA in an argument and finally both decided to bring it up for calm arbitration. AGVA is affiliated with American Federation of Labor, whereas Cowboys Association is tied to no international. However, it is known that latter union, which has contracts with almost all rodeos and traveling horse tricks, has been flirtingwith the CIO for some time.

SORRELL PUSHES STUDIO DEMAND

tieups. Unless definite plan of action for accord is offered soon, virtual production shutdown is seen.

SORRELL WIRES JOHNSTON

Conference wire, signed by Herbert K. Sorrell, prexy, was sent out Saturday to Eric Johnston, president of Motion Picture Association of America; E. J. Mannix, president of Association of Motion Picture Producers; Pat Casey, labor contact, and to presidents of the 10 major film studios. Copies also went to international presidents of the painters, carpenters, electrical workers, building service and machinists. It read:

"On February 16, 1946 the Conference of Studio Unions served an ultimatum on studios demanding negotiations for higher wages and for contracts. Producers promised to bargain in good faith.

"Thus far no union has negotiated a contract. Producers are not bargaining in good faith and are also in violation of the American Federation of Labor arbitration directive of December 26, 1945.

MEET DEMANDED

"We demand an immediate meeting with you, and unless a substantial wage increase and contracts are offered at once we shall be forced to take economic action."

Battle over studio machinists, which Painters Local entered last Thursday, has resulted in a number of layoffs by studios. Metro, Warners and Paramount have all let scenic painters, general painters, etc., go for refusal to work on sets intended Technicolor productions. Painters take position that AFL arbitration directive gave machine work to International Association of Machinists Lodge 1185, currently under suspension by the AFL, and brush wielders will not paint color sets until IAM machinists are permitted to service Technicolor cameras.

Previously studios had been threatened with work stoppages by AFL local unless the IAM men were taken off the job. Studios have dismissed only six IAM men. Latter have filed unfair labor practice charges with the National Labor Relations Board over dismissals. Painters entered picture to help rally Lodge 1185 members, a number of whom had gone over to the Federal charter machinists local to enable them to continue studio work.

New threat was made by IATSE locals' business agents Friday morning at Columbia. Threat was centered on Lodge 1185 laboratory workers at the studio, the first move against Lab men since jurisdictional fight came to a head. Columbia was told that IA lab men would be pulled if studio did not drop the Lodge 1185 men working in the lab. So far Columbia has stood pat against the threat without IA taking action.

MAYER DINNER INCLUDING ONLY TOP TOPPERS

Industry dinner being hosted by Louis B. Mayer Wednesday night at the Beverly Hills hotel will be limited to company heads and top studio executives. In tomorrow will be Barney Balaban. Execs will be hosted by Henry Ginsberg at a cocktail party Thursday and leave for the east Saturday.

FRENCH TAX TO NIP U.S. BIZ FOR MILLION

France. Motion Picture Association of America has had its eye on the five per cent capital tax for some time.

Whether or not we would be clipped under it was not known until yesterday's memorandum on the new deal with the French. The new arrangement, however, does provide one benefit for American firms. Under it royalties paid to our firms for pictures shown in France can no longer be "considered as belonging to a permanent establishment in France of the American producers."

Section on our funds tied up in France because of the war says:

"American holdings blocked in France during the war cannot be exempted from the tax on capital established by the ordinance of Aug. 15, 1945. However, a distinction must be made between the tax on enrichment and the tax on capital. These funds will be exempt from the tax on enrichment and will be subject only to the capital tax."

DECISION RESERVED IN PLAGIARISM SUIT OF KRASNA

New York, June 16.—Decision has been reserved in Columbia's plagiarism suit against Norman Krasna, Bernard Hart and Joe Hyman, by Supreme Court Justice Samuel Null.

Harry Cohn, who had flown east for the trial, rebutted testimony by Krasna that latter had discussed the plot of his play, "Dear Ruth" with Cohn in July, 1944. Cohn claimed he wanted to talk a deal but Krasna said the play was not available and plot or title was not discussed. The Columbia prexy denied that Jerry Wald had made an appointment for Krasna to see him.

Moss Hart was on the stand to corroborate Krasna's statement that duo had discussed proposal to write a play on mistaken identity in 1943. Hart said he promised to produce and direct the play if Krasna would write it. Barret Clark, professor of the extension school of Columbia University, was called as an expert by the defense to testify that "Dear Ruth" was dissimilar to "Dear Mr. Private," play which Columbia bought from Joseph Hoffman and which it claims Krasna used as basis for "Ruth."

Schine Attorneys Argue For Stay in Trust Ruling

Buffalo, June 17.—Lawyers for Schine Circuit Theatres, Inc., argued today that last week's anti-trust decision in New York requires a stay of all proceedings against Schine until the Supreme Court can decide all issues.

Schine legalites contended that the Paramount decision eliminates in effect the abuses claimed by the government to have been practiced by Schine and as a result of which this court recently granted a drastic anti-trust release. They also declared that if the court, in the Paramount case, found cor-

MONOGRAM, which figured that the "Cisco Kid" series made by Phil Krasna for them were budgeted too high at $62,000 and burned when one went to $65,000, and bought him out, has not functioned economically as well since taking over. They budgeted the first two they made at $80,000 and the cost on the first hit $132,000 and the second $117,000, with the Monogram franchise holders a bit peeved as the returns on these pictures were not nearly as healthy as those made under the Krasna formula.

SAMENESS of large number of top-selling western-song records can be adduced probably to fact the same musicians get together to turn them out. Name western singers as a group are pretty pally and when one of them has a discing date the others pop up to scrape and strum the background music for the featured singer, and otherwise provide some chorus work. Among the group reciprocating on recordings are Spade Cooley, Columbia Records; Roy Rogers, Victor; Johnny Bond, Columbia; Jimmy Wakely, Decca; Deuce Spriggens, Mercury; Tex Ritter, Capitol; Wesley Tuttle, Capitol; Cliff Stonehead, Bel-Tone. Others, who are not wax soloists, but sit in with their instruments, include Tiny Hunt, Al Buckley and George Bamby.

INTERLOCKING interests of local radio and recording figure twisted an apologetic admission from him this week that he was using one to further the other—at expense of more honest competitors. Station he's interested in refused recordings from an agency on grounds that they were inferior. Actually reason was that they didn't bear label of his plattering plant. Agency got hep and just switched labels while retaining original disc which they resubmitted. Unable to say that "second" platter was also inferior station accepted it. Then agency blew its top, forcing admission that beef was a ruse which was to be followed with "suggestion" that favored recording plant be used.

TRADE is wondering about whyfors of unpleasant exit of Sammy Kaye from Palladium last week. Leader is known to have been peeved at management since he virtually ignored everyone during last week of stay and departed without so much as a fare-thee-well to anyone connected with dancery. IT looks like the "good old days" are here again with the announcement by Union Pacific that "Bloomer Girl" troupe arrives here Thursday morning in its own special train. As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The Soviet appears to be more cooperative. The concessions they made yesterday at Paris are not big ones, but they may show an important trend. They mean that we have advanced, even though slowly and with difficulty, in working out an Italian peace treaty. The Russian agreement to put Austria on the agenda also is an advance. Actually, there is no reason why we should not be able to come to agreements with the Soviet, especially on such matters as Italy and Austria. Maybe the Baruch atomic energy proposal already has had its effect. The Russian press and Soviet officials have not said anything about that yet, which means that it is at least being considered in its implications. The Communist press here and in England has not been so hesitant. It has denounced the idea as a scheme of "imperialist America" to extend her dominance, but the Red press has been crossed-up before, and it is to be hoped that's true this time of all times.

Film Review

The Man Who Dared

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Leonard S. Picker. Director, John Sturges. Screenplay, Edward Bock. Story, Maxwell Shane and Alex Gottlieb. Additional dialog, Malcolm Stuart Boylan. Photography, Philip Tannura. Film editor, Charles Nelson. Art, George Brooks. Sets, James Crowe. Musical director, Mischa Bakaleinikoff. Assistant director, Seymour Friedman. Sound, Philip Faulkner.

CAST—Leslie Brooks, George Macready, Forrest Tucker, Charles D. Brown, Warren Mills, Richad Hale, Charles Evans, Trevor Bardette, William Newell, Brooks Benedict, Tom Kingston, Doris Houck.

REVIEWED at Pantages theatre, Hollywood, Calif., June 17, 1946. Running time: 65 MINS.

Tepid fare, and with no one in cast offering very much marquee magnetism, "The Man Who Dared" will be niched into double bills and there will have to be coupled with stronger stuff. Exploitatively, no angles are apparent which can be used to fatten returns.

Pic lacks tenseness which yarn should have and in story itself as well as dialog and characters there is scant color. Nary a laugh and, too, there is none of that grimness of a good, taut melodrama.

Told a bit too leisurely and without much suspense is story of newspaper columnist burdened with phobia about court convictions on circumstantial evidence. Purposely he involves self in a murder, gets sentenced and then when he reaches for the evidence to clear self, not unexpectedly finds it gone. Denouement offers no twist or punch.

George Macready, in title role, plays it a bit too restrainedly and smugly. Leslie Brooks, as his fiance, is best in cast as a girl who clings to her man and eventually is instrumental in helping him beat the rap. Forrest Tucker, as lead's pal, has little that is interesting to do or say. Charles D. Brown, by virtue of good thesping, manages to inject more bounce into part of district attorney than script provided. Warren Mills, as a youthful copyboy, and Richard Hale as a lawyer, are satisfactory. Other roles are but bits.

Producer Leonard S. Picker kept the budget down, which was wise as proceeds plucked by this one aren't going to be too robust. John Sturges, director, might have perked the pace more; there wasn't much he could have done with script, but had he made cast more alive, film would have benefitted. Philip Tannura's camera did a nice job of framing the thing.

Paul Neighbors has been inked for a singing role in "The Secret Heart" at Metro. Warbler was just discharged from the Army after four years overseas.

PAR PAYS OFF FUNDED DEBT

New York, June 17.—Pre-payment of $2,500,000 of its notes due 1949 to 1951 was made by Paramount Pictures, Inc., on June 14. Paramount and all its worldwide consolidated subsidiaries, theatre and otherwise, now are entirely free of mortgage and funded indebtedness of any kind, it was announced, other than $2,000,000 parent company notes due in 1951, which are convertible into common stock.

U.S. Rules Against Hughes On 'Outlaw' Injunction

New York, June 17.—Motion Picture Association of America won a complete victory in its fight against Howard Hughes' efforts to obtain a temporary injunction to prevent organization from revoking its seal or taking any action against advertising on "The Outlaw." Injunction was refused by U.S. District Court Judge John Bright, latter being outspoken in his opinion of Hughes' motives in the court action.

Way is now open for MPAA to continue with its plans to expel Hughes. Latter resigned just before the start of the court action, but MPAA's plans were held up by a restraining order pending Judge Bright's decision in injunction.

There is a possibility that MPAA will withdraw its seal from the Hughes film, cutting him off from play dates in about 90 per cent of the nation's theatres, although Judge Bright's opinion said "I cannot bring myself to believe that the defendant will cancel its seal if the plaintiff carries out fairly its part."

In vacating the restraining order issued April 24 by Federal District Judge Vincent Leibell, the court held that:

"I know of no law which authorizes a party to accept the good in a contract and reject what he does not like. If (plaintiff) wishes to retrain the seal, it must be on condition that it adhere to the agreement under which it holds and has used it. This would only seem to be fair and equitable to the defendant, organized in part, to the knowledge of the motion picture public, to keep pictures decent and morally acceptable."

Judge Bright stated the entire controversy was precipitated by the plaintiff's acts in the use of disputed advertising and "it seems more an effort on the part of the plaintiff to add this case and its peregrinations as additional publicity and advertising in promotion of the picture." Decision recited various allegations concerning misuse of advertising which were not denied by plaintiff.

Decision declared since MPAA was concededly formed to establish and maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standards in production "I shall not interfere with the carrying out of that purpose, particularly in favor of one whose sole object is a selfish one."

Judge Samuel I. Rosenman represented MPAA in the fight while Charles Poletti acted as counsel for Hughes.

Howard Hughes' comment last night on the Federal Court decision was, "I want to be sure the public understands this merely a decision regarding my request for a temporary injunction. It has no bearing on the trial. When it does come to trial I intend to prosecute it with all the strength I have."

WRIGHT CITES INDIE ANTI-TRUST AFFECT

Anti-trust decision given in the Paramount case last week has many fine points for the independents, according to an opinion on the decision given yesterday by Loyd Wright at executive meeting of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers. Wright said the decision went further without dissolution than it would have with divorcement.

Meeting signaled year's service by Donald Nelson as head of the SIMPP and decision was reached to carry on work launched by him when he took on the industry post. Association feels work has been most valuable to the independent in obtaining distribution with restrictions.

BERGEN IN INDIE VENTURE IN TELE

cameras start grinding in about two weeks. Bergen leaves for Chicago today to attend ceremonies at Northwestern U., where he has underwritten several scholarships. On his return he expects to get into actual production on one and two reelers that will contain principles of animation particularly suited to video. Reels will be done in 16 and 35 millimeter.

Productionally, particular stress will be laid on sight acts and sketches that involve simple backgrounds and short and fast rolling programs that embrace principles of vaudeville. Puppets, shadowgraphs, silhouettes, pantomimes and breezy comedy and musical varieties will be strongly featured. Bergen will write and produce, he says, but may also engage in acting—but sans Charlie McCarthy and his familiar ventriloquism at first.

• JUST FOR VARIETY •

THE GRAPEVINE: With the censorship-minded clucking madly over such films as "The Outlaw," Kitty," etc., and such books as "Duchess Hotspur," "Forever Amber," and other specimens of "historical" fiction, the boldest, baddest book of them all is decorating the bookstalls under the demure title of "Memoirs of Hecate County." Author is Edmund Wilson, the New Yorker book reviewer and one of the toughest of the lot. His book is a collection of stories of suburban life in the Thirties. With a somewhat clinical approach, he gets words, situations and characters into print that would have the censors in full cry after a more sensationally advertised book . . . Quite a comedown for C. B. DeMille. Famed for luxurious bathing scenes in his films, with bathtubs like a Roman emperor's, "Unconquered" will have Paulette Goddard soaping herself in a barrel . . . Marsha Hunt asked for and received her release from a Metro contract yesterday . . . A leading lady was about to fire her maid after a diamond ring disappeared from her home. Her husband's conscience nudged him just in time, and he admitted pawning the trinket . . . Mitch Leisen will fly to NY next month to greet Marlene Dietrich on her arrival from Europe. He'll direct her in "Golden Earrings" . . . Van Heflin is negotiating with Humphrey Bogart for purchase of the latter's boat, "The Sluggy."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: This will probably be disillusioning for ro-manticists who have dreamed of Egypt as the land of the Pharoahs, the inscrutable desert, moon-touched capers 'neath the pyramids, and a dash of Sax Rohmer. A returnee, who just finished working on the Arabian pipeline, brings back the news, however, that the current Pharoah, King Farouk, operates a heavy-tab nitery called Club de Chasse with a Harry James type band blatting out jive within sight of the Sphinx. And that's the last of the Pharoahs—a roadhouse proprietor . . . Coke Miller and three Enterprise comrades went golfing over the weekend and came back with a weird tale. Coke teed off at a short hole at Lakeside, but couldn't find his ball after a lengthy search. Finally it was found in the branches of an oak. Hazards in the sky now! . . . Marshall Duffield, formed football star now local rep of Mumm's champagne, has promised studio propmen first crack at a shipment of display "empties" . . . Jimmy Wakely, the cowboy chirp, is having a mild feud with Dave Kapp, Decca Records' veepee in charge of waxing, over who will pick the numbers for whom . . . Hottest twosome at the Bevhills Tennis Club is Paramount's John Hoyt and Elliott Nugent, who are taking on all comers . . . Jim Lindsley of Associated Press covered eight campaigns in the Pacific with hardly a scratch. He broke his arm over the weekend while riding a horse bareback . . . Look Homeward, Angel note: Arch Oboler, shooting backgrounds in Chicago for Metro's "The Arnello Affair," is working a few blocks away from his birthplace.

CALL SHEET: HARVEY REVEL takes his "Vetville" housing project plans to Washington and New York tonight, where President Truman, General Omar Bradley, Mayor O'Dwyer and other governmental bigwigs are scheduled to look them over . . JIMMY DUNN and other Brooklyn-born stars have been invited to an aerial preem of "The Kid from Brooklyn" by Samuel Goldwyn, who has chartered a Constellation for the purpose. It may have something to do with publicity or something . . . I. C. GOLDSMITH, J. Arthur Rank rep, has signed Lou Bunin, whose puppets were manipulated for "Ziegfeld Follies" scenes, to a two-picture-a-year deal . . . AL SACK is designing a soundproof room for his la Quinta home, where he will devote most of his free time to composing . . . ANNA Q. NILLSON is back at Metro after a 25-year hiatus. She'll have a top role in "The Secret Heart," after being off the screen for a dozen years . . . SKINS MILLER and JERRY JAMES, Paramount actors on location at Jasper National Park with "The Emperor's Waltz," won the first fishing medals given by the Maligne River Fishing Club for catching a 16-pound speckled trout. Nothing malignant about that.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Metro front office is doing a burn over the Desi Arnaz situation. Studio let him out of a $650-a-week contract when he told execs he was going to get a few fellows together and form a little rhumba band. Now his asking price is $75,000 per picture! . . . Several film actresses are in for a rude shock when Curtis Bernhardt's book "Speaking of Women," hits the bookstalls next month . . . The Daniele Amfitheatrofs will entertain Mrs. Elsa Respighi, widow of the Italian composer, when she arrives from Rome this week . . . Metro is angling for six-year-old Derek Scott, now playing one of William Powell's sons in "Life with Father" at Warners . . . Lilli Palmer's mother is planing to Hollywood from England next month to visit her daughter and son-in-law, Rex Harrison . . . Bob Hutton celebrated his 26th birthday at Hollywood Park and betting on every jockey numbered 2 or 6. Wound up behind the 8 ball . . . Sharing the staring at West Side Tennis Club yesterday were Tahia Kerim and Viveca Lindfors, studies in contrasting beauty, former being from Egypt, latter from Sweden . . . Anatole Litvak wants Lucille Ball for the role opposite Henry Fonda in "A Time to Kill" . . . Basil is a 160-pound mastiff who is supposed to look and act fierce in "The Chase," but it's obvious he never heard of the Stanislavsky method, or even David Belasco. He keeps wagging his tail at the villain . . . Martin Field says a newly-invented potion for troublesome drunks ought to be called the Atomickey Finn.—D.D.T.

SORRELL THREAT ANSWER WAITED FROM TOPPERS

Studio labor situation remained tense yesterday in face of "economic action" threat delivered via telegram to all lots and company presidents by the Conference of Studio Unions. Answer to wire's demand for an immediate meeting, wage increases and contracts is not expected to be given by film toppers until later in the week. They gather here tomorrow for an industry dinner and may get together Thursday in a labor meeting to attempt ironing out of the situation.

Meantime, studios are finding it difficult to obtain painters to handle sets for Technicolor productions. Lots are also running in some trouble, although not critical yet, in obtaining carpenter work on such sets. Carpenters are on the job for all work in the mills, but are understood to be refusing assignments on color sets after work is out of the mill.

General optnion points to gradual slowdown in work that may reach a complete stoppage unless situation is solved before long, as painters and carpenters continue to support Machinists Lodge 1185 in jurisdictional fight with AFL locals.

PAR TO SET 6 PIX LOCATION RECORD

Paramount will set a location record shortly with six films shooting simultaneously away from the lot. Total of approximately 600 people will be working on the features which will range from pictures working along the Coast and inland to Canada. "My Favorite Brunette" will shoot in San Francisco and Pebble Beach. "The Big Haircut" will lens around Fresno and Stockton, with another unit slated to work in Kansas and South Dakota later. "Golden Earrings" will be off the lot in Northern California and Oregon. "The Emperor Waltz," meantime, is outdoors in Jasper National Park in Canada. "Unconquered," now shooting in Pennsylvania, will take off for more lensing in Idaho. "Jungle Flight," Pine-Thomas film for Paramount release, will shoot in the Sierras.

Light 'n' Airy

(on the ½ shell)

by JACK HELLMAN

Are you, too, a victim of the radio jolts? Well, you are even though you haven't been conscious or critical of it. But don't let it worry you any longer; Columbia's engineering genius, Les Bowman, is doing something about it and one of these days the sound level on your receiving set will be adjusted to the volume you like. The jolts, to elucidate, are what happens to you when the music or applause comes booming in after soft-spoken words. It fairly catapults you out of your easy chair to tone down the rising crescendo and when the voices come back you're up again to raise the voice level.

You may not know it but radio engineers have been plagued with these variable sounds for 20 years and CBS has finally gotten around to doing something about it. Experiments have been going on in New York for the past 14 months and CBS believes it has the solution: correct the evil at its source—the studio control room. Bowman has tried out the remedy on Coast sustainers with hopeful results and soon commercial programs will get the treatment. By next fall when the big shows come back you may be able to set the dial for volume and sit back and enjoy peak level transmission.

Chain breaks . . . Many of the tradesmen share this pillar's belief that "Sad Sack" may be the summer sleeper. If the writing holds up, all the better . . . The raiding season on comedy writers is on in full cry and if you haven't your dream boys nailed down you'll be sorry . . . What happened to all the tomes being written about radio? Waiting, no doubt, for the success of "The Hucksters" to wear off . . . "Maisie" calls it a year July 7 and keeps on going through the summer . . . Robert Taylor does "Men in White" on Encore Theatre July 2 . . . If we may be allowed to dip our paddle into a mild controversy we believe Tony Martin should confine his canarying to romantic stuff. That's what the gals want to hear and they're the ones who buy his sponsor's wares . . . Phil Lasky has opened an ad agency in Frisco in association with Wallace Elliott.

Hitch hikes . . . The wise boys had it all figured out that the depression would set in for Bob Hope once off the GI circuit and forced back to civilian jokes and audiences. So all the guy does to make a sucker of the oracles is to breeze home in the Hooper Stakes and finish the season 3.5 over last year's finale . . . Emily Vetter has left the Ayer agency where she was script girl and production aide to Phil Cohan on the Durante-Moore show . . . Father of Herb Vigran ("Sad Sack") died Sunday following a heart attack . . . Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan may roll down to Rio this summer . . . It was sporting of Jack Benny to help Phil Harris swing the Fitch deal for next season. To clinch it for his malapropish maestro he even agreed to skip down the hall after his show for an occasional guest call . . . Irving Brecher gave Ashmeade Scott his release from "Life of Riley" so he could head up the writing staff of Frank Ferrin's "Phone Again Finnegan."

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh Pan-Americaned back to London today, and will head directly for their country home in Buckinghamshire to recuperate from six thrilling, albeit exhausting weeks here. For Larry, this visit has been the greatest personal triumph of his career. Vivien, recuperating from her recent illness, has remained quietly in the background, reunioning with old friends and exploring the shops for "bundles for Britain." Last night, on the eve of their departure, they made their only public appearance together, when they attended the City Center preem of "Henry V." And because there have been no press functions or personal interviews (your Broadway Runaround excepted), a great many manufactured rumors have been widely circulated. Herewith are the true facts: Vivien is well enough to resume her career and will re-open "Skin of Our Teeth" in August. Larry will start rehearsals for "King Lear" in which he'll not only play the title role, but which he'll produce and direct on his own as his first and only appearance with the Old Vic this season. He has also tied up the English rights to "Born Yesterday," but, all reports to the contrary, neither he nor Vivien will appear in it. Garson Kanin will again handle the brilliant staging. In January, the Oliviers will return to Hollywood. Vivien will NOT play "Forever Amber." What picture she or Larry will appear in separately or together is still uncertain. But Sam Goldwyn is moving "Earth and High Heaven" to grab them first, and because they both agree with him that this Gwethalyn Graham beautiful love story would make a perftct co-starring vehicle for them, don't be surpsired if Sam's "A" in effort reaps "A" in result.

ADD ARRIVALS: George Burns and Gracie Allen at the Waldorf. Ditto Richard Whorf, Frankie Sinatra, Peter Lawford, Cobina Wright, Jr., Jerry Colonna and Kenneth MacKenna (Ed. note: Everyone wants to see if the hotel really looks like the picture!) . . . Rex Harrison at the St. Regis . . . Sonja Henie at the Sherry-Netherland . . . Jack Oakie at the Belmont-Plaza . . . Michael O'Shea at the Edison . . . Norman Krasna and Sidney Lanfield at the Plaza.

ITEMS DROPPED BY THE BROADWAYSIDE: Rex Harrison got quite a shock when on the day of his arrival here, the headlines shrieked the news, King of Siam Dead! . . When Charles Coburn has to leave the road tour of "Merry Wives of Windsor," there's every chance he'll be replaced by Alan Reed, who will take over the last week of the L.A. engagement . . . Lillian and Dorothy Gish will Clipper to Ireland for a summer's holiday as soon as they can get reservations . . . Helen Mencken is being very sotto voce about Betty Smith's new play, which is bringing her back to Broadway this fall . . . Joy Paige will be the leading lady at Sara Stamm's Newport Casino, where some talent scout will undoubtedly discover her for Hollywood! Her hubby, Bill Orr, may hero for Faye Emerson in "Here Today" at Richard Aldrich's Cape Playhouse while getting a new act together for a vaude break-in, before opening at a N.Y. nitery . . . George S. Kaufman wants it known that the only thing true about the persistent rumor that he is to marry Stephanie Bachelor is the Bachelor part—which he will remain.

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS: A few weeks ago, Hurd Hatfield gave a fare-well party to John Sutro on the eve of his departure for London. As he left, Sutro asked Hatfield if he could suggest any young actor who could play the lead opposite Francoise Rosay in Claude Renoir's production of "Torrents of Spring." Hurd racked his brains and not being able to think of anyone involuntarily exclaimed, "I only wish I could go!" Sutro stared at him with a double take. "Good heavens, old boy, why didn't I think of that before? You are the actor for the part!" Which explains why Sam Marx lost his leading man for Jan Clayton in "Jenny Was a Lady" and Hurd is now en route to Paris—the first American actor to pit his accent against an all French cast. Before he finally got off on the same Pan American, carrying the Old Vic company, he had plenty of practice airing his "Mon Dieus," trying to get a French visa!

"HAY" FOR HAYES: Grace Hays' little boy, Peter Lind, is clicking on all cylinders at the Copa and the offers are piling in as fast as his agent can assort them. The most attractive to Peter, who wants to get away from niteries and vaude is the bid from International, as a result of Nunnally Johnson's raves to Bill Goetz. Nunnally was a ringsider at the Copa during his recent "Park Avenue-ing" here and was so impressed with Peter's brilliant original style that he wants to write a tailer-made yarn for him, introducing him as a straight actor. Peter remains at the Copa until Sept., and after a month's holiday in Bermuda with his lovely frau, Mary Healy (who prefers being with him to traveling "Around the World" with Orson Welles), he'll head for the Coast to become a figure of "International" importance.

DISSA AND DATA: Moss Hart heads west within the next two weeks to raid Hollywood for his new play, as yet untitled and as yet unfinished, but which he hopes to have ready for a fall production. He is settling the hotel problem by houseguesting chez Otto Preminger . . . Jerry Hoffman's daughter, Marilyn, is seeing N.Y. for the first time in 17 years, but she's having more fun now than when she was two and a half! . . . No truth to the rumor that Jack Whiting is quitting "The Red Mill"—he has a run-of-the-play contract . . . Brenda Forbes didn't miss a performance of "Three to Get Ready," even when she received the shocking news of her husband, Frederic Voight's, tragic death . . . The special matinee of "Henry V," part 2, brought out a "pro" crowd, including Judith Anderson, Ernest Truex, Bobby Clark, Hurd Hatfield, Haila Stoddard, Joan Castle, Margalo Gillmore, Roger Stearns and Mady Christians . . . Russell Birdwell, off to England to handle his newest client, John Sutro.

KYSER, G. W. HILL FEUDING AGAIN ON NEW PACT

Kay Kyser and George Washington Hill are feuding again. It's only as serious, though, as either wants to make it. Newest flareup between the ol' professor of College of Musical Knowledge and the headman of American Tobacco (Luckies) is the result of Kyser's refusal to accept a new five-year deal.

"I just didn't like the terms and I told him so," said Kyser. "I made him a counter proposal but apparently he didn't like it. He refused to comment."

New five-year contract would replace a pact which has a year to run from Jan. 1, 1947, at which time Kyser resumes with Luckies after terminating a lend-lease arrangement with Colgate.

Kyser had other reasons for turning down the new Hill pact. He doesn't want to be tied down that long and further he's not so sure he wants to continue in radio. He doesn't like the idea of getting only a seven-week summer layoff while others are given 13 to 17 weeks (the latter Jack Benny, who also works for Hill). Before the start of last season Kyser threatened to retire from radio for a long rest but was persuaded by Hill to continue under Colgate auspices.

Billy Rose tells a Jolson Story

Reproduced from an advertisement appearing in the New York dailies

Not so long ago I dropped in at the Winter Garden to see a movie. Halfway through the fourth reel the plot sickened—and I stopped caring whether the boy got the girl. I got to thinking about a happier day at the Winter Garden when the plot didn't matter much, when the only thing that mattered was a sign out front that said "Al Jolson". There was a performer for you! There's been no entertainer in my time who could fracture an audience like the Singing Fool. When Al was going good you could attach a wire to him and he'd light up the city of Pittsburgh. I'll never forget the night I saw him in "Bombo". About halfway down the second act he stepped to the footlights and said, "Shall we go on with the plot, or would you rather have me sing a few songs?" They rang down the curtain, the cast went home, and Al took his coat off. Well, the buses left for Montclair and the trains pulled out for New Rochelle, but at one o'clock in the morning a jam-packed audience was still laughing and crying and cheering. The last of the great minstrels literally had to beg them to go home. Another night for the book comes back to me—a star-studded benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House. A tenor named Caruso had just sung "Ridi Pagliacci". Right after his ovation little Al strutted out — white gloves and black face — grinned at the audience and said, "You ain't heard nothin' yet!" When he finished singing "Rockabye Your Baby With a Dixie Melody" it wasn't applause—it was a sixteen-inch gun going off in a bedroom. I hear that an old friend of mine, Sid Skolsky, has just produced a fine film called "The Story of Al Jolson". Don't get me wrong, I love Sidney, but that Jolson movie is going to have a tough time following the man.

1933 They said no advertiser would ever sponsor so large a group as the Fred Waring organization—orchestra, glee club, and assorted vocalists. Fred realized the value of a flexible, versatile unit, capable of presenting many types of entertainment. He stuck to his ideas and in 1933 went on the air for the same sponsor that introduced Paul Whiteman.

1936 They said he couldn't hold his popular orchestra audience if he emphasized choral numbers and failed to stylize his orchestra. Starting in January of this year for the Ford Motor Company on NBC, Fred crystallized his offerings into a pattern that was to achieve overwhelming popularity: every number a vocal—more chorals—and a little bit of everything in every program.

1939 They said he couldn't sustain interest in the evening—five evenings a week. For five Things don't just happen—someone makes them happen.

NBC—its sponsors—and its stars have a habit of making things happen in the radio world.

Fred Waring is one of those NBC stars. For 27 years he has been making things happen in the music and radio world. In 1921 he made his radio debut over WWJ in Detroit when broadcasting was not yet a year old. In 1929 he made the first "all talking" musical picture, "Syncopation."

Early in his career Fred was offered a 52-week vaudeville tour. They told him life would be secure and safe because he would never have to change his act. Fred turned it down. He preferred to exist from engagement to engagement. He changed his show constantly. He knew that change meant growth and that security seldom inspired hard work. For years he rehearsed his boys from 9 AM until show time. He taught them how to read music, how to sing. He encouraged them to years Fred and his Gang were on NBC for Chesterfield Cigarettes, five evenings a week. Every one of those five years he was voted the best quarter-hour program on the air.

1945 They said NBC couldn't make a success of an evening-caliber program five times a week in the daytime. NBC and Fred Waring went ahead, presenting the Waring show five mornings a week. After six months it was voted the best daytime program on the air by the nation's radio editors and columnists. A month later it was sponsored two days a week by the American Meat Institute.

compose, to think up gags, to arrange music—and the Pennsylvanians emerged a tightly knit "gang" that was capable of putting on a variety show ranging from the delicacy of his famous rendition of "The Rosary," to the latest comedy hit.

Recognition of Waring's accomplishments on the air was immediate and enduring. It came from millions of listeners, long-time sponsors, and the NBC affiliated stations—which for years have voluntarily gone all out in giving the Waring show the utmost in local station support and promotion.

Success stories like Fred Waring's do happen on NBC, in spite of the skeptics and doubters. They have no secret formula. They require only initiative, ideas and talent—plus the superlative facilities of the great NBC Network, the vast NBC listening audience, and the friendly association of other great programs heard on NBC.

man committee reported after an exhaustive study that the system employed was faulty and there was immediate need for new measuring devices. An investigation to determine the fate of the organization was launched by board of directors and the need of a fund of $60,000 to carry through the summer was declared to be urgent. When that sum could not be raised it was decided to retire as a measuring body and continue in an advisory capacity to Hooper as a standard setting group. It is generally agreed in the trade that CAB gave evidence of weakness when it adopted the coincidental system after attacking the Hooper device for many years. It also followed Hooper on the issuance of the pocket piece.

grosses should soar up to near $500,000, particularly in the winter season when film trade is better.

Indicative of grossing possibilities of local first runs is the estimated take of $350,000 for the current frame, despite fact business generally is off. Some downtown spots are running well under average due to heat and lengths of runs. Fourteen of the 27 houses are playing holdovers, while three others are screening a reissue double bill.

"CLUNY'S" 54G

Among new bills "Cluny Brown" is shaping up to $54,500 or near. Take would be larger but for fact business is way off at Loew's State, Downtown. Chinese and Fox Uptown both are shooting for fancy grosses to give "Cluny" most of the estimated week's business. "Without Reservations" is well above average at the Hillstreet and Pantages with outlook for $51,500. Republic's "Specter of the Rose," single-billing at the Carthay Circle is fancy $10,500 or near.

Million Dollar smashed through with boff estimate of $44,500 for its first week as filmvaude house, with the Ink Spots as initial bill. It's estimated that 150,000 viewers will see the fight and that will be three times the number watching it in flesh at Stadium. Bout is being covered with five cameras, the most ever used on one event, including three super-sensitive image orthicon with new turret lenses. Ben Grauer is handling color coverage from ringside where he will interview top names before cameras. Bob Stanson will do straight blow-by-blow.

Government seems to feel decision went further than expected in cleaning up alleged vices of the business and question now is how to put it into effect legally as government wants safeguards in the auctioning of films so that no collusion could develop. It thinks the decision went a long way towards establishing freer competition than the industry has had heretofore.

One potent reason the government might want to appeal is that should it try separation of interests in other industries, claim might be made it had failed to obtain divorcement in the film business, even though decision went farther without such drastic action. It is also understood to feel that good points of the dicision, if worked out practically, will be better than divestiture as the court would still retain jurisdiction.

WARSHAUER GIVES UP METRO POST

Allan Warshauer, for the past four years assistant to Frank Whitbeck in the Metro studio advertising department, has tendered his resignation effective July 6.

Warshauer, considered one of the top studio newspaper and commercial radio advertising men, has had a 20-year experience in the theatre and studio biz. He was first head of the Paramount-Publix Theatres advertising department here for two years and was then taken to San Francisco to manage the Paramount theatre.

AGVA HURLS BAD CHECK CHARGE AT ORK MANAGER

American Guild of Variety Artists' officials yesterday charged that Jay Finn, personal manager of orks and acts, gave worthless checks to the Step Brothers, Negro hoofing act, and magician Frances Heff. The acts worked in show produced week of July 1, by Finn, who operates office here, at War Memorial Hall, Las Vegas. Affair played under auspices of American Legion.

Arthur Kaye, regional director of AGVA, has gone to Las Vegas to gather additional details and determine whether Finn was paid off by Legion. Florine Bale, local office chief of union, last night stated she has notified Finn that if funds owed performers are not paid, she will turn over affair to district attorney. She also charged that Finn has no state license to operate the talent agency he has incorporated under name of Artists Personal Management, Ltd.

Finn could not be reached for comment yesterday, being in Salt Lake City, where reportedly he is going to produce a show under auspices of a Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

OKLAHOMA gave a royal welcome to the Republic company filming the Roy Rogers special, "Home in Oklahoma," as the "first motion picture troupe to show Oklahoma as it really is," according to Producer Edward J. White. White, just back from location in the Red River Valley district in Oklahoma, said the people of the state are still hurt by the treatment given them in "Grapes of Wrath" back in 1940 and are ready to lean over backward in cooperating with any film company that wants to depict the beauty, wealth and natural resources of the state. Location scenes, White said, were the mecca for hundreds of exhibitors and others from Oklahoma and Texas and exhibs of the district were all putting in bids to show the film. Company, headed by Rogers, Dale Evans and Gabby Hayes, got, among other things, spectacular shots of prize Hereford herds belonging to Roy Turner and Bill Likens.

ONLY a few of the top players in 20th-Fox's "13 Rue Madeleine" will be professional actors. Balance of cast, numbering more than 100, will be filled by real people merely playing themselves, much in the manner that "March of Time" subjects are made. Louis de Rochemont, who produces "Madeleine" and formerly was in charge of MOT, is utilizing same technique in casting. Company is casting as it goes along, now in Boston, previously in Washington, later in Quebec, and as personalities are needed they are arranged for on spot. Good example was call for 22 vets, who had to be college grads, with fair knowledge of French, good swimmers and in first-class physical condition for 20th-Fox's picture of O.S.S. Boston Veteran's Bureau was called upon and helped Meyer Mishkin, in charge of rounding up talent, fill this order, with more than 800 vets interviewed before call was filled.

PRODUCER Pandro Berman shouldn't have too many qualms anent outcome of his current Metro film, "Sea of Grass." Six of his productions have been included in list of year's 10 best pictures; Spencer Tracy, co-starred with Katharine Hepburn, has been two-time Academy Award winner and has been among first five or six boxoffice favorites for eight consecutive years; and Miss Hepburn is another Oscar winner. Cameraman Harry Stradling last year won cinematographer's statue for "The Picture of Dorian Gray," film editor Robert Kern's cutting on "National Velvet" brought him an award and musical director Herbert Stothart has twice copped Oscars.

"BLACKOUTS of 1946" yesterday agreed to put the ten showgirls in cast on a six-day week, at no chop in coin. Gals have been working in show at El Capitan daily, with never a day off and several of them went to American Guild of Variety Artists with pitch that union does not permit nitery chorines to work but six days. Florine Bale, local chief of union, approached Ken Murray with the proposition, and got him to agree. "Blackouts" now will hire more girls, put them on a swing schedule so they can alternate and assure that each lass is free one day out of seven.

SOL Wurtzel is eliminating a lot of confusion, helping to alleviate the paper shortage and avoiding waste ballyhoo by holding up publicity releases on his pictures until final title is set. He issued orders to his staff yesterday that they are to delay the customary praise campaigns pending decision on titles. Reason given is that, with the paper shortage the way it is, space being cut down in the newspapers, and all, this is no time to have double up on press releases.

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The Eastland-Bridges proposal for a Constitutional amendment limiting any President to three appointments to the Supreme Court is launched at a time when it has natural emphasis—the Black-Jackson controversy. It thus has a better chance of getting headlines and public attention. How well it progresses will depend on the sustaining power of the controversy, and on whether a number of newspapers, politicians, or others get behind and keep the issue alive. It will depend also on whether action can be obtained in the Congress. Of course the Court should not be politically packed and therefore partisan in its decisions; however, it may also be said it should be affected by the will of the people. Law is not an unchanging, unyielding rock, except in its basic foundation under the natural law. Beyond that it is living and applicable to changing conditions in a developing country. The law of the frontier is essentially different from that of a modern civilized community. The stealing of cattle in a cow country affects a man's livelihood, but is not so important in Hollywood. Differences of opinion also, as Pepper says, are natural, and desirable if the men are competent and honest. Mostly the effect of the Court has been to make men forget their politics, and assume judicial impartiality, modified, of course, by temperament and background. It has been one of the three branches of Government that has been most respected and little attacked.

He was probably the greatest of all left-handed pitchers but his mind also had a southpaw leaning. His two outstanding ambitions were to fish and to tend bar. Many a time he was discovered, an hour before game time, clad in a barkeep's apron and floating schooners across the mahogany, strictly as an amateur. It is going to be a tough job to find a thesp who can pitch and act like Rube Waddell.

Perilous Holiday

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Phil L. Ryan. Director, Edward H. Griffith. Screenplay, Roy Chanslor. Story, Robert Carson. Photography, Charles Lawton. Editor, Viola Lawrence. Art, Stephen Goosson and Rudolph Sternard. Sets, Frank Tuttle. Production manager, Jack Murphy. Special effects, Ray Cory. Gowns, Jean Louis. Sound, Jack Haynes. Assistant director, Milton Feldman. Song, "An Irishman's Idea of Love", by Allan Roberts and Doris Fisher

CAST—Stars Pat O'Brien. Features Ruth Warrick, Alan Hale, Edgar Buchanan, Audrey Long, Willard Robertson, Eduardo Ciannelli, Minna Gombell, Martin Garralaga, Jay Novello, Al Hill, Pedro Regas, Eddie LeBaron and his Orchestra.

REVIEWED at Guild theatre, Hollywood, Calif., June 18, 1946. Running time: 88 MINS.

Pat O'Brien's zestful performance, abetted by numerous assists from good supporting cast, lifts this slightly overlong piece into category of audience-winning entertainment. Patterned for the duals, "Perilous Holiday" can stand on own feet in any situation where the opposition is not too crushing.

Technically it must be classified as melodrama, but laughs are generously sprinkled and many of the lines have sharp sparkle. Wisely, opportunities to get yocks are never sacrificed for plot's sake. As a result it all makes for light-hearted entertainment for the customers while they watch the more grim essentials of the story unfold.

The star role is that of Secret Service operative doing an undercover job on gang of counterfeiters who have taken refuge in Mexico City after lamming the U.S. It is a fat part for O'Brien and he makes a colorful character of it; actually, it has been sometime since he has been seen to as good advantage. Ruth Warrick makes a nice vis-a-vis as femme newspaper columnist, also south of the border on mission of exposing the wrongsters. If the plot lags several times and is slow to build suspense because the two are engaged in sharp repartee bouts, it is all to the good. As suave, and even good-humored, menaces, Alan Hale and Edgar Buchanan enter into the gay aspect of the film. Audrey Long gives an archly good characterization of a Yankee tourist with a wide eye on O'Brien, and Minna Gombell supplies a smart touch as her rather bewildered mother. Willard Robertson, as O'Brien's superior, and Edward Ciannelli, as Mexican police official, are right up in the running with the rest of the cast.

Producer Phil L. Ryan and director Edward H. Griffin are old hands at churning out celluloid entertainment that scores and they salted in proper ingredients here. There is plenty of Mexico City background visible and the atmosphere of the place is deftly approximated. Cameraman Charles Lawton, with assistance from special-effectsman Ray Cory, kept a lot of flavor in the footage. Roy Chanslor's screenplay caught the spirit of Robert Carson's yarn, which originally was serialized in Collier's.

Eddie LeBaron's band is used merely for background in a nitery sequence; it could have been front-and-centered more. Allan Roberts and Doris Fisher composed a smile-provoking novelty tune, "An Irishman's Idea of Love", which is nicely put over by O'Brien, even though he can't sing. He just charmed his way through it.

CSU Calls Mass Meeting As Labor Picture Darkens

All studio workers have been invited by Conference of Studio Unions to attend mass meeting at the Hollywood Legion Stadium Sunday at 8 p.m. to discuss present status of wages and contract negotiations.

Tenor of meeting will depend to great extent on what transpires in the gloomy studio labor picture before Sunday. Major film presidents have still to answer SCU demands for immediate meeting plus wage increases and contracts, but it is expected prexies will huddle either today or tomorrow to decide on just what to do.

Meanwhile jurisdictional fight between the AFL and International Association of Machinists continues to spread, resulting in work slowdowns and stoppages on many lots. Further complicating refusal of painters and carpenters to work on color sets is nix set designers have placed on overtime work. Craft started last week to refusing more than 40 hours a week, meaning increased difficulties for studios in readying productions.

Painters discharged for refusal to work on color sets where cameras serviced by AFL machinists are used yesterday filed charges of unfair labor practices with the National Labor Relations Board against studios.

Rallying of IAM Lodge 1185 members by support from painters and other studio crafts reached point yesterday that a number who had withdrawn came back into the fold after repudiating new membership in either the AFL machinists local or Teamsters. Among the 12 employed at Universal and Republic who had swung over to AFL locals at start of trouble is a group of five, led by Bill Rudolph, from Universal's camera machine shop.

At a meeting yesterday CSU decided to throw open all of its member unions to the eight prop men who were expelled by the IATSE last week for supporting CSU picket lines during last year's strike. The eight will be taken into any of the CSU locals for which they are fitted if membership is sought.

ABC LOSES FORD SUNDAY PROGRAM

New York, June 18.—ABC network will lose the Ford Sunday night one-hour program, which has been grabbed by NBC. Latter has cleared the Sunday afternoon 4-5 p.m. niche to accomodate show. In clearing the time, NBC moves RCA program, now spotted 4:30-5 p.m., into early Sunday slot occupied by International Harvester, with latter shunted to 5 p.m. niche vacated by Westinghouse cancellation. National Hour, sustainer which has been riding 4-4:30 p.m., will be moved to Thursday night slot, out of which Lever Bros. has dropped the Bob Burns program.

Boothmen Hiked In NY Indies

New York, June 18.—A 15 per cent increase for boothmen in independent theatres in the Greater New York area is called for under an agreement between the Independent Theatre Owners Association and Local 306, Moving Picture Operators. New deal extends to Sept. 1, 1948 and is retroactive to May 1, last.

20TH UPS BUDGET ON VERA ELLEN PIC

Additional $100,000 has been tacked on to budget of 20th-Fox's "Carnival in Costa Rica," for extra musical number to feature Vera-Ellen. Studio is so enthusiastic over dancer, on loanout from Samuel Goldwyn, that arrangements have been made to borrow her again for star role in "Christmas in Havana," written specially for her. Picture will be Technicolor musical, like "Carnival," and Ernesto Lecuona, who cleffed music for latter film will also do music for new film.

Kenneth MacKenna Seen for Prod Post

New York, June 18.—Kenneth MacKenna, former Metro story editor who has returned from trip to England, is expected to be named a producer within next few weeks. While aboard, he cleaned up pacts with writers, directors, etc., which had hung fire since Sir Alexander Korda ankled from Metro's British setup last year. He also arranged for Richard Hogan to serve as Metro's story scout in England. Hogan was MacKenna's assistant at studio before joining Army.

Hughes, Tommy Lee To Go On Stand In Tele Hearings

Washington, June 18.—Television hearings opening here Thursday will be sparked by appearance of Howard Hughes, Tommy Lee, son of Don Lee, who it's believed testifies for first time at any hearing anywhere, and examination of Paramount's tele interests. Session will wrap up engineering aspects not covered at Los Angeles hearings, plus added testimony requested by Federal Communications Commission.

Hughes appears in behalf of his Hughes Tool Co. His presence, as owner, was requested at L.A. sessions but he was not then available for quizzing. Officials of Dumont Labs, 40 per cent held by Par, and with bids for three more video outlets that'll give Dumont five, will testify. They'll argue Par but two votes on Dumont board falls short of exercising control.

The House had slashed figure to $10,000,000, but the Senate Committee expanded it back to Benton's original request, $19,284,000. Films and radio are included in Benton's programs for fiscal year commencing July 1.

After the House cut, Benton warned that the entire radio program of State Department would have to be dropped. As matter now stands, Senate Committee's recommendation will have to be approved on the Senate floor and then revert to the House for either approval or compromise.

A UNIVERSAL RELEASE

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Martin Jurow, executive aide to Hal Wallis, is very unhappy. It's understood he is now sitting out his contract after asking to be released. Jurow's argument is that he was lured away from his exec assistant post with Jack Warner with promises of "big things" and the opportunity to step out on his own as a producer. Jurow claims the promises haven't materialized . . . Jimmy Stewart and Ingrid Bergman have cooled off on the idea of playing the title roles in Leo McCarey's "Adam and Eve." Stewart, incidentally, is going to make "The Magic City" for Robert Riskin, on completion of his role in "It's a Wonderful Life" for Liberty, before he considers other offers. Including the one from Benedict Bogeaus . . . Still holding out for the right to make outside pictures, Clark Gable is turning down every script Metro turns up . . . Anne Jeffreys becomes an RKO star tomorrow with considerable fuss and feathers. Starting work opposite Pat O'Brien in "Riff Raff," she'll be guest of honor at a luncheon at which N. Peter Rathvon will make it official. She's played everything from Dick Tracy's girl friend to western heroines, in 32 films, before "graduating" . . . Eve Gabor, after having her jewels lifted, has a constant companion—a Nick Harris private eye . . . Esther Williams and Ben Gage say they're going to Hawaii for a second honeymoon in a couple of days . . . Jack Warner, Jr., follows his fiancee, Nanette Fabray, star of "Bloomer Girl," into town next week. Marriage won't take place for some time, however.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: Ernest Dowson wasn't writing about Holly- wood when he said "They are not long, the days of wine and roses," but —A copy of "The Loves of Clara Bow" is being offered for sale in a local bookshop for five cents . . . One of Columbia's agents caught the audience reaction to three sneak previews of RKO's "Sister Kenny" in San Francisco, and Harry Cohn has upped the budget on "My Empty Heart," also starring Rosalind Russell . . . Howard Hughes finally got that line "Want to tussle with Russell" across. Hearst's American Weekly accepted the ad . . . Lana Turner's latest romance has blown sky-high in record time . . . Leza Holland, the Warner actress, now living in a trailer, now tells friends she has three rooms and a path . . Bill Phillips was telling the "Sea of Grass" company at Metro about his three years in the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer and his resulting mastery of horses. Few minutes later he was galloping along in a scene, well pleased with himself. The horse stopped suddenly. Bill did not. He executed a perfect swan-dive over his mount's head. Only injury was to his pride . . . H. M. Warner and Milton Sperling have been added to the board of directors of Pacific Air Lines . . . Jack Carson observes that even a wolf can't get sheep's clothing nowadays.

OFF TO LOUIS-CONN FIGHT: The Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight is Holly- wood's prime topic of conversation today, and most ears will be glued to the radios tonight. More fortunate are a dozen Hollywoodites who took off yesterday on a special plane chartered by Artie Stebbins. They include Cary Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Al Jolson, George Raft, Jesse Lasky, Mike Todd, Pat diCicco, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Howard, Sam Bischoff, Dr. Charles Pinkus, Lloyd Pearl, George MacLean and Chico Marx. They plan to return to Hollywood Sunday night . . . Plenty of bettors, confident of a Joe Louis victory in the early rounds, are doing a last-minute switch for Conn. . . HOWARD HUGHES doesn't care much for the "Hercules" nickname given his new plane. Workers gave it the tag during production and it caught on. When released to the Army, however, Hughes will name it HK I or H 4 . . . DORE SCHARY wants Kent Smith for a top role in "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer" at RKO, which will star Cary Grant and Shirley Temple . . . EDDIE SUTHERLAND is looking for stories to fit Richard Norris and Joanne Dru, who played the love interest in "Abie's Irish Rose" . . . PAUL HENREID'S novel, "Many Are Called," will be published by Bond Books . . . WALTER SLEZAK has bought a plane so he can commute between pictures to his home in Bucks County, Pennsylvania . . . JOAN CAULFIELD, once a Conover model, posed for Sears-Roebuck catalogue illustrations . . . PAMELA LURE, Enterprise receptionist, has won a dozen bottles of champagne in recent rhumba contests at niteries. But now she's been unmasked. Her husband is an Arthur Murray instructor.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Alan Ladd's first night at his Hidden Valley ranch was a comedy of terrors. Or maybe it wasn't so funny. A section of temporary roofing over the bedroom caved in. A mountain lion invaded the brood mares' corral. A pipe connection broke and flooded the kitchen. And Ladd spent the rest of the night playing plumber . . . OFF THE LOTS: The Beverly Hills Club will throw a party in its Scotch Plaid room for the purpose of listening in to the Louis-Conn fight broadcast. Rita Hayworth, Victor Mature, Keenan Wynn and Larry Parks at Billingsley's. Otto Preminger was Richard Ney's host at dinner, with a "Forever Amber" role one topic of conversation. The Ralph Peers and Walt Disneys returned from a visit of several days at the El Padre hotel, Bakersfield . . . Gabe Imer, just out of service, has joined "The Chase" flack corps. He's having trouble with people who can't pronounce his name, so a colleague suggested he change it to Gabriel Horn . . Selena Royle's 86-year-old mother, Selena Fetter Royle, stage star a half century ago, may make her film debut this summer, having received offers from Metro and 20th-Fox . . . With a great to-do, flash of photog's bulbs and kibitzing of a crew of stylists, Ingrid Bergman had eight inches of her hair snipped off for her role in "Arch of Triumph" yesterday. Question was raised as to what to do with the hair. A wag piped up, "Let's make a wig for Bill Blowitz," nodding at the picture's busy flack.—D.D.T.

CLEFFERS FORMING CONTRACT FOR STUDIOS

Members of the Screen Composers' Association are in the throes of preparing a new contract form which the cleffers hope to get the film studios to agree to use in the future. In all probability the paper will not reach final form until next month. Len Zissu, SCA attorney, is presently in NY working over proposed contract.

While nothing definite is known as to what clauses will be different from those in present forms, it is pretty well established that screen scorers will seek more control over their creative compositions than at present. One consideration definitely sought is reversion of scores to writers in event the music publishing subsids of film companies do not want to print them for public sale. Also, most of the members of SCA would like a clause precluding studios from using a work more than once, and then only in the film for which it was written. Complaint is that frequently bits of a score from an old picture are inserted in a new release, a short, or occasionally in a trailer. The scorers think they should receive extra money for such usage.

SCA at present has 102 members, just about all the actively working scorers on Coast. Organization has not yet sought guild status, nor made overtures for affiliation with any other craft union. This move, however, is anticipated by mid-summer.

Hart Guardianship Suit in Court

Contest over administration of the estimated $1,000,000 estate is between Hart's son, William S., Jr., on one side and Francis Gudger and G. E. Frost on the other. Gudger and Frost contend young Hart does not have sufficient knowledge of the actor's affairs to qualify. Attorneys Joseph Scott and Buron Fitts for the son argued that a relative rather than legal strangers should be appointed.

Light 'n' Airy
(on the ½ shell)
by JACK HELLMAN

Apropos of what was itemed in this pillar a short time ago about giving a new show a chance to prove its mettle, our line of reasoning must have been faulty to at least one client. Hardly had the cheers died down over the 3.7 rise of "Amazing Mrs. Danbury" than it was given the ol' heave-ho by Lewis Howe (Tums). Ignored by the sponsor were two factors that might have been weighed with the decision, to wit: the suicidal time spot opposite Charlie McCarthy, and the modest budget of around $3,500 which returned its production cost by better than two-to-one. Program opened with 3.4 and was building progressively when the master minds ordered the trap sprung. Many a show costing twice as much would be indeed happy with 7.5 rating in June but who are we to tell a client how to spend his advertising dollar. No more perhaps than we want anyone to tell us how to spend our eight bucks.

'MAN CALLED X' RATES HIGH IN HOPE SPOT

"The Man Called X" is again slotted as summer relief for Bob Hope and last night's opener came off slick as a whistle. It's a far cry from Hope's comedy antics to the adventuring of Herbert Marshall into the intrigues of master crooks but contrast has long been the medium of replacement. Last year "X" held down the Hope niche and came through with the highest rating of any strawhatter. It might repeat that performance.

Marshall wraps the role of international sleuth with a high polish and takes the emotional changes in stride. On the opener he had excellent support from a cast of seasoned performers, with an outstanding Latin dialect portrayal by Peggy Weber. Leon Belasco, Theodore Von Eltz, Will Wright, Ramsey Hill and Harry Bartell proved almost perfect accomplices.

Jack Johnstone's direction was of high order and he kept the show moving smoothly to its suspenseful denouement. In a tricky dramatic production of this type the sound department rates recognition and a commendable job was turned in by Monte Fraser and Floyd Caton. The commercials continue in the capable hands of Wendell Niles. Milton Merlin's script was airtight, with the story line contributed by J. Richard Kennedy, co-owner of the package.

JUDGE MILLER TELLS THREAT TO RADIO

Motion pictures and the press and their present freedom are as threatened as the radio, and Congress has as much if not more power to regulate both as it has to regulate radio broadcasting. Statement was made yesterday by Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, in address at joint luncheon of Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Advertising Club. The Commerce Clause of the Constitution provides the power,—"To regulate commerce . . . among the several states," quoted Miller, adding that that provision is equally applicable to great newspapers and motion picture productions of America as it is to radio.

CROSBY, GM DEAL ON CASH BASIS SET, REPORT

Chicago, June 18.—Bing Crosby is all set to go along with the General Motors deal proposed to him last week at Jasper National Park in Canada, according to Fairfax Cone, chairman of executive committee of Foote, Cone & Belding. Most significant part of the arrangement is that C. E. Wilson, head of GM, and Alfred Sloan, chairman of the board, are in agreement on whether The Groaner goes live or transcribed. The important thing is that they get him.

Crosby's lawyers are reported going over the deal on the Coast. It is also understood that a proposal made to GM by Crosby has not been officially accepted. Price of the Crosby show has not been disclosed but it is said that no GM stock deal is included in the transaction. It is reported to be a straight salary arrangement.

Cone said that GM executives feel that with frequency modulation on the horizon it's just a matter of a year or so before the network-inspired "stigma" on transcribed shows will be entirely erased, so GM stands to be the first big bankroller to benefit. Understood that GM and FCB have made only one flat demand, to which Crosby has agreed, that they pick the network to carry the series. When the contracts are signed, the client and agency can then say, "who wants Crosby and who wants him bad enough." That, they feel, will break down the policy of NBC and CBS against transcriptions across the network.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 18.—Recent political disturbances in Italy point up forcefully the problems of American film companies in Europe. Nobody seems to be able to call the turn in the confused situation, which makes it virtually impossible for any industry to plan too far ahead.

These Left vs. Right differences will undoubtedly have a great effect on the future of films. As governments grow more labor-minded, they become employment conscious. Films are one opportunity for domestic production which means more jobs which, in turn, means killing off outside competition.

This is the underlying factor in the opposition to the U.S.-French deal in France as well as in Italy. Just as in France, dictatorship in Italy brought a mushroom growth of picture studios. Before 1939, Italy turned out 40 to 50 features annually and was in the red on these. However, Mussolini needed pix for propaganda, so he ordered super-colossal films made—lots of them. Production mounted to 100 a year, with the government footing the bill.

With these films came sugar-coated jobs for higher-up Fascists. Now, as in France, the Italian Johnnie-come-latelies don't want to give up their jobs and studios, so there is opposition to government agreements with our industry. Actually the Italian industry is geared to do about 20 average films successfully per year and, if we can hold on, will be whittled to something approaching that.

Eric Johnston, aware of the impact of the political situation on the import of U.S. pix into Europe has made this one of his major concerns. He is urging unity in our industry, because the keynote for the next three years will be constant watchfulness and aggressiveness in holding on to whatever gains we make. If we can prevent a spread of protective barriers in other countries for that period, our product is expected to sell like wildfire on its own merit.

Hollywood learned by sad experience what division by the industry would mean. Long before the war, we were not getting pictures into Germany. The Nazis skillfully manipulated government restrictions until we were out in the cold before we realized it. It is this sort of gradual elimination that the industry must now be on guard against.

Reports here are that a government rep from Czechoslovakia, as well as Poland, is likely to arrive in the U.S. in the not distant future to discuss terms with the American pix industry.

Some time back our missions in both Prague and Warsaw cabled that each government had asked if American film people would receive reps. Answer was that the industry would be glad to talk but would make no commitments. State Department feels the time is riper for some sort of deal with the Czechs than with the Poles.

Interesting angle on the Czech situation is that British film producers doing business with the monopoly there may actually be doing us a service. Eager for a place in the world markets, some English film people are selling their product for pennies, just to get in. The pix offered are definitely second rate and are merely whetting Czech appetites for the Hollywood product, "Hullaballoo" hears.

Arch Mercey, film liaison for OWMR, came up with a worthwhile suggestion last week. He suggested "talent sabbaticals" in which creative or technical talent from the industry would come in from time to time to serve a hitch with government.

Mercey claims this would be reverse Lend-Lease since industry people who served with Government and the armed forces during the war brought back new experiences to Hollywood in factual films which tend to influence the West Coast product in many ways.

Mercey also urged the increase of available ways and means of screening films for Congress, which controls the purse strings for government use of the medium, and yet remains remote from the work done.

Hardie Meakin, former manager of RKO-Keith's here, and ex-Variety mugg, was upped last week to division manager of the Washington-Trenton-New Brunswick division of RKO. He had been assistant division manager of the Midwest-Washington division, in Cleveland, for past two years . . . Frank McNamee, eastern Pennsylvania's exhibitor, who was deputy director of WMC under Paul V. McNutt during the war, has just been appointed regional director of War Assets Administration for the Philly area . . . Show biz was hypoed last week by the surprise appearance of Prexy Truman and a stag party of biggies at a performance of Olsen and Johnson's "Laffing Room Only". Wartime policy nixed such appearances for the President except at special affairs. This broke the ice . . . Erskine "Tobacco Road" Caldwell and frau are currently in the Argentine on a Latin-American tour . . . Now in the U. S. to study methods of our pix industry and obtain film equipment is Carlos A. Seidel, Technico Cinematographico, of Buenos Aires.

PAR'S TELEVISION PLANS HIT BY TRUST RULING

video by Comerford-Publix Theatres and Interstate Circuit, former for Scranton, Pa., outlet, and latter for Dallas, Tex., station. Par has 50 percent interest in both circuits, and if forced to unload in chains company loses out in their television applications. Even if court permits Par to buy circuits troubles aren't ended since FCC has limited tele station ownership to five per applicant.

Decision in New York case doesn't affect bids of Television Productions, Inc., for three outlets (including Los Angeles), nor bids of United Detroit Theatres Corp., nor New England Theatres, Inc., since all companies are 98 to 100 percent Paramount owned. Nor will anti-trust ruling hit three applications of Dumont Labs in which Par holds 40 percent interest. Dumont also has outlets in New York and Washington. Last month Par withdrew from race in San Francisco, preferring to help cinch likelihood of Hollywood Coast outlet.

Par May Surrender Scophony Holdings

Washington, June 18. — Paramount may surrender its Scophony holdings and Skiatron Tube interests, irrespective of outcome of pending anti-trust suit against it, General Precision Co., and British and American Scophony Corps., for alleged monopoly. eported that Par has a new development for three dimensional picture work which surpasses Scophony patents. Informed sources state film company is sincere in stating that principal interests in Skiatron tube lay in possible future application of technique to three-dimensional pix, rather than merely large screen television. If developments uphold reports, Par will try to get out from under government suit within next couple of months. Result may then be predicted consent decree which would leave Skiatron tube open to all comers.

Decline in personal income payments for the first four months of 1946 below the same period in 1945 may be a storm signal to the theatre men that the peak has passed. While income payments to individuals still total something astronomical, it looks as though the leveling off period has arrived . . . Despite the fact that Congress is rushing to finish its work and head for a long recess there is still a strong likelihood of a bill going through to reduce personal income taxes. Personal income taxes, we emphasize, not the 20% bite on admissions, or corporate levies . . . Commerce Department reports that 983 film houses operated in Belgium during the 3rd quarter of 1945. Of the films screened, 65% came from Hollywood, 23% from France, 8% from Britain and 4% from other countries . . . CHI BOX OFFICE HOLDING UP IN SPITE OF SEASON

Chicago, June 17.—Business in the first-runs here is okay but the great outdoors is proving a mighty potent competitor what with balmy breezes and vacations cutting into the population locally.

Withal, however, first week of "Kid from Brooklyn" at the Woods looks like a potent $35,000. "Murder in the Music Hall," plus Duke Ellington onstage, at the Oriental betokens a fine $55,000. Other newcomers are "Heartbeat" and "Deadline at Dawn" at the Palace, pretty good $30,000; "Shock," Garrick, fair $15,000; "Man in Grey" and "Journey Together," Grand, okay $11,000. Holdovers are average.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, June 18.—High production costs. Unfriendly banks. Crisis of our motion picture industry.

It must be true, we have been hearing about it so much. Yet, production continues at same speed, new companies are formed, construction of more stages at new studios goes on, etc. Rather difficult to understand. However, it does seem logical that with such a low percentage of good pictures turned out, the industry must eventually suffer.

We are facing a very serious problem; there are eighty two films for which we can not get a release,—says cameraman Gabriel Figueroa, Secretary of the S.T.P.C. union.

Star Sofia Alvarez, just back from visit to her native Colombia, has been cast for lead in "Lagrimas de Sangre." Incredible as it may sound, translation of title is actually "Tears of Blood" and sounds just as bad in Spanish. Real tears should be shed over such titles.

Clasa has also presented us with another sobbily titled film "Tragic Wedding," starring their new find the lovely Polish Miroslava Sternova.

Arturo de Cordova will star in Buenos Aires production, with Argentinian Zully Moreno in femme lead. Dolores del Rio also plans to visit the South American country and has accepted stellar role in Associated Argentinian Artists production, with their Francisco Petrone in male lead. Quite probable too that Jorge Negrete will make a picture in Argentina. And Maria Felix has been receiving offers from Buenos Aires. Interchange.

Hugo del Carril declares our films technically superior to those of his native Argentina.

"But," he says, "there is too marked a tendency toward melodrama in Mexican pictures."

True.

"Amar es Vivir" (To Love Is To Live) with Emilia Guiu, Malu Gatica and Rafael Baledon heading cast, was banned from screen by Government Censors Office, as immoral. Producers claim that censors considered statue seen in one of the sets as "immoral" point. Gossip pointed to Emilia Guiu as having posed for statue in question. Miss Guiu accuses sculptor of harming her reputation and claims she only posed for face and shoulders. The Producers Association is trying to have the picture released minus the offending nude lady of stone.

Out of five cinemalights who were asked their opinion on divorce, only one was in favor: Ramon Armengod, stating divorce is the antidote to an unhappy marriage. The other four who do not approve are Arturo de Cordova, Antonio Badu, Rafael Baledon and Jose Cibrian.

INTERNATIONAL CUTS TOOTER TAX

Tax on salaries of film studio musicians levied by International Board of American Federation of Musicians will soon be reduced from two to one percent. Information has been wired to Local 47 here and Internation Studio Representative by James C. Petrillo.

Levy has long been a bone of contion of studioites. Their total income levy hits three and one half per cent total, while musicians in other fields pay one and one-half of International, nationally accepted tax on all workin gmusicians. With slicing, filmers will be reduced to two and one-half per cent.

Wire reads: "In view of the convention's action in eliminating the one per cent theatre tax; the international executive board in session has reduced the national sound track tax from two to one per cent."

CANADIAN STUDIO SETS SLATE OF 8 100G PIX

Inks MacLane

Barton MacLane has inked for role in "Jungle Flight" with Pine-Thomas. Lensing begins June 20.

SIMONS COL JOB DRAWS UNION FIRE

Leslie Simons appointed musical director at Columbia Pictures studio. Simons is brother-in-law to J. W. Gillette, International Studio Representative of American Federation of Musicians, and is also assistant to Gillette at union headquarters.

Going from there to management of the Warfield, after which he was made San Francisco district manager for Fox-West Coast, then coming here to Metro in 1942.

Appointment is causing a furore in union circles with many objecting to the dual job-holding. Local's rules do not permit holding of any office or job within union, but ruling is apparently not being applied in case of "international" rep.

Capitol to Build Classic Disc Library

Capitol Records shortly will start to build up a classical library of discs. Waxery for some time has been eyeing this sphere of recordings and will make the splash as soon as number of vocal and instrumental performers can be tied to contracts. Capitol chiefly is looking for a symphony ork of established name and rep, but has been unable to locate one it believes sufficiently famed which already is not under pact to some rival plattery. Under consideration is idea of forming own symph and getting a name conductor to shape up group.

currently 4,455,800 shares of authorized common stock, of which 3,752,136 are outstanding. Plan authorized today involves issuance of one additional share for each share held and the increase of the authorized common stock to 9,000,000 shares of $1 par value per share. No plans in respect to the 1,495,728 figure of authorized but unissued common stock was disclosed by the board of directors.

Paramount has either retired or paid off $96,000,000 in debt over the past ten years, including a final payment last week of $2,500,000, prexy Barney Balaban told the stockholders' meeting. He stated that it will be Paramount's policy to build up cash reserves again for working capital as well as to maintain the safety of dividend payments.

Earnings are continuing at the rate reported for the first quarter of 1946, Balaban declared. Net profit for the March quarter was $11,587,000, equal to $3.90 a share on the 3,751,136 common shares outstanding, as compared with the $1.07 a share for the corresponding period last year. It is intended to increase the dividend by the payment of extras when cash has again built up to the necessary point, Balaban said.

The board of directors on May 9 had announced intention to establish in the third quarter of the current year a dividend rate of 40 cents a share on the stock then outstanding. On the two-for-one basis approved today, this would represent an increase of $1.20 a share annually. Previously the company made quarterly payments of 50 cents a share.

The stockholders approved amendments to the charter and by-laws designating the number of directors at 16 for a term of one year. Re-elected to one year terms were Barney Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Y. Frank Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, Leonard H. Goldenson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, Austin C. Keough, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, Charles M. Reagan, E. V. Richards, Edwin L. Weisl and Adolph Zukor.

Represented at the meeting, either in person or by proxy, was 81 percent of the stock eligible to vote. Balaban, on the motion of one of the stockholders present, was given an expression of commendation for his stewardship.

Tierney, Harrison 'Brittania' Costars

Gene Tierney and Rex Harrison were set yesterday as co-stars in 20th-Fox's "Brittania Mews," recently-purchased novel by Margery Sharp which will be July Book-of-the-month Club selection. Film, which William Perlberg will produce, will be Harrison's second American screen appearance, to follow "Anna and the King of Siam."

HUDDLESTON FILES 150G SUIT ON PIED PIPERS

Suit asking $150,000 damages was filed yesterday in Superior Court by attorney Thomas Hughes for Johnny Huddleston, former member of the Pied Pipers, against the Piper singing group. Action is actually two suits, one against Clark Yocum and Chuck Lowry for an accounting, the other against Hal Hopper and June Hutton, additions to the Pipers, charging conspiracy to exclude Huddleston from act following his recent discharge from Army.

Opposing sides hoped to settle deal over weekend when Huddleston finally agreed to settle his claim of quarter interest for $10,000. However, Pipers apparently withdrew from original stand and suit was filed. Previously the Pipers had indicated Huddleston was to resume with them and "jockeyed" him along for past couple months, it's charged. When finally pinned down they stated he would not be accepted back and they then offered him $1,000 down and $100 weekly for a year, which was refused. Huddleston claims to have government support in his action which involves first known case of a show biz ex GI being hatched.

yesterday told a trade press conference that the projected program calls for 22 features, three of which will be filmed in Cinecolor.

Just returned from New York after final conferences with Pathe topper Robert Young and Robert Benjamin, head of the Rank organization in this country, Foy disclosed these details of the Eagle-Lion program:

Consummation of a reciprocal distribution deal with J. Arthur Rank calling for each to release a minimum of 10 of the other's product annually in their respective areas.

WILL PICK PREXY

That company within two weeks will announce its president and general sales manager, indicating that both will be toppers with considerable experience in the industry.

Launching of a world-wide talent hunt with the objective of creating a giant studio stock company to bolster its star roster.

That star talent in all departments would be welcomed into the organization on participation deals, explaining that negotiations on several package deals were currently nearing conclusion.

Foy further confirmed an earlier Daily Variety disclosure that PRC Productions will continue as a producing organization along United Artists format, with its product to be distributed by PRC Pictures. He emphasized, however, that PRC will not utilize the facilities of Eagle-Lion studio. Reeves Espy, Foy stated, will shift over to the Eagle-Lion setup as an executive assistant and studio manager.

USE PRC SETUP

Eagle-Lion will utilize the physical facilities of PRC Pictures in distributing its product in the domestic market, with all exchanges and branch offices manned with Eagle-Lion sales personnel, Foy explained. Company currently is mapping a top-budgeted advertising and exploitation program to bolster an intensive sales campaign. Sam Israel is the E-L advertising and publicity head.

Company will tee off its production program July 22 with "It's A Joke Son," Kenny Delmar starrer, which Ben Stoloff will produce-direct. The Franchot Tone-Marion Parsonette package deal, "Repeat Performance" rolls August 15 and later that month, producer Stoloff is slated to get an untagged feature dealing with an accident-safety theme before the cameras. Aubrey Schenck will function as executive producer and also as liaison between Foy and all E-L producers.

Plays, Pic Scripts In Dinehart Will

Mrs. Alan Dinehart will receive rights to several plays and motion picture scripts under a probate court order issued yesterday calling for distribution of remaining assets in the estate of the late Alan Dinehart, actor-producer-playwright. She previously had been given title to home and furnishing at 3061 Lake Hollywood drive. Alan Dinehart, Jr., Dinehart's son by a former marriage, waived his right to one-third of the estate as previously provided in a will.

feet of picture film was included in this seizure.

Film rentals for fiscal year on the seized property amounted to $21,589. Report declares that APC had a number of requests from American studios for "remake" rights to some of the seized pictures, but these were declined because it could not be determined what rights Government agency controlled in the basic stories.

Large quantity of rights were issued on the tremendous bloc of foreign music held in this country. APC said the largest share of royalties received under music came for works used in motion pictures. An example was the licensing of DeBussy's "Claire de Lune" for the film "Frenchman's Creek."

Biggest bite came from song "Lili Marlene." During the year 23 licenses—20 of them royalty-bearing—were issued for the use of "Lili" in films, radio, mechanical reproductions, sheet music and platform appearances. Royalty amounted to more than $10,000 for the year, of which radio paid about half.

Recording companies turned in another $71,777 in royalties on the music catalog of the French organization, BIEM.

Zanuck Stretching Out 'Razor's Edge'

Idea now is to make "The Razor's Edge" a longie with an intermission, it was announced at 20th-Fox yesterday. Darryl F. Zanuck, producing, is considering letting the film run for at least three hours. The picture started its fourth month before the camera yesterday and Zanuck has written in 37 added scenes, which are still to be shot. Picture is expected to be finished early in August.

repayment of $2,500,000 of notes due in 1949-51, leaving it with only the $2,000,000 indebtedness to Balaban outstanding.

May Need Loan, Says Balaban

New York, June 18. — Barney Balaban, speaking before the Paramount annual stockholders meeting today, referring to the anti-trust decision, said it was too early to predict the effect on company's business. He said "I am confident that the problems presented will be successfully solved." It is conceivable, he added, that scope of action under the decree could compel Paramount to borrow money for readjustment.

cies were forced to buy outright previously. Sale up to Saturday was about $2,000,000, less than expected. It is doubted that the Dempsey-Tunney take, at $50 tops will be topped. Tickets are now available at all quarters, with 10,000 standing rooms on sale at $5 a head. Jacobs won't talk but expects gross of near $2,500,000. Reasons for the apathy are sports editors' hostility and fear of the room situation here.

Influx of spenders for the fight is expected to hypo theatre and nitery takes. With plane and train reservations tight, some of the out-of-towners are expected to remain over a few days after the fight, helping entertainment business.

Joe Louis KO's Conn In Tamest Title Fight

By JACK PULASKI

New York, June 19.—Joe Louis' eight-round knockout of Billy Conn was one of the tamest championship fights ever staged. By the end of the fourth round Louis was definitely in front. Billy was given two rounds at most.

Louis was confident throughout while Conn seemed afraid. He backed up continuously and long absence from the ring told on him more than the champ. It was sudden death for the Pittsburgher. When Louis tagged him Billy's knees buckled and soon afterwards he went down. Maybe he couldn't get CALLING the blue boys to throw potential customers out of the theatre sounds like a madman's dream, but it happened last week in New York. Final stanza of the Old Vic company brought out hordes of hopefuls who were loitering around, even as late as 9:30 p.m., in the faint chance that tickets might be canceled. House management, having a little difficulty getting to and fro in lobby, to say nothing of paying guests, was forced to send out an appeal to the "city's finest" which resulted in a wholesale heaveho. When the blue chips were finally counted on the last nine performances, a gross of $54,900 was tallied as the Century boxoffice. House is a 1,670-seater. Program during the last week consisted of "Henry IV," parts I and II; "Uncle Vanya," "Oedipus" and "The Critic."

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

There is reason for assurance and also for worry about the Russian proposal on atomic energy. It is good insofar as the Russians have come out with a proposal, since that indicates that it has been important enough in their mind to have led them to work out a formula, and since the Soviet recommendation closely parallels that of Baruch. There is not so much reason for apprehension about the Soviet idea that atomic weapons be destroyed and no longer made when the proposal has been approved by the Security Council and by half of the eligible nations, as in their insistence upon the veto. We can get around the first idea by requiring that half the eligible nations include the members of the Security Council, which would mean Russia. But we believe the annulment of the veto on this proposition is essential. That is where we differ seriously. The Soviet idea is that unity of the Big Five is primary. We insist on no nation being able to use the veto in a way that would enable them to make use of atomic energy wrongfully, whether that nation be the Soviet or the United States. Now is the time for a Solomon to come to the aid of the world.

Boxing, baseball, football and kindred amusement industries, naively known as sports, are strictly up-to-date in their demands on the hired help. An ancient singer with a tired voice can get up in a night club and give out with a tired song that exerts a nostalgic influence on the customers who are emotionally inclined to weep in their synthetic cocktails over the memories of days agone. In boxing, baseball and football jousts the customers don't want a nostalgic vintage. They demand a knockout or a home run or a touchdown, and they want it now.

MAJORS, INDIES TO CONFER WITH SORRELL

Both major and independent producer representatives meet with Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions, today and tomorrow in an attempt to iron out the difficult studio labor situation.

Producers labor committee, made up of Eddie Mannix, Ben Kahane, Cliff Work, Pat Casey and Fred Pelton, is scheduled to get together with Sorrell this afternoon. I. E. Chadwick, prexy of Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, will meet Sorrell's group at Brittingham's tomorrow at 1 p.m., while Donald Nelson, prexy of Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, has his session scheduled for 4 p.m.

Independent associations entered the troubled labor picture yesterday morning when they were subject to the same demands served on major studios last Saturday. CSU is demanding immediate meeting, wage increases and contracts on the threat of economic action.

Major company presidents met yesterday morning in a two-hour session with Eric Johnston to discuss present labor situation but no decision was reached. They huddle again this morning and it is expected answer demanded by Sorrell will be forthcoming after the session.

At the California Federation of Labor Convention at San Francisco a fight was begun to oust Sorrell on charges of Communistic activity. Eight studio unions signed a resolution calling for investigation of the charges against Sorrell.

Mayer Dines Toppers; Execs Ask Industry Self Control in attendance.

Meeting, an unprecedented gathering of major company presidents, major studio heads, production executives and independent producers, played up thought that motion pictures are blamed for many things over which the industry has no control or responsibility because of increased crime, divorce, juvenile delinquency and other manifestations of fractured social relations in the postwar era.

Speaking on the problems that vitally concern the industry in maintaining moral standards were Mayer, Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president; Joseph I. Breen, MPA vice prexy and Production Code administrator; Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers; and I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association.

CITES PULIC VIEW

Johnston said: "I believe that most people look upon the motion picture as something designed not only for entertainment but as possessed of tremendous power to educate—for good or bad. It's trite to say it, but it's true. The motion picture is the most powerful instrument of education ever designed by man.

"To our vast family audience, the neighborhood picture house fills as definite a place as the neighborhood library. Always remember that most of our exhibitors are family men who deal every day with families in their communities. They share the blame, and, of course, the applause, for whatever you create and hand to them to show. Under the code of the motion picture industry there is ample leeway for honest and realistic portrayal of American life. We all know that most of the greatest pictures ever turned out have been produced since the code was introduced. And frankly, I have yet to meet a single producer who would abolish the code. The good picture is our guarantee of the freedom of the screen.

CENSOR THREAT

"Censorship, of course, might insure clean pictures, but they could be clean and still be stupid and inane. Any kind of censorship is dangerous to the liberties of a free people."

Donald M. Nelson, president of The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers told the meeting:

"We have imposed on us the responsibility of preparing proper entertainment for 140,000,000 Americans and other millions the world over. While pictures must portray drama, it must represent the best of the nation's tenets of good taste." Chadwick declared:

"We might be termed the heartiest supporters of the Production Code because we are voluntary supporters. In our relations with the PCA we have been treated as a younger brother by a big brother. Throughout our treatment has been eminently fair. It is the best insurance the industry has against political censorship."

Breen, outlining the current needs of the industry, said:

"There should be more family pictures, or pictures suitable for general audiences. Too many of our pictures, at the present time, deal with the more mature themes, that are aimed at adult audiences. The trouble with these is that many intelligent people are beginning to wonder about the possible effect of such pictures when these are shown to audiences of children or adolescents.

"I am not suggesting that we should entertain any plans for the production of pictures that are suitable solely for children. Any such plan would not only run the risk of considerable financial disaster, but it would deny the motion picture screen much that is finest and best in the literature of the world. We should not neglect the more adult themes. At the same time, however, we can do much to advance the cause of the industry and to increase attendance in theatres if we produce more pictures that will be of interest not only to grownups, but to the youngsters and the adolescents as well.

"That, as I see it, is the great challenge to the industry at the present time."

LEGIT OPENING

LADY GODIVA'S HORSE

"Lady Godiva's Horse" opened at the Musart last night and didn't seem to know which way to turn. Truman Curtis and Steve Rowe, who wrote the play, had a little difficulty in deciding whether they would create a comedy melodrama or just another one of those things which grace or disgrace the local boards from time to time. In any event, the story concerns a burlesque stripper who owns a horse and tries to get the nag first across the finish line in some handicap. She bets a year's contract at the starve - to - death burley house against the joint itself with the villainous manager. Mixed up in this is a nice young stagehand, who loves her, several semi-clothed stripteuses, an alleged burley comedian and plenty of obvious blue gags needling even more obvious straight dialog.

Jack Present and Harry Zevin produced this show and should harvest the usual takings they always do at the Musart. They have a good set by Dickson Morgan, who also directed, in a backstage dressing room. Vivian Knight tops a cast of better-than-Musart-average performers. But the show is still a dull B-picture plot with an occasional bump and a grind for the ill-legitimate audiences.

Arnold Loaned for 'Wallflower' Role

Edward Arnold goes on loanout to Warners from Metro for role of Jane Wyman and Janis Paige's father in "Wallflower."

'OUTLAW' BLIMP SET FOR TOUR

"The Outlaw" blimp, Navy-converted dirigible, takes off from Howard Hughes' Culver City field Monday to start first leg of nation wide tour exploiting the picture. Dirigible will cover 10 cities in seven southwestern and midwestern states during the next two weeks.

Tour includes night flights over cities to be visited and mooring of the blimp under floodlights for public inspection. Ship is the first Navy dirigible to be converted to civilian use and has been equipped with huge neon signs on each side plugging the picture and its star, Jane Russell. States to be covered include Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky, tour ending at Covington, Ky, for a week's pause before starting eastern leg of junket.

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Martin Jurow has parted on amicable terms with Hal Wallis. His resignation was accepted yesterday and he will become a producer at a major studio within a few weeks. Jurow says he was not "lured away" from Warners—in the melodramatic language of D.D.T.—but had resigned before accepting the post of executive assistant to Wallis . . . Unsuspected vein of humor was discovered at San Simeon yesterday. William Randolph Hearst wired Walter Wanger after seeing a private showing of the producer's "Canyon Passage": "Picture is so good I can almost forgive your political principles" . . . Good bet to play the Will Rogers role in "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," to which Paramount acquired the rights the other day, is Bob Hope.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: And concerning the above Mr. Hope he had a hilarious reunion with Bing Crosby the other night in Spokane, latter's hometown. Hope is on tour and Crosby was en route to "The Emperor's Waltz" location. An alert innkeeper got the pair to pose for photogs behind his bar, clad in white aprons and dispensing drinks to the trade. Hope and Crosby, taking their roles seriously, began pouring drinks for the crowded bar. The proprietor smiled even when he noted they were dispensing doubles, then triples. Then smile faded a little when the pair refused to take any money for the drinks. And when they began passing bottles over the bar to save the trouble of pouring, the smile was still there—like a shark's. In about five minutes they cleaned out the stock on the back bar. It was a freeloader's field day. Bing and Bob were too busy giving it away to take a drink, and the proprietor threw up his hands and admitted it was all good clean fun . . . Leo McCarey showed up at Lucey's yesterday noon and took a lot of ribbing about being the highest-paid citizen in Hollywood. He began passing out nickels, explaining, "I'm not as rich as John D. Rockefeller, Sr., yet" . . Windfall in Hollywood: Virginia Field received delivery yesterday on a new car and refrigerator . . . OFF THE LOTS: Cary Grant and Betty Hensel, Vivian Blaine and Manny Frank, at The Kings. Ilona Massey, Kay Kyser, Reed Hadley, Peggy Lee, Connie Haines at Les Comiques. Lloyd Bacon, Wayne Morris, Morgan Conway, Leon Errol, Joan Leslie, at The Deacon's.

CALL SHEET: MICHAEL O'SHEA is getting his kicks this week working for free as an outrider during the calf-roping and bronc-busting events at Gene Autry's rodeo . . . MICHAEL WOULFE, the fashion designer, returned yesterday from a New York visit . . . JEANETTE LAKE, the brunette manicurist in the Enterprise barbershop, might be worth Charlie Einfeld's consideration while he's starting his big talent hunt . . . JOHN CROMWELL has ordered a camera crew to ride with a Hollywood police radio car during the "graveyard shift" in hopes of some realistic shots for "Dead Reckoning" . . . FRANK CAPRA, who owns four Oscars himself, directed a trio of Academy Award winners yesterday for scenes in "It's a Wonderful Life"—Thomas Mitchell, Lionel Barrymore and James Stewart . . . PAT O'BRIEN held a reunion with Ted Tetzlaff, cameraman turned director on "Riff Raff" at RKO. They hadn't worked together or seen each other for 14 years . . . LENORE ULRIC planes east Saturday after finishing her nine-week chore in "Bella Donna" . . . JOHNNY YUHASZ will have profiles of Ben Hecht and Bob Taplinger in forthcoming issues of Pageant and Esquire, respectively . . . BESS MEREDYTH, who wrote the screenplay, will be among 32 guests invited to a showing of "Don Juan," first film to introduce Vitaphone.

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Katharine Hepburn ran out of her house in such a panic the neighbors thought the house was on fire. Electricians had removed a floor plug and released a swarm of bees nesting in the fixture. Bees took after Miss Hepburn like a swarm of autograph-hunters . . . Bette Davis' gift to the Kay Kysers' baby was a two-compartment diaper container . . . Harry Harvey, RKO contract player, had a good day. Had his option lifted, salary raised and given his best role since coming on the lot in "Beat the Band" . . . DECCA RECORDS IN LEE DEAL TO SPUR OUTPUT

Decca Records has made a deal with an indie pressing plant here, Lee Record Co., to produce platters. Long annoyed at own inability to spur enough production out of its Coast plant to satisfy dealer demands, Decca hopes to obtain upwards of 500,000 discs a month off Lee machines. Late last winter Decca opened enlarged pressing plant here, but all sorts of mechanical kinks since are reported to have slowed production flow, and twice Dave Kapp, firm's veepee in charge of recordings, has come on from NY to attempt to increase output.

The Lee outfit, which is owned by Lee Bergstrom, in past has been doing job-lot pressing for small odd-labels here, but henceforth will concentrate on meeting Decca's demands. Last month another plattery, ARA, found its own plant could not keep apace sales, so waxery made deal for half productive capacity of Olympic Record Co., pressing plant financially controlled by Musicraft.

What is a movie milestone? "The Big Parade" was one. "Mrs. Miniver" was another. "Gone With The Wind" was one also.

Movie milestones are the peaks in the chart of film history.

While great entertainments are numerous, the real movie milestones are few and far between.

"The Yearling" is one!

MORE PROTECTION FOR COMPOSERS, WRITERS SOUGHT

Washington, June 19.—The 21 western hemisphere delegations sitting in on an Inter-American copyright conference today went down the line for additional protection for authors and composers. Emphasized was protection for music writers from below the Rio Grande.

Delegates, however, veered considerably from the original recommendations of Argentina and Mexico, which would have forbidden U.S. film, music and radio to modify in any manner any composition of Latin authors. This originally broached plan also would have precluded use of Latin-American music in juke-boxes unless composers were paid stiff royalty fees.

The new provision, which received almost a unanimous vote of approval states: "The author of any protected work, on disposing of his copyright by sale, grant or in any other manner, retains the right to claim the paternity of the work and to oppose any modification or use of the same which may be prejudicial to his reputation as an author, unless by his prior, contemporaneous or subsequent consent, he has granted or waived the right in accordance with the provisions of the law of the state in which the contract was entered."

There is an out for U.S. companies in the phrasing of the provision quoted above, providing deals are made in this country, where American copyright law permits some leeway.

The conference is expected to conclude Thursday. The 21 governments which have delegates sitting in on sessions must approve the new provisions before they become law in each of the countries.

The "Banco Cinematografico" advances producers not over fifty percent of the cost of pictures which the bank judges in class A, and not over thirty percent on inferior product. Money advanced, plus interest stipulated, is refunded to the Banco Cinematografico as soon as box office receipts come in. The Bank's investment is quite safe, as in the worst of cases, release in the central States of Mexico brings in half the amount of production cost.

The real cause of present cinema industry crisis seems to be capital invested in over half a hundred films for which release has so far been impossible, leaving capital inactive, literally locked in tin containers. In view of these unreleased pictures production will probably decrease during the present year.

Poor Monterrey has been hard strike hit lately. Labor leaders left our first industrial city practically isolated a few days ago. Red and black flags have been waving all over the place. And now the S.T.I.C. Union threatens strike against all cinemas and motion picture distributors of Monterrey, unless one hundred percent salary increase for all their employees is decreed.

All Bull

Latest performer in Republic corrals is "Rickey," four-month-old Hereford bull, who figures prominently in "Home in Oklahoma," Roy Rogers starrer. "Rickey," although a perfectly formed and marked Hereford from the prize herd of Bill Likens, is a runt, little larger than a St. Bernard dog and weighing only 58 pounds. But even so he presents a transcription problem. Cowpunchers, sorry for him when he was trying to run with the herd, used to pick him up and carry him—before he got to weigh 58 pounds. Now he won't lead but insists on being carried.

British Columbia city will have a Jubilee show highlighting the celebration that will have Eddie Cantor and John Charles Thomas as stars of the show, which is slated to run from July 1 to 13. Production will be held in Stanley Park and will outline dramatically the past, present and future of Vancouver.

In connection with the show, nightly citations will be presented to various personalities who have made important achievements in the fields of dramatics, education, statesmanship and war contributions. Those being cited include Field Marshall Harold Alexander, Nigel Bruce, Premier Hart of province of British Columbia, Basil Rathbone, Robert Cummings and others.

3 'Monte Cristo' Roles

Edward Small yesterday set Una O'Connor, Henry Stephenson and Ray Collins for supporting roles in "The Return of Monte Cristo," film he is producing for Columbia release. Picture starts lensing Monday.

ROGERS, TRIGGER INKED BY DISNEY FOR 'PECOS BILL'

Walt Disney yesterday made deal with Republic for loanout of Roy Rogers, his horse Trigger and Sons of the Pioneers for a combo live action-animation feature tagged "Pecos Bill," based on American folklore classic of same title. No date has been set for start of picture, which will be filmed in Technicolor, but it probably won't roll until late next year.

Inking of cowboy star is in line with progressive move on Disney's part to include more live-action talent, and using cartoons to supplement this live action. Rogers will warble number of songs, as well as carry dialog, along with other star names yet to be set.

Disney currently is either winding up or filming quartet of features which employ both forms of presentation. "Song of the South," based on Joel Chandler Harris' "Uncle Remus" stories, carries approximately 70 per cent live-action footage, while "How Dear to My Heart" will be about 80 per cent live action, animation in both films made incidental to action with human players. Other two films now in work are untitled, but carry same amount of live action.

"Make Mine Music," which includes voices of such singing stars as Dinah Shore, Nelson Eddy and Andy Russell, already is in pre-release.

The third film planned for production by the company is "The Happy Go Lucky."

AGVA, RODEO ROW GOES TO UNION CHIEFTAINS

The jurisdictional row started between American Guild of Variety Artists and Rodeo Cowboys Association when Gene Autry's "Flying A" Ranch show opened here at Pan-Pacific Auditorium last Friday will be settled eventually by the national chieftains of the two unions. That much was decided upon yesterday after long meeting between the local reps, which ended in a stalemate for the most part.

AGVA wanted to move in and claim jurisdiction over trick riders and acrobats who do stunting off horses, on grounds that it is circus work and that as such falls into its province. Cowboys' union refused to recognize claim and after a session of bickering, both sides agreed to let matter ride until Matt Shelvey, national director of AGVA, can sit in with Earl Lindsey, exec secretary of RCA, and thrash out a definite ruling. AGVA was able, however, to get Autry to join, as well as Abe Lefton, oral ringmaster or rodeo. The live-talent union also satisfied itself that the clowns in show and several other dismounted entertainers were enrolled under its banner.

E-L Inks Conway

Tom Conway was signed yesterday on a two-picture deal with subsequent options by Eagle-Lion. His first role will be in "Repeat Performance," scheduled to go before the cameras Aug. 15 with Marion Parsonette producing.

BROWN BOMBER EASY K.O. VICTOR OVER CONN

up, but a few seconds after being declared out, he was erect and smiling in his corner.

Dan Parker alluded to the fight as the Battle of the Century Note. Plenty of tickets could be had around midtown at comparatively bargain prices. There were wide-open spaces in the mezzanine.

Joe Williams of the World Telegram had a face redder than Conn's. He picked Billy to knock out Louis, only sports expert to go that far out on the limb. Some bugs bet that way and got seven to one if that was any satisfaction.

Incomplete tally on the gross showed about 60,000 in the stadium for approximately a $2,000,000 total gate which goes far under the figure for the second Tunney-Dempsey fight. But Mike Jacobs cleaned up with $225,000 from radio and television in addition to profits from the fight.

New York has been jumping since Monday, especially niteries and eateries, with thousands of fight fans in from througout the country. Business is expected to continue bullish over the weekend as fans stretch balance of week into a lazy holiday relaxing after the big show. Telecast of the fight drew almost as much attention as the battle itself. Demands for television seats was tremendous.

Hundreds of prints of the RKO fight pictures are to be shipped throughout the country and the world by railway express for earliest possible theatre screenings. Prints all leave La Guardia Field at 1 p.m. tomorrow afternoon.

Washington, June 19.—Topped by government biggies from the Administration and Capitol Hill, between 700 and 800 prominent Washingtonians gathered around NBC viewers at the Statler here tonight to see the Louis-Conn fight televised from New York.

Video pictures were sent over coaxial cable from New York and relayed to the hotel from the Dumont station here. It was the first long distance tele throw in the history of anything so fast as action in the prize ring.

ALLIED EXHIBS HIT BIG FIVE CASE DECISION

ment being expressed by independent exhibitors here today at the opening of the combined eastern regional Allied and New Jersey Allied conventions.

Exhibs, already annoyed with buying in blocks of five under the old consent decree, are completely dismayed with the prospect of bidding for each individual picture under the terms of the decision handed down in the anti-trust suit last week. It looks like too much work to them without a consequent payoff of additional profits.

Smalltown exhibitors who gloat when able to date pictures ahead of first runs in nearby cities are chumps, Al Singlinger, director of Gallup's Audience Research Institute, told theatremen. He declared exhibs in the 10,000-50,000 population towns who break their necks to get films before the bigtime neighbors are losing a tremendous portion of their potential patronage, since ARI surveys showed that "audience penetration" climbed from a low of 20% of the population to as high as 70% after pictures had played nearby first runs. Patronage lost to the smaller houses is more than compensated by additional home town interest.

ARI boss revealed to exhibs for the first time the modus operandi of research activities in titles, casts, stories, etc., for Metro, RKO, Goldwyn, Selznick and others. Among Singlinger's recommendations were that theatre operators up budgets to the top to "compete with gasoline." He said research indicates theatre business to be considerably hit by auto touring and outdoor amusements.

Convention is drawing record attendance, with delegates from 24 states, to hear analysis by lawyers and at a roundtable Friday on effects of the anti-trust decision. President Harry Lowenstein said he will hold the group together Friday for as many hours as necessary to thrash out recommendations for possible submission to government's attorneys.

Moran East for 'Jonathan' Buildup

Dolores Moran Super Chiefs out Friday on her first trip to New York for press, mag and radio build-up preliminary to starting lead role in Benedict Bogeaus' "Jonathan Loves Them All." Trip is in charge of Bill Peirce, publicity director for Bogeaus, who will also while in east confer on exploitation campaign for "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber."

TELE PROVES ITSELF TO SHOW BIZ IN LOUIS FIGHT

watched for more than 5,000 video sets, television strongly suggested that million dollar gates are things of the past.

For tonight there were more than 100,000 witnesses to a sports event that was signicant not just because it was the first championship contest to be televised. It was significant because television, through NBC, helped produce all the thrills, all the excitement that one could have had at the stadium's ringside. Nothing was lost.

The 3-City hookup—Philadelphia, Washington and New York—was caught by five cameras, and as viewed at the NBC studio in New York the reception was excellent. Bob Stanton, sports announcer for NBC television, handled the main event, and Ben Grauer, crier to the title fight, helped give the televiewers some of the fight's color by picking his way around the ringside with a mobile transmitter and interviewing celebs.

Gillette paid $125,000 for the television broadcasting rights, in addition to having the fight's radio rights. Lone objection to televising the fight could possibly have been in the Gillette commercials which were totally lacking in showmanship.

OBITUARIES

W. A. STEFFES

Minneapolis, June 19.—W. A. Steffes, for many years independent exhibitor leader both nationally and locally until his semi-retirement some time ago, died here during an operation. Steffes, aged 59, owned the World, local 350-seater booked by the Paramount circuit and had other theatrical and varied interests. His semi-retirement followed a heart attack while attending an independent exhibitors meeting in Detroit. Since then, he had spent winters in Florida and summers on his northern Minnesota estate. He, at one time, was president of National Allied States and, following improvement in his health recently, started taking more active part in independent exhibitor affairs again. At the time of his death, he was director and "advisor" of North Central Allied, independent exhibitor body here. He is survived by his widow.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

The eyes and ears of the picture industry will be riveted on the new Camay (Procter & Gamble) series, which will serve as a sounding board for a theory long pro and conned. Sharp division of opinion has existed on the premise of whether a picture in general release is helped or hurt by a coincidental broadcast of the story property. Brought to a culmination after eight months of study and negotiation by Gil Ralston, night time radio head of P & G; Ted Sisson, radio director of Pedlar & Ryan, and Dema Harshbarger, biz manager of Hedda Hopper, the soap stanza will air the 30-minute film adaptations of big indie productions within three or four weeks after the de luxe first run. Metro and other majors have contended that their film properties shouldn't be given to radio until after second and third runs have been exhausted, which in most cases is around four months.

Few years ago Paramount learned from a survey of exhibitors and box office figures that broadcast of a film story proved stimulating to a picture in the runs. Proponents of the earlier availability of properties point to the effect of book-reading on the fiscal potential of a cinematized best seller in reply to those who maintain that too much of the story is tipped in advance on such a long dramatization as Lux Radio Theatre. Ralston and Sisson are now shopping around for the best available time on the networks for an early September start of the Camay dramatics. Miss Harshbarger will clear and book talent and properties of the big indies and may do double duty looking after her charge if Hedda Hopper presides as emcee, which now looks probable.

Chain breaks . . . Sherman-Marquette has found a buyer for the Mel Blanc show and it goes on the net in the fall for one of the agency's clients. Joe Rines conceived and recorded the situation comedy piece and will retain a "fatherly" interest in it. Sam Fuller, radio chief of S-M, got in from New York to look after the production and casting preliminaries . . . Variety format of the Don Ameche-Drene entry will be recorded Monday night. Jean Holloway and Hal Kantor whipped up the script, making a versatile switch-over from the variety format, waxed last week. Carlton directs both versions . . . Now that 20th-Fox has pulled out of the Frigidaire setup, Alfred Newman takes his departure and passes the baton to Frank De Vol. While Bob Redd is on vacation the production aegis transfers to Jack Johnstone, one of the most "overlooked" of the big-time directors . . . Bob Hope will think twice before he takes another emceeing job on the Walgreen disc colossals. Drug chain spot-booked the hour special on 60 CBS stations last Tuesday, but oops! right smack opposite "Mr. X," the Hope summer standby. And on its first Hooperated night on the heels of a splash newspaper campaign . . . Have you, too, been offered the production job on Abbott and Costello by Hal Hackett? . . . The Senator Claghorn character, which skyrocketed Kenny Delmar to radio fame and a picture contract, actually originated with Eddie Mayhoff, a cafe satirist. He tried for years to palm it off on network shows without success. Now lookee . . . Nate Perlstein, adv. director of Pabst, still hopeful that Eddie Cantor will be in the fold next fall . . . Coca Cola bands take an eight-week layoff July 12 but will be back in the autumn.

"There's only one way to do this thing right and I've got it." It was back in 1934 that C. E. Hooper hit upon a method of sampling radio audiences —calling set owners and asking them what they're listening to. The recall system, that of asking what they heard on the radio yesterday, was then the acceptable yardstick, in vogue since its establishment by Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting (Crossley) at its inception in 1929. Hooper refused to be swerved and stuck by his guns. Fourteen years later his system of coincidental measurement was to be completely vindicated; not only its general acceptance by the trade but the capitulation of CAB and its eventual dissolution. The handwriting had been on the wall for some time but it was unthinkable that a big outfit like CAB should bow to a small independent like Hooper. Well, it finally came to pass and soon CAB will be but a memory. By clinging to an ideal determinedly and seeing it through in dark days and light, "Hoop" not only slew the octopus but swallowed it.

Hitch hikes . . . Vic and Sade start today as summer replacement on Mutual for Dick Powell's "Rogues Gallery" . . . The Fitch people and Maurie Lipsy of MCA's Chicago office due in next week to work out a deal with Phil Harris and Alice Faye for the Fitch spot on NBC next season. Package wraps up for around $12,500 . . . Jim McFadden, radio head of McKee & Albright, around for two weeks. No problems, sezze . . . Buddy Clark will make weekly flights to N.Y. for the Carnation Contented Hour while working in a George Jessel picture at 20th-Fox . . . Jack Meakin directs the music on Silver Theatre summer series . . . Tom Harrington finally got off on a plane for N.Y. yesterday . . . Ed Gardner set his writing staff for the fall before embarking on vacation. At typeside will be Larry Marks, Vin Bogart, Sid Dorfman and Al Johansen . . . Vine Derby's maitre d', Bill Chelios, turns actor for July 1 airing of "Case Book of Gregory Hood" (KHJ, 8:30). He'll play himself to help solve a murder mystery with Sheila Graham . . . Chet Brouwer succeeds Jean McFarland as N. W. Ayer Coast publicity director, the latter leaving to marry Bob Shanley, singer on the summer Electric Hour . . . Reggie Scheubel in town . . . NBC cuts an audition platter Sunday of Mark Hellinger's "The Fourth Estate" with Edmund O'Brien in the lead role. Outstanding news beats will be dramatized . . . "No Happy Ending," dramatic series based on traffic crackups, is NBC's replacement for "Phone Again, Finnegan," which moves to CBS.

Studio Labor Accord Hope Fades In Row On Firing

Majors, harassed past few weeks by jurisdictional squabble between machinists factions, began wholesale dismissals of workers who refused to perform duties on sets of Technicolor pictures. Approximately 400 were given walking papers for refusal to perform work assigned. About 200 had previously been dropped from payrolls.

Sinatra, Shor Fight Dollars Eyed

New York, June 20.—Reports of Frank Sinatra's big winnings and Toots Shor's heavy loss on the Louis-Conn fight are greatly exaggerated. It is pointed out that with the odds 3 to 1, Sinatra would have had to put up over quarter of a million dollars to win the reputed $100,000. The street had it that Shor backed Conn to the limit.

POP-PLATTER trade circles are mystified by fact that Johnny Mercer, prez of Capitol Records, is tied to his waxery as recording artist until Oct. 1 only. When his three-year pact ended on April 1 he would commit himself for that period and no more; angle has given rise to rumors he plans to shift talents elsewhere, come autumn. Mercer, who gets a royalty of 1¾c per platter, has a shorter term tie to Capitol than any other of its names. DESPITE fact that Eli Oberstein, Victor Records' veepee in charge of pop recordings, announced several weeks ago that Slim Gaillard had been signed, pacting by Victor is not yet definite and approved by American Federation of Musicians' exec council in NY. Gaillard several months ago signed with 4 Star Records without knowledge of his agent, William Morris office. Latter, when a Victor deal loomed as a possibility, sought to snap the 4 Star pact on grounds singer signed sans Morris agency knowledge and also that contract was not quite standard AFM form. Pitch to Musicians' Local 47 won Morris' argument nod of approval, but final answer must come from James C. Petrillo, and Victor meanwhile, as well as 4 Star, are refraining from recording the sepia songster.

AS though conditions aren't bad enough, it's reported there's a determined effort on part of producers, agencies, sponsors and networks to order scripts written containing a minimum of characters. Talent buyers are attempting to cut nut by eliminating roles that aren't considered essential, and which might be replaced by sound effects, illusion or other means. And when scripts do not conform rewrites are requested that effect role-slicing. Recent use of single human sound on a show that represented chunky payroll addition almost caused one agency payroller apoplexy. Situation is especially rough on thesps who see this summer's seasonal slump as roughest in some time—particularly with continually swelling rolls of American Federation of Radio Artists.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(Famous CBS Commentator)

The threat of the Grand Mufti to peace in the Middle East may be realized when his previous activities are recalled. Ever since he was named to his post after World War I, and Palestine became a British mandate to be "a national home for the Hebrew people," the Grand Mufti has been the leader of agitation against the Hebrews, the British, and during the war, the Allies. He has been head nominally of the million Moslems in Palestine, but his influence has spread all through the Arab world, because he is an able man with a rousing voice. He led the revolt in Iraq against the Allies during the war, and attempted to organize a Moslem legion in Bosnia, the Mohammedan region of Yugoslavia, both at the instigation of the Axis. Strangely, though he was charged by both Britain and Yugoslavia as being a war criminal, neither country has pressed the charge, probably because they did not want to alienate the Arabs. He therefore still remains free, and has refuge now in one of the Arab states, Egypt. While he remains there, the situation continues tense, especially for those still in camps for displaced persons in Europe.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Old Man Barnum, years ago,
Never pulled a knuckle show.
In those days he never reckoned
Chumps were born at one per second.

Phineas T. Barnum's successor, Mike Jacobs, is up against a period of poverty—not poverty of the bankroll but poverty of logical contenders. Unlike film drama, the knuckle drama demands a supporting cast capable of stealing a show from the star, or at least able to work the star into a reasonable sweat long enough to accumulate enough footage for a newsreel or a television show. Mike has Joe Louis under control but no other heavyweight who ranks above the status of a bit player in the art of sluggery.

Like the mumbling of extras in a colossal film, you can hear a distant but rising tide of voices about Hollywood, protesting against the Jacobean handling of the publicity campaign on the alleged "Battle of the Century." The boys about town, who are pretty keen in show business, assert that Mike overplayed his hand, not only in ballyhooing a $3,000,000 gate but in playing up Billy Conn as an unquenchable firebrand and playing down Joe Louis as a nice old guy hovering on the brink of exhaustion.

Building up the weakling is a motherly old custom, adopted years ago by fight promoters but not for the same purpose. With mothers it is psychological but with knuckle impresarios it is financial. In this instance it missed fire, as the turnstiles in the Yankee Stadium testified. There were sounds of "Oh, Oh," when the boys about Hollywood heard Bill Corum's announcement that the crowd amounted to approximately 49,000 customers, making that section of the Bronx resemble the vast open spaces of the west where the population doesn't like to be fenced in.

After World War I there were several G.I. graduates, notably Gene Tunney, who carried their hostilities from the trenches into the ring, but World War II has not, thus far, borne any candidate for the heavyweight title. In a year or two some broad-shouldered soldier or sailor may develop into a threat, but meanwhile Mike has a star and a production company on his hands, but no logical contender. Back in another pugilistic era that term, "logical contender," became a pain in the ear. Any plowboy or lumberjack who weighed more than 200 pounds logically became a logical contender and the nation teemed with elimination bouts and resounded with thuds as one contender after another rendered himself illogical by bumping his buttocks on the canvas.

The golden era of legitimate mayhem will not return until Mike develops a new brand of flackery and digs up a new fighter. It takes two fighters to make a $3,000,000 fight.

BRITAIN HOT FOR U.S. PIX SAYS SELZNICK AGENT

Public in Great Britain is hot for good American films. American producers have a chance to reap higher grosses in England and Scotland than ever before, according to Hy Daab, currently beating the tom-tom for "Spellbound" and David O. Selznick product generally in the British Isles.

Reporting from Leeds, Daab writes to the Selznick office here: "You would be amazed if you could see the queues at the theatres here. Rationed as they are people seem to have money for entertainment . . . and they are right up on picture values . . . know the stars and know the producers . . . Newspaper men, too, are as alert on the subject of films as our own screen editors back home."

Daab adds that the people, for the most part "prefer American films, but smell out the good ones."

He found Scotland a potentially profitable market for "big motion pictures," with people of Glasgow and Edinburgh evidencing "a spirit of friendliness towards Americans."

Discussing advertising Daab pointed out papers are held down in size by restrictions on newsprint and quoted Scotch newspapermen as "agreed that the present four and six-page papers will continue to be the standard size, even after newsprint restrictions are lifted. They feel that the day of the big, heavy papers like our American publications is at an end, that they can tell their stories briefly and more graphically in fewer words."

LEGIT OPENING

"ALL WOMEN ARE—"

If there was any mystery attached to the title of the show which opened at the Belasco last night, the audience soon found out the answer. "All Women Are—" gabby. Not only is the Al York play composed of a wordy series of set-tos among a group of dull characters, it is remarkably silly. What is billed as a psychological mystery is merely a story about a faithless wife who gets slipped a lethal mickey. It takes almost two acts to kill her, after establishing, by means of tedious verbiage, just how really smart and upper crust everyone is in the cast. The entire show smacks, and quite loudly, of little theatre in its more deadly sense.

J. Harvey Thirkell produced the play and Bob Du Roy directed, with no credits to either for their combined efforts. The performers, hampered by the ineptly conceived dialog, could do nothing but appear wooden. Craig Reynolds, who is given star billing, tried valiantly and appeared to be the only professional on stage.

Dorothy Phillips, who is credited with the gowns, deserves plaudits for tasteful design. Richard Jackson's sets were only so-so. "All Women Are—" should be hurried back to the warehouse or else handed over to the not-so-tender mercies of the backwoods little playhouses . . . it doesn't belong on the commercial stage.

'Icetime,' New Blades Revue At Center, Shows Promise

New York, June 20.—"Icetime," new skating revue, opened at the Center theatre tonight and should keep it up indefinitely. The performance is dotted with novelties plus newcomers and acts reunited after being hit by the war. Top feature is Joan Hyldoft, a blonde on the Sonja Henie type who first came to notice at the New Yorker hotel. Freddy Trenkler and the Bruises are comedy highlights. Brandt Sisters are excellent and same goes for all featured skaters. A new song that scores is "Lovable You." Another possibility is "Son of the Silver Blades."

NY SIDELIGHTS OF LOUIS FIGHT TOUCH WELLES

New York, June 20.—Here are a few sidelights of the Louis-Conn scrap gleaned in the grottos after the mob moved out of Yankee Stadium. Orson Welles, whose "Around the World" already has "Wellsapoppin' ", had a radio on the stage constantly during the performance, stopping action every time the action got hot and heavy. He announced it to the audience and by a freak circumstance Louis dropped Conn at the exact time when Welles was floored as part of the show's action.

Despite the fact that the telecast was the baby of NBC's John F. Royal, he elected to watch the fight from ringside, leaving the net's flacks to play host to the telecast guests at Radio City. General consensus of newspaper reviewers here was that the videocast emphasizes that television is here to stay. Most dailies gave the telecast a full column, declaring it "satisfactory" but not "completely satisfactory." Times reviewer was the only one that panned the telecast reportedly because he was near-sighted. Said an RCA exec, "it's like sending a deaf man to review the opera."

Mankey to Texas

Jack Mankey heads for Galveston, Tex., tomorrow to open branch office for Bev Barnett, independent publicist, who will ballyhoo the Texas resort city. Barnett has added Miss Will Osser to his flacking staff in local office.

ARMY DECORATES SKOURAS FOR O.S.S. WORK

Washington, June 20.—The Army has awarded its Bronze Medal to George P. Skouras for his work as a civilian with the Office of Strategic Services from April to December, 1944, the War Department announced today.

Skouras' citation said: "In the execution of his position he showed steadfast determination, outstanding initiative, and exceptional judgment. By his exemplary conduct in the performance of a difficult assignment, Mr. Skouras distinguished himself and the Office of Strategic Services."

LOUIS FIGHT PIX FLOWN TO COAST

New York, June 20.—RKO fight films on the Louis-Conn scrap were shown in Broadway houses at noon today. Prints have been flown to the Coast opening there tomorrow. Picture is being sold on a flat rental basis so there is no estimate of its potential gross, but it is figured that if Conn had won, film would have grossed as much as a top feature, or a million dollars. Picture was insured against hi-jacking from the stadium to the RKO labs for $1,000,000, covered by a $9,000 premium.

RKO's film of the Louis-Conn fight opens at the Hillstreet and Pantages theatres today for exclusive first run screening.

Great Britain Seen Seeking Empire Control For Rank

Washington, June 20.—A possible move by Great Britain to institute Empire preference in motion pictures, for the benefit of J. Arthur Rank and its expanding film industry, came to light today as the State Department disclosed that the military in Malaya has decreed a minimum of 10 per cent quota of British-made films must be shown in all showcases of the colony.

It was learned that the action in Malaya, which includes the major exhibition center, Singapore, was based on a recommendation of the British Board of Trade to the British Colonial Office.

A significant feature of the decree was a provision directing the Malayan exhibs to cancel contracts with distributors if films are not delivered six months from the date of the contract. Since this provision is made retroactive to September, 1945, cancellations are expected to start immediately.

Back of the move, it is believed here, is the fact that so many American films have been booked in that region, that the British had to provide the cancellation clause to make room on the Malayan screens for the 10 per cent of British films. Although Australia and New Zealand had quota systems in effect before the war, there were no restrictions in the British colonies until this development. The Australian and New Zealand quotas were not effective during the war, because of the inability of the British to send films to the commonwealths. These quotas are now expected to be restored. It is also believed that the 10 per cent quota will be put into effect in all British colonies where London can directly dictate the orders.

The American Embassy in London was asked to inquire into the Malayan development as soon as word of the new British plan reached the State Department. Message received from the Embassy today was to the effect that the English want to preserve a place in the international film market for its own product.

Film Review

Conquest of Cheyenne

(Western)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Sidney Picker. Director, R. G. Springsteen. Screenplay by Earl Snell, from an original story by Bert Horsewell and Joseph Poland, based on Fred Harman's NEA comic strip, by special arrangement with Stephe Slesinger. Cinematographer, William Bradford. Film editor, Charles Craft. Musical director, Richard Cherwin. Sound, Fred Stahl. Art director, Fred A. Ritter. Set decorations, John McCarthy, Jr., and Ralph Zakoura. Special effects, Howard and Theodore Lydecker. Makeup supervision, Bob Mark.

CAST—Bill Elliott, Bobby Blake, Alice Fleming, Peggy Stewart, Jay Kirby, Milton Kibbee, Tom London, Emmett Lynn, Kenne Duncan, George Sherwood, Frank McCarroll, Jay Kirk and Tom Chatterton.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post theatre, Hollywood, Calif., June 20. Running time: 58 MINS.

Cheyenne in this picture is not the town up in Wyoming where the professional hoss riders put on their annual calisthenics. She is a handsome gal, played by Peggy Stewart, who is also an heiress and drives a horseless carriage into an area hitherto devoted to cattle raising and elevated bootheels. It is probably the last of Wild Bill Elliott's on the old Red Ryder trail, although Republic doesn't tell its juvenile public.

Wild Bill has long since earned his A.B. degree in upper dramatics at Republic, as William Elliott, but he is still Wild Bill in "Conquest of Cheyenne," the dead-pan rider who foils masked henchmen with the aid of a papoose named Bobby Blake, restores the constitutional rights of honest citizens and changes the economic status of the State of Texas from cows to oil.

It is roundup time in them parts and there is plenty of hoss riding, but the drama winds up on an oil derrick instead of the old familiar hideout in yonder canyon. The love interest is carried on in an oily by Peggy and her handsome but dumb sweetie, Jay Kirby, who get dunked in a mud puddle. At least, they think it is mud but it is oil, and the only guy around town who knows it is Peggy's no-good banker, Milton Kibbee, who has evil designs, including an abduction, a mortgage foreclosure, false arrest, attempted homicide and other nefarious plots familiar to the boys and gals, mostly boys, who admire the cinematic nuances of the wild western scene.

After the windup in the oil derrick, Wild Bill reveals the no-good banker as a no-good so-and-so. Jay carries Peggy out of a petroleum deluge in his loving arms and Wild Bill, with his customary modesty, rides away with Bobby Blake. An oil field is no place for a buckaroo.

Tele Traffic Jam

Princeton, N.J., June 20.—RCA demonstrated its new projection television here of the Louis-Conn fight, flashing pictures on a 16 x 22-foot outdoor screen. More than 3,000 townspeople gathered to view the exhibition, passing cars stopped and state troopers were forced to break up the traffic jam. Projection system is still in the laboratory stage but is expected to be commercialized soon.

Gerald Drayson Adams is starting a term contract and Charles Marquis Warren is due to report soon. In addition to new writers, Raymond Chandler has returned to do a screenplay and N. The KILLERS
A UNIVERSAL RELEASE

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: Pare Lorentz, who produced some of the best U.S. docu-mentaries, including "The Plow That Broke the Plains," has a big deal cooking in town. He arrived for a visit of several days after leaving the Army Air Forces, in which he served as a lieutenant colonel. He was also the sharp-penned film critic of the old Vanity Fair . . . William Powell reports to Metro for another "Thin Man" picture with Myrna Loy immediately after finishing "Life with Father" on his loanout to Warners . . . Who's going to cover Broadway this summer? Sam Grafton and Lee Mortimer are in Hollywood, Earl Wilson arrives Tuesday and Leonard Lyons July 1. Daily Variety's own Radie Harris will be getting on a Hollywood-bound plane tomorrow, and Walter Winchell is understood to be going to do a retake on his earlier visit . . . Lee Mortimer and Jack Lait, latter also coming out from his NY Mirror hangout, have done an expose job in their "New York Confidential," soon to be published. Book, of special interest to Hollywood commuters to the big town, tells how to avoid the clip joints, what to wear and where, and a lot of inside stuff on the town's night life. Lait and Mortimer will gather material for a followup, "Hollywood Confidential," during their present visit. Studios are eyeing the proofs for the makings of a film . . . Top agent is shushing one and all on his romance with the ex-wife of a crooner.

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: To make it official, Eagle-Lion ought to place S. P. Eagle and Ben Lyon under contract as producers, in the view of one observer . . . Ruth Warrick, who has portrayed Patient Griselda for most of her screen career, will get a reversal of form in Mark Hellinger's "Swell Guy," in which she will play a sexy siren . . . Peter O'Crotty's whaleboat venture—he bought 29 of them at a Maritime Commission auction when his mind became unhinged in the bidding—has turned out happily. Pete has sold all but one, though he had to take a $10 loss on each transaction . . . Bing Crosby's weakness for flamboyant clothes will get full play in "The Emperor Waltz." He will wear 1906 Tyrolean garb including short leather breeches, green woolen hose, red shirt, embroidered suspenders and a green hat with feathers. All this and Technicolor too! . . . Irving Gibbs, the 20th-Fox main gate guard, will play himself in the studio's "Hollywood Story." Gibby is probably the most famous gateman since Cerberus . . . George Sanders, working with a pair of pistols which the research department said hadn't been used since they figured in a Parisian duel in 1860, still wasn't taking any chances. Not an old detective story writer like Sanders. He examined them carefully to make sure they weren't loaded . . . OFF THE LOTS: Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan, the Jack Haleys and Bill Gargan at the Beverly Hills Club. Fred Brady and Sheila Ryan, the Al Sacks, the John Laurenzes, at Billingsley's. The Kent Smiths, Horace Kelland and Princess Lucinge, at Mocambo. Doris Fulton and Gordon Polk, Bob Crosby's vocalist, will be married today.

CALL SHEET: LEO GUILD'S book, "You Bet Your Life," sold out its first printing of 10,000 copies . . . JANE WYMAN bought "Sheila," the mare Ronald Reagan is riding in "Stallion Road" . . . LENA HORNE will auction a Josephi hat at the Biltmore dinner for the benefit of Spanish refugees . . . EDDIE ALBERT must be training for the six-day bike races. He's been cycling to work at Universal every day from his home in Hollywood, a six-mile stretch of pedaling each way . . . MARGARITA BLANCA, young interpretative dancer of the Angna Enters type, will give a recital Sunday . . . SOL FIELDING has had an Aztec ceramic accepted for exhibition at the Los Angeles Museum . . . FRANK PUGLIA, 25 years a film actor, is organizing an Italian workshop theatre in Los Angeles . . . BETTY HUTTON is studying child psychology, preparation for approaching motherhood, by acting as sitter for Benay Venuta's children . . . BOB TUTON has coined a phrase describing the condition of persons who never catch onto naughty stories —"off-color-blind" . . . BILL LUNDIGAN is dividing his off-time from "Dishonored Lady" (shutdown due to Hedy Lamarr's illness) between golfing and painting his apartment . . . BOB SCHILLER walked up to Sydney Greenstreet, slapped him on the back, and greeted him, "Hiya, gang!"

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: So far we've been able to resist the drama in Jim Moran's lonely vigil atop an ostrich egg, all for the glory and publicity of International's "The Egg and I," figuring it won't amount to much unless that egg hatches out an ostrich resembling Moran. But a spy informs us that Moran, the dirty sneak, has been leaving his post of duty at nightfall and having a substitute, or sit-in, take over . . . VACATION NOTES: Bill Bendix and family take off for a New York vacation in July. Sonny Tufts and his wife will go to Hawaii on completion of his loanout in "The Killers" . . . Sally Rawlinson, daughter of the silent screen star Herbert Rawlinson, will marry Alvin White as soon as they can find an apartment . . . Runion in Hollywood dept.: A dozen years ago Tay Garnett directed "S.O.S. Iceberg" at UFA studios in Berlin for Universal, and Robert Fellows was his assistant. Today they're making "The Big Haircut" for Paramount, only Fellows is producer of the picture . . . Add casting department headaches: RKO had to find 12 Mexican children who could gurgle baby talk in Spanish, and a dog who would obey orders in Spanish . . . Clifford Gans, story editor for Sol M. Wurtzel, tells of an actress whose scenes wound up on the cutting room floor so consistently she was getting fanmail from mice.—D.D.T.

WARNER TALENT STAFF HYPOED BY 12 REGIONAL REPS

Indicating an intensive drive to expand the Warner Bros.' player roster, Jack L. Warner yesterday announced addition of 12 new regional reps to studio's talent department staff. The hypoed talent hunt is expected to bolster studio's heavy production slate slated for the next six months. Drive will be conducted throughout the summer among stock companies, summer drama classes in universities and civic theatrical groups.

"Vital new personalities are the life-blood of motion pictures," Warner stated yesterday. "There will never be an oversupply of genuinely talented and enthusiastic actors and actresses—any more than there will be too many fine motion pictures.

"Not since the introduction of sound 20 years ago has there been so much opportunity for new faces on the screen. Our increased staff of talent scouts, working throughout the world, is charged with providing a continuing and increased supply of fresh and personable players—both for stellar grooming and for the important category of featured character roles."

Selznick Promotes James Stewart

James Stewart yesterday was appointed by David O. Selznick to newly created job as technical supervisor of all Selznick - International and Vanguard Films. Stewart, formerly at RKO for 15 years, came to the Selznick organization eight months ago as sound director. In the new job he will have full charge of film editing, sound, music, laboratory, and special effects departments and personnel of these departments.

COL B'DCASTING KQW PURCHASE CASE UP AGAIN

Washington, June 20.—Federal Communications Commission today was asked to reconsider its refusal to permit sale of KQW, San Francisco, to Columbia Broadcasting System by Brunton Bros., present owners. Both parties asked for oral argument on deal and their "exceptions to FCC findings," protested idea advanced by commish that purchase of outlet would lead to "undue concentration of control" of radio facilities.

FCC claimed CBS owned seven stations outright, but failed to find where National Broadcasting Co., owned six, and that seven Mutual Broadcasting Co., stockholders own aggregate of 15 AM stations. CBS also objected to FCC stand that other major webs were able to operate profitably without owning more than five stations.

CBS claimed acquisition of KQW is necssary to finance net shows, and that net is now operating "so close" if revenues drop to normal 1941 levels CBS will be operating at "substantial loss." In view of diminishing advertising and rising costs of net operation, CBS maintained it important that FCC allow nets to buy and operate own stations.

The offering is expected to be made about July 9, 1946 with Lehman Bros. and Goldman, Sachs & Co. heading the underwriting group.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Eleanor Roosevelt's personal request for the actor to play Franklin D. in MGM's "Beginning or the End" was Raymond Massey. And the only reason Massey thumbed it down (plus a very tempting salary) is because he feels very strongly that an important attribute for any actor portraying the late President is to be able to also capture the most integral part of his personality—his voice—and he doesn't feel qualified as a vocal impersonator.

Now that the Larry Oliviers have planed back to London, their inseparable pal, Ruth Gordon, will join Gar Kanin on the Coast, where his father is still desperately ailing. Until Gar's return, further casting on the road companies of "Born Yesterday" are being held in abeyance. Incidentally, Judy Holliday's action in bringing Max Gordon before Equity to demand feature billing, is being severely criticized by her fellow players who feel that instead of suing Gordon, she ought to get down on her knees to him in gratitude for giving her the biggest break of her career.

From my own Philo Vance, who shall be nameless with the alias Arthur Schwartz, I hear that, contrary to all scuttlebutt, "Park Avenue" is proceeding exactly on schedule, with the rehearsal tee-off set for Aug. 20, the date originally skedded way back in Jan. Schwartz checks in today for the "fair and Warner" welcome of "Night and Day" when it preems at the Hollywood, July 5.

Is Lana Turner deliberately throwing reporters off the scent by announcing her impending marriage to Huntington Hartford, when she has another groom waiting at the altar? Or will they both go the way of Pete Jaeger to satisfy Lana's woman's perogative for changing her mind?

ADD ARRIVALS: Clark Gable, Mary Phillips and Marilyn Maxwell at the Waldorf . . . George Raft, Phil Silvers and S. P. Eagle at the Sherry-Netherland . . . Paulette Goddard at the St. Regis . . . Edward Norris at the Savoy-Plaza . . . Connie Crebs and Milt Howe at the Plaza . . . Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz have switched to the Delmonico.

HAIL AND FAREWELL: Sitting in back of Jennifer Jones and Margaret Sullavan at the City Center opening of "Henry V," it was interesting to watch the reaction of both these "students" of Shakespeare. Maggie, oblivious to glamour, wore her tortoise shell rimmers and snuggled back in her seat in rapt absorption. Jennifer, rustling in green taffeta, seemed to have her thoughts even farther away than the battlefield of Agincourt. Her eyes wandered over the audience, and granted her hair is long and enviably wavy, she still didn't have to keep continually touching it, as if to see if it were still there. She made me so nervous that I was almost tempted to tap her on the shoulder and say, "Pardon me, madame, but would you mind removing your hair—or your hand?"

Both girls shared one escort, Tommy Kurtz, father of a former classmate of Maggie's, and her closest friend in N.Y. But strangely enough, they attracted little attention. On this occasion, all eyes were focussed on the actor, self-consciously watching his shadow self illuminate the art of acting to its highest form—Larry Olivier and his proud wife beside him, Vivien Leigh. Vivien, wearing a black lace dress and a sequinned veil worn in sari fashion, again proved that there is no Hollywood glamour gal to match her loveliness. Larry, looking slightly nude in just a plain dark suit after the magnificent Technicolor raiment of "Henry," nevertheless, managed to look equally dashing and handsome. In response to a tumultous ovation, he made a brief, charming speech and echoed the sentiments of everyone when he concluded by saying, "To leave here is painful. To return will be such joy."

CUFFO NOTES: Helmut Dantine has now got around to discovering Sonja Henie . . . Add Nat Karson to the list of producers who are raiding the acting field to find that "rara avis" in the theatre—a good director, who is also available. Karson is snaring Phil Loeb to handle the megaphone on the Al Hirshfield-S. J. Perelman musical, "Sweet Bye and Bye" and there's a strong possibility that Dolores Grey will sing Ogden Nash's lyrics to Vernon Duke's score . . . The Barberry Room won't be the same without Jim Moriarity, another beloved boniface, whose untimely death shocked his many pals . . . Memo to Rouben Mamoulian: Revisited "St. Louis Woman" the other night, and it would delight your artistic integrity to see every member of the cast giving the same fresh, spontaneous performance as on opening night . . . That was Mrs. Ben Marden, who squelched Eddie Bracken for his bad manners at a nitery . . . Florence Pritchett, who meets every stag at eve, is now meeting Peter Lawford . . . Now that Orson Welles is including a kitchen sink in "Around the World," George Jean Nathan claims the only thing missing is Blanche Yurka. But if Orson can't act on Nathan's suggestion, it's because Miss Yurka has been grabbed by 20th-Fox for "Rue de Madeleine" . . . Carl Brisson's feud with Evelyn Knight is too infantile for a grandfather. Which reminds me that the Versailles, where Miss Knight is now a Ver-sigh, is the most beautiful room in town and the cuisine a gourmet's delight . . . Rex Harrison, whose wife is slaving at RKO, and Annabella, whose husband is slaving at 20th-Fox, kept each other company at the Actor's Fund benefit of "Born Yesterday."

And now, the Broadway Runaround suspends for a few weeks and the Hollywood Runaround begins with my arrival at the Bev-Hills tomorrow.

RANK TO LAUNCH ROAD DISTRIB ON 'HENRY V' PLAN

New York, June 20.—Road show distribution of a number of selected British pictures, patterned after the special handling of "Henry V," is to be launched by the Rank organization under the newly set up Prestige Picture Program. Lawrence McGinley, named general salesmanager for the new program, takes over Monday. McGinley is currently Universal's Indianapolis branch manager. Rank move is indicated by the success of "Henry V" in corraling class audiences.

Comics have long ranted and railed against the present system of measuring radio audiences, claiming that their big audience is in the rural districts and villages, unchecked by the Hooper interviewers. That they have a just grievance is not to be disputed and their plaint has fallen on sympathetic ears. C. E. Hooper is going to do something about it. His checkers will go into urban, village and rural areas, through the proxy of Uncle Sam's mail carriers, and contact those homes on the RFD and off the phone company's main truck line. The improved and expanded coast program report, restricted regionally to the 3,689,000 radio homes in the three Coast states, will operate thusly:

From a list assembled by the staff of Ruth Arnold, manager of the Hooper Hollywood office, will be drawn the remote checkers. Their qualifications will be examined to the end of getting a true cross section of audience preference. Those selected will be mailed forms to be filled out weekly with the programs they heard over the seven-day span. Payoff to the voluntary workers will be in the form of premiums such as household appliances, etc. For want of a better name it will be known as the Hooper Diary and the results incorporated periodically in the pocket piece, now the official reference guide of the trade. Diary will be given national coverage and it is hoped before a few months to have 7,500 rural homes checked weekly. Miss Arnold will explain the Projectable Pacific Coast Ratings (diary) to Coast admen at their convention in Spokane June 27.

Chain breaks . . . Nat Wolff, super salesman, who has always had a yen to direct, gets his wish and next fall will be at the controls of the Abbott and Costello show. He relieves Don Bernard, who asked for his release because of expanded activities into the recording field. Comedy show undergoes a complete revamp and of the present setup only A & C remain. Even the format takes a turn to situation comedy. Wolff's last directorial effort was 10 years ago when he produced the Mary Pickford program from Pickfair for Ice Industries . . . Blue network rolled up a whopping 67.2 Hooper for the Louis-Conn fight. Returns on KECA are not yet complete but it's a safe guess it will be in the late 40's. Highest rating on record is President Roosevelt's 79 on his war message to the people (62,100,000 adults) day after Pearl Harbor .

KFI GIVEN NIX BY KECA ON LOUIS FIGHT PROPOSAL

Station KFI attempted to cash in on public interest of Louis-Conn fight by offering to carry free on sharing basis with American Broadcasting Company's KECA but National Broadcasting Co. outlet was turned down. KFI was prepared to cancel out regularly scheduled NBC Kay Kyser commercial program in order to make room for fracas broadcast but was told it was "too late" when offer came in late Wednesday afternoon.

ABC states it thought at first proposal from rival was a rib. But Earle C. Anthony, KFI owner, personally made pitch after long conference with station manager, William B. Ryan, whose idea stunt probably was. Frank Samuels, assistant to v-p, Don Searle, now vacationing, nixed proposition.

KFI proposed on basis of its 50,000 watts offering infinitely greater coverage to event than KECA's 5,000, and on basis of fight being first major event since beginning of war and, therefore, prime public interest matter. If consummated it would have meant KFI's having to rebate to NBC for clipping commercial.

Westman Inked

Nydia Westman, who has played mother for the past two years in the New York stage production of "Life With Father," was signed yesterday for a top role in 20th-Fox's "The Late George Apley."

New Indie Producing Co. Is Formed Under Lyons

Formation of Producing Artists, Inc., a new indie combo of actors, directors, producers and writers, was announced yesterday. Arthur S. Lyons, agent topper, is prexy of the new company. Joseph Justman is veepee and treasurer. Production headquarters will be at the Producing Artists Studios, currently in the process of construction at Cahuenga Blvd. and Waring Ave. Studio will be completed by early Aubust.

The new setup, financed by an Eastern-California banking combo, is readying a slate of four to six top-budgeted features on its 1946-47 program. Top talent in all departments will be cut in on each production on a participating basis.

Lyons and Justman left for New York yesterday to initiate negotiations on distribution setup. They were preceded east by Leon Kaplan of the legal firm of Kaplan & Livingston, West Coast attorneys for the company. Also slated to participate in the distribution confabs is the law firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim, New York attorneys for the indie outfit.

Morey-Sutherland Cartoons in Work

First two of Morey-Sutherland cartoons, in firm's annual schedule of six for United Artists release, are in work, with third shortly to go into production. Pair are tagged "The Fatal Kiss" and "The Case of the Missing Ghost," both one-reelers in Technicolor. McDONALD, PIERCE TAKE ON NELSON GILT EDGE DEBTS

Cliff McDonald and Don Pierce, who last month acquired Four Star and Gilt Edge Records from Richard A. Nelson, yesterday declared that they are assuming all liabilities incurred by the disceries under Nelson regime. A reported $45,000 is owed general creditors, and new owners will pay off and deduct from amount paid Nelson. McDonald and Pierce have had physical possession of waxeries for nearly a month, but as far as can be discerned no money has changed hands in any direction, due to period required to straighten out books.

One important matter which has been adjusted satisfactorily is claim leveled against the two labels by Harry Fox, trustee of Music Publishers' Protective Association. When sale by Nelson was first announced, Fox declared he would not recognize it due to fact the companies owed music pubs royalties for songs disced; figure mentioned at that time was $15,000, and it is understood that Fox notified new owners they would not be licensed to record copyrighted ditties until sum was paid in full. Last night local attorney Jerry Ralston, who represents MPPA on Coast, stated that re-check of past sales reveals amount owed is nearer $7,000 and that deal has been made with McDonald and Pierce whereby they will pay off. Four Star, incidentally, will do a recording tonight of pop tunes, using Opie Cates' ork on four sides, indicating agreement.

Industry's Leaders Debate Self-Regulation Problem

Talk of the town yesterday was the film industry dinner, meeting in closed session, to discuss its system of self-regulation through the Production Code Administration. After speeches by Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president; Donald Nelson, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers: I. M. Chadwick, president of Independent Motion Picture Association; Joseph I. Breen, MPA veepee and production code administrator, the subject of self-regulation was thrown open to discussion from the 100 film executives invited to attend the dinner meeting by Louis B. Mayer.

It is understood that the tenor of the discussion was strongly in favor of the present framework of the code, with all speakers agreeing that Freedom of the Screen must be preserved.

Walter Wanger pointed out, it is reported, that his difficulties with state and city censorship bodies came after the Production Code Administration had passed his production of "Scarlet Street" without suggesting a change. Wanger said that neither himself, nor his director, writers, actors, had any idea when the picture was completed that it would run into censorship problems. Wanger declared that "Scarlet Street" had a highly moral tone, with every evildoer reciving his just due, and "no one was more surprised" than he when New York and Atlanta censors ordered scenes and dialog deleted.

Discussion also centered on the fact the Code must be interpreted within the spirit as well as the letter of its provisions. Wanger pointed out that nowadays women's magazines will use a type of stories they would have instantly rejected ten years ago, and the moral attitudes of the nation are constantly changing.

David O. Selznick also took up the literary theme, pointing to the large proportion of best-selling fiction, especially in the past several years, which is highly censorable from the motion picture standpoint. It was emphasized, however, in the discussion that books reach a limited audience compared to films.

Joseph M. Schenck emphasized the problem of picture-makers to select film material which will be acceptable morally and also be acceptable to exhibitors from a sales standpoint.

PUNCH FOR TELE SEEN IN 16-M PIC REVIEW

An unpretentious, but somewhat arresting little item was previewed last night at Hollywood's "Old Movies" theatre—a 16m film designed for both television and the theatre screen. "I Dreamed of Murder" ran but 15 minutes, as it will Monday when videoed over Mutual-Don Lee's telecaster W6XAO.

Almost wholly the work of one man Philip Sudano, ex-legit trouper who toyed in tele before Army service, it won't qualify for commercial filmeries, and theme nixes much attention from 16m church circuits. However, it should click with homemarkets, and for tele, it has punch. Purposely, camera framed only closeups, and only one person is ever visible wholly, for story is told through others' eyes. Yarn is taut and terse, a psychological study of Parisian murderer. Edward Aaron's camera caught the tenseness sought and added some apt imagery. Sudano made quite a study of lead in story he authored. Other parts were but voices. In sum, it's superior tele subject, but too arty for what commercial screen dates are open to 16m at public admission.

ACCORD IN STUDIO LABOR VANISHES WITH FIRINGS

Studio Unions committee and the labor committee of the Association of Motion Picture Producers would bring accord faded when it was announced after the session that dismissals and work refusals were not discussed. Sessions between two committees boiled down to a discussion of wages and contracts.

Producers offered Conference locals increase of 18 cents an hour or 10 per cent, whichever was greater, but CSU told producer committee it wanted a 36-hour work week, at the same take-home pay, in a move to spread work and permit bringing in a number of apprentices to learn the motion picture painting trade. CSU said it had the problem of returning veterans, plus those who are studying painting under the G.I. educational program, and wants to bring in about 70 apprentices, or approximately 10 per cent of the membership.

Producers committee declared it would have to take the 36-hour week request under advisement, but indicated it favored a 40-hour week. CSU was told that producer wage increase offer was 133 per cent of the 1941 wage. Conference committee was told that producers labor committee would deal with others negotiating contracts and whatever those locals received the CSU would get.

Another meeting of the two committees is slated for next week. CSU group was lead by Herbert Sorrell and included James Skelton, J. R. Stehr, Roy Tindall, Carl Head and Sd Mussa. For the producers were Eddie Mannix, Ben Kahane, Cliff Work, Pat Casey and Fred Pelton.

Interest now centers on results of the mass meeting called for Sunday night at the Hollywood Legion stadium, where CSU local members will be given a report on dismissals, wage and contract negotiations, and other phases of the current labor battle. CSU reported yesterday that it still has not had an answer to wire sent major company presidents demanding action on negotiations. Wire was backed with threat of "economic action" unless an immediate get-together was effected. Whether yesterday's session with the producers labor committee will count for the immediate meeting is not known as wire was sent to company prexies and Eric Johnston, prexy of Motion Picture Association and Association of Motion Picture Producers.

While tying in to a certain extent, CSU demands that producers stop alleged stalling on contract negotiations are separate from Conference's support of machinists in IAM Lodge 1185. CSU takes stand that studios are violating AFL arbitration directive in refusing to permit IAM members to service cameras, even though union is now under suspension by the AFL and has been replaced in studios by a new AFL Federal charter group of machinists.

Studios, following notice from Central Labor Council that AFL locals could not work with or on work performed by IAM men, have been encountering work stoppages and other troubles as result of jurisdictional squabble. Painters and carpenters are refusing to work on color sets as long as studios will not permit IAM men to service Technicolor cameras. Teamsters are refusing to return color cameras to Technicolor each night for servicing unless work is performed by Federal charter machinists.

BROADCAST MUSIC TO TRY ALL RADIO SONG TEST PLAN

New York, June 20.—Broadcast Music, Inc., will shortly launch special transcription campaign of all-radio test at song popularization. Idea is to test possibility of making song hits via use of transcriptions and live radio programs only, instead of embracing other avenues such as recordings, etc.

Transcription firms are now being solicited to take initial test tune, "Who, If No You," in what forthcoming sessions they have scheduled for talent. If biscuit makers oblige and release to subscribing stations, BMI will pressure stations to regularly schedule tune in programs. Indies would handle transcriptions while networks will be called upon to lend national push on live shows.

Solid cooperation is expected of radio industry since BMI is financed by broadcasters. Notion is that broadcasters will actually be helping themselves in assisting BMI in creation of more hit numbers and ultimately a stronger library with which to buck American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

WB in 2nd Juve Showcase Series

Thomas said PRC would release from 24 to 26 films next season. COOLEY ORK FLIES APART IN NEW MONEY ROW

Dissension-ridden band of Spade Cooley has busted up for second time within a year, and orginal members of crew who remained after the first fracas are organizing their own crew, "Cowboy Caravan" under leadership of Tex Williams. Nine men quitting served notice on Cooley and will leave band on June 30, with first possible booking being for Forman Phillips of "County Barn Dance."

Bustup came last Sunday night when Cooley attempted to fire Tex Williams, original with crew and featured performer, when pair disagreed over monies allegedly due Williams. Other bandsmen, already peeved for over a month at Cooley's run-in with Deuce Spriggens band and ousting of latter from Santa Monica ballroom, joined Williams in mass exodus.

Only four newcomers remained with Cooley who is now attempting to reorganize with emphasis on brass instead of strings. He charges that men refused to play a benefit but inside is that only benefit he sought was for himself. Last month he was dragged before board at Local 47 on charges of "solicitation" of fellow musician's job when he and Walter Newcomb, operator of Santa Monica dancery, broke lease of Bobbie Bennett who had booked him (Cooley) in as alternate band with the then playing Spriggens crew. Within month after entering scene Cooley had the spot and job alone.

None of Cooley's original men are now with band. Six left with Deuce Spriggens a year ago when latter exited after similar spat with Cooley and formed his own crew. Possible that latest fracas may also reach union since Cooley is said to have threatened exiting members. Williams' new crew will add three men to form band of 12.

EXHIBS WARNED SHOWMANSHIP LACK IS COSTLY

here were given that word of warning by H. M. Richey, Metro exhibitor relations chief.

Using figures supplied Metro by Audience Research Institute, Richey pointed out there is a total of 76,000,000 potential theatregoers in the country, but the highest number to ever see any picture was the 41,000,000 that turned out for "Gone with the Wind." The average "A" is seen by only 18,000,000, Richey said, and made a plea for a return to showmanship so exhib can grab off potential patrons to compensate for the anticipated b.o. decline.

Leon Bamberger, RKO sales promotion head, was another speaker. Answering the anxiety expressed by exhibs on 16m competition, he said the company had not renewed its contract for 16m distribution by the Walter Gutlohn organization but was about to go into servicing narrow-gauges by its own exchanges to retain complete control and prevent its competition with 35m.

Murray Goldstein, general sales manager for Monogram, taking advantage of the distributors' turn at bat at the convention today, squawked that indies are much less receptive to minor companies' product than the circuit. He said exhibs are not giving Monogram a fair chance "by closing their doors and minds to pictures that would get an entirely different reception if offered by a bigger company. Monogram can't continue making its relatively high budgeters," he beefed, "unless it's able to sell them."

testimony of other principals from L.A. recently and he was scheduled to appear today at a second hearing. When Hughes did not show up today, his counsel, Fred Albertson, asked that he be relieved of testifying to continue tests with the army on the giant aircraft he is building.

Plotkin insisted that Hughes take the stand Monday, if possible, since as principal stockholder in the Hughes Tool Co. his policies in television are important to FCC's decision. Meanwhile, probe of Paramount's far-flung interests in video is slated to start Monday as well, with Television Productions, Inc. prexy, Paul Raibourn, and other picture officials on the stand. Tommy Lee, heaviest stockholder in the Don Lee chain, was also slated to appear at the hearing but was excused from personal appearance on a plea of illness.

Tommy Lee is confined to his home here with a back injury and under the care of a physician.

Blum, in association with Feldman, is credited with originating the "package deal" in motion pictures.

HOLLYWOOD INSIDE

JESSE L. Lasky, thinking back to Warners' offering of talking pictures 20 years ago, remembers that he tried to carry the dramatic message that silent movies were no more when he attended a sales meeting in Great Britain two years later. Paramount exhibitors and newspapermen representing the "nationals" in London were in the audience of 600 when Lasky rose to speak. He announced that he had just come from America to give them the news that the screen would never again be silent, and that all pictures would talk from then on. He was interrupted immediately by Hannen Swaffer, British columnist for the Daily Herald, who sprang to his feet, took the floor from the dismayed Lasky, and flayed the American for having the effrontry to come to England, make such a statement, and insult the intelligence of his British audience, who, according to Swaffer, were not to be taken in by Hollywood fabrications geared to capture headlines in the Empire press.

IN answering suit of ousted Johnny Huddleston, Pied Pipers aver that group of which he (Huddleston) was a member broke up when he went into Army. Pipers also claim they have been obliged to spend huge amounts of money for new arrangements to fit voices of June Hutton, who replaced Jo Stafford, and Hal Hopper, who replaced Huddleston. An original member of Pipers, Huddleston is said to have been offered $1,000 and $100 weekly for year in settlement. In his suit he seeks an accounting, charges conspiracy to exclude him from group and asks $150,000 damages.

WHEAT crops of some dozen or so San Joaquin Valley farmers will return some fancy extra profits this season as result of negotiations completed this week by Paramount. For big scenes in studio's "The Big Haircut," Paramount has agreed to harvest wheat crops on a number of farms near Fresno and Stockton; will reimburse the farmers for use of their land and equipment; permit the farmers to keep the harvested wheat and, in addition, will pay them to serve as technical advisors and extras, mainly for operation of the harvesting combines and other machinery.

When new equipment is received, company expects to get going on full capacity basis.

LOCAL newsmen said to be demonstrating increasing antagonism towards radio. What used to be publisher apathy and editorial policy has now spread among working newshawks, it's reported, who make no effort at concealing ill feeling and seem deliberate in actions. Trend has been noticed coming and was particularly noticeable at election time when radioites and scribes were thrown together.

In addition to holding regular monthly auditions, station is scouting field for likely candidates.

Random thoughts on Russians and Reds: The atom bomb rehearsal brings nearer the day of the actual dropping, with but a few small voices raised suggesting that world peace might be better served without this flexing of atomic muscles . . . Maybe that's why the Soviet press is telling its people about the "Pax Americana" and boasting of its own military strength—but has not yet told its citizens what Baruch proposes . . . In France, the underground chief, Mona-Lisa-smiling Bidault, has demonstrated that there can be unity among Communists and other liberals. Internally all three parties, the Communists, the Socialists and the MRP (which is Catholic but not conservative by any means, despite some of the press), all seek almost the same social and economic objectives. Their difference is in ideology, not being played up by the French Reds . . . Respected Sumner Welles, not being in the State Department, can voice thoughts in other minds—this one that if Franco is overthrown, Spain goes Communist.

Gone are the days when Vaudeville marched along
With acrobats and one-act plays and song.
But marching on the film marquees it goes
Arrayed as motion picture music shows.

A master of ceremonies in an elder day took pride in his diplomatic diction. Now he takes pride in his ability to broadcast insults. Diplomats, in high silk hats, are taking the nightclub route, tossing harsh words hither and yon, evidently for laughs among the home constituents. So this scientific world is heading toward a vaudeville show, with atomic acrobatics.

WILLIAM S. HART PASSES AWAY IN HOSPITAL

his screen personality gave birth to the expression "strong, silent man" and in the screen's infancy, when most male leads were mere pretty boys brandishing over-painted faces in lieu of masculinity, Hart defied the rules of the period and brought pictures ruggedness and vitality and naturalness. Of all western stars of his time, Hart's work won far more critical respect than any accorded his rivals.

Hart's first appearance as an actor was in "Austerlitz," NY legit play starring Daniel Bandman, which opened on Jan. 21, 1889, when Hart was 19 years of age. In the next few years the youthful actor picked up the experience which was to serve him in good stead the remainder of his acting career, by trouping with such stage luminaries of the period as Lawrence Barrett, Madame Rhea and Modjeska. By 1895 he had attained the success of playing male leads opposite Modjeska and Julia Arthur.

First stage solo starring role for Hart was in "Man in the Iron Mask," in which he scored at the old People's theatre, NY, in 1898. During the next years, with an established reputation, Hart played Shakespeare, and Shaw with equal aplomb, and, in the midst of such triumphs created the role of Messala in the first "Ben Hur" company ever to play Broadway, opening at the theatre of that name on Nov. 29, 1899.

He enjoyed a long succession of hits, climaxed by top role in "The Squaw Man," in 1905, and title part in "The Virginian," in 1907. After leads in "The Barrier" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Hart turned his attention to films, in which he became an immediate star through his work in "Square Deal Sanderson," "Wagon Tracks," "Sand," "White Oak," "Tumbleweeds," "Blue Blazes Rawden" and a long string of other oat operas.

In 1919 Hart formed his own producing company, after having worked for late Ralph Ince and others. After his formal retirement as an actor, he sold 20th-Fox a screen story, "O'Malley of the Mounted," in 1936. Last time the star was seen on the nation's screens was in 1939 when his "Tumbleweeds" was reissued by Astor Pictures.

He is survived by a son, William S. Hart, Jr.

BROADCASTERS SET FOR SHOWDOWN

Indie station managers, headed by Bob Reynolds, Southern California Broadcasters prexy, gather in law offices of Dean Johnson Wednesday to discuss long-delayed negotiations with International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Two months ago union proposed pay increases for technicians and management's counter offer was rejected after union called for vote by those affected.

Since that time union has done nothing further and has left broadcasters completely in air as to next step. Wearying under war of nerves, broadcasters decided to meet for round-up discussion out of which may come some proposal for further action on their part.

Don Lee Video Hailed As Nearing Perfection

Television, the magic word, has lost none of its magic. From what was viewed on 1938 W6XAO equipment Saturday of the first videocast at the swim pool atop Mt. Lee it is easy to put one's finger on the cause of all the flurry and excitement in the new electronics art. It is easier to discern how the same event would have screened had new cathodes and other postwar advancements been incorporated into the set that caught this reporter's eye. Save for scanning-camera flares, the definition was surprisingly clear, especially the close-ups.

Caught 14 miles from the transmitter and on a line of sight blocked twice by elevations midways, the live telecast of natators in the pool and manikins parading the rim was eye-arresting the full way. Defects there were, to be expected in experiments with obsolete equipment, but the general impression gave hope of the perfect picture soon to come. This futuristic fanfare is born of what was seen on a seven-year-old set with 8½ x 11 screen on a broken line of transmission. Definition was on the standard 525 lines but Harry Lubcke and his Don Lee engineers can remember back 15 years when that network used 36 lines in pioneering the images that fly through the air. The sound was amplitude modulation (standard broadcast).

It was Occidental College Alumni Day that inspired the televent and most of the talent was from that school. Gals modeled the new swim suits and others did some plain and fancy swimming and diving. In the water and on the diving board the action was brought to the screen without losing a frame. Muddy at times due to a bad tube in the scanning camera, one of the three used, the over-all effect gave high promise of visual perfection in store for set owners. Just now there are about 200 sets within range of Don Lee's signal. Once the new models start rolling off assembly lines and the video engineers can stock new tubes, rays and other refinements, television will be here. Not just experimental television but the real thing under commercial auspices. No such marring flares—clouds of electrons accumulating on the mosaic of the camera tube—will bedevil the engineers to dim their peculiar virtuosity.

Under the supervision of Harry Lubcke, tele expert at Don Lee since 1931, and directed by Jack Stewart, the combo wet and dry exhibit was performed by Bud Linden, Byron Palmer, Dr. Sammy Lee, Evelyn Moore, Juno Stover, Jane Britt, Ivan Drake, Jerry Tinling and a bevy of bathing beauts from Oxy. Brought on for an interview was the swim crusader, Jimmy McHugh, who sans makeup looked not unlike Uncle Tom. His ad libbing, however, sparkled. Film shorts were also shown but failed to develop the same clarity as the live action. It becomes more and more evident that special films will have to be made for television, with the emphasis on lighting.

Judging from what was viewed on prewar equipment it is not with runaway enthusiasm that one can become hopeful and phophetic. Video of high order should be a reality before the year is out.

Par Toppers Set Plans For Hypoed World Sales Drive

Paramount's post-war plans for a hypoed production and sales program aimed at the world market highlighted company's initial semi-annual meeting of domestic and overseas execs, which wound at the studio over the weekend.

Headed by prexy Barney Balaban, a contingent of home office toppers and reps of Paramount's foreign organizations discussed world-wide plans of the company with Henry Ginsberg, studio head, and other studio execs.

"Among the subjects we discussed was American production in regard to foreign sales possibilities," Balaban disclosed. "This entailed consideration of all current and future product in light of acceptability of subject matter and stars in world-wide markets.

"Tentative plans for the erection of a Paramount studio in England were submitted by David Rose. Y. Frank Freeman will return to England in the near future in connection with this project.

"Full discussions were held concerning the recent court decision and its potential influence on production and sales and the possible form of the resulting decree.

"The necessities of studio expansion as soon as post-war restrictions are relaxed and replacement and building can be undertaken were thoroughly discussed."

Before winding the meet, group viewed company's completed product for the 1946-47 program. Balaban, on behalf of the visiting execs, expressed to Ginsberg the belief that they "had just seen the finest group of pictures produced by Paramount in many years." Next meeting of the group is scheduled to take place at the studio in November.

Most of the execs participating in the conferences left over the weekend for New York, with Balaban slated to depart today. Attending the meet, besides Balaban and Ginsberg, were: Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Charles M. Reagan, veepee in charge of distribution; Y. Frank Freeman, veepee; Leonard Goldenson, veepee in charge of theatre operations; George Weltner, president of Paramount International; David Rose, managing director for Paramount in Great Britain; Fred Hutchinson, general sales manager for Great Britain; Russell Holman, eastern production manager; Claude F. Lee, director of public relations, and Curtis Mitchell, advertising and publicity director.

FIGHT FILM SHOWS EIGHT ROUNDS OF WALTZING

Newsreel of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight, currently showing at the Pantages theatre, went into slow motion in the eighth round to make the fight look fast. The first seven rounds were slow motion, engineered by Louis and Conn, without any help from the boys behind the cameras.

New York politicians, Tom Dewey, Jim Farley and others, shoved their profiles in front of the lenses in the preliminary works, and then came seven rounds with Joe playing Simon Legree and Billy playing Eliza crossing the ice, except that there wasn't any Ohio River to cross in the Yankee Stadium and Billy got caught up with. Along about the seventh round there were distinct sounds of whistling, which could not have come from the feathered songsters of that vicinity. There are no mocking birds in the Bronx. They hang around Tin Pan Alley.

The final round, in slow motion, makes the picture look good. It shows Louis cutting loose with a slug to the belly and a hook to the chin and walking away with a bored expression. You wonder why he didn't do it in the first. Maybe Joe can tell you more about it.

Johnston Plan To Hypo Pix Abroad

Eric Johnston, prexy of Motion Picture Association, hopes foreign revenues can be increased to 50 per cent of the total intake by U.S. film companies, he announced at a conference Saturday as he planed out after two-week stay here. His plan to hypo rentals abroad is to work out fair agreements with nations which now are excluding or restricting American films, plus seeing that some of these nations get better mechanical facilities for exhibiting pictures.

20th Secretary Takes Film Role

Jean Bane, 20th-Fox secretary, after turning down several screen test offers finally went for the movie Cinderella stuff over the weekend. She has been cast for an important role in William Bacher's "Carnival in Costa Rica." Job was wished on her while she was working as secretary for Leonide Massine, choreographer for "Carnival."

FILM CELEBRITIES ATTEND RAFTERY NUPTIALS

Edward C. Raftery, prez of United Artists, was married on Saturday to Rae Madelle Thetford, in a ceremony at St. Gregory's Church attended by scores of film industry notables and execs.

Charles Fleming, of Milford, Mass., was best man, and his wife was matron of honor. Ushers were Capt. Tom Raftery, USN, the bridegroom's brother; Robert Titus, of Los Angeles, and Norman Lawlor, NY attorney. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Sammon, assistant pastor of St. Gregory's.

The bride, daughter of a late Fort Worth, Tex., oil magnate and rancher, and Raftery, first met about 18 months ago at a party given by friends in Beverly Hills. During the 1938 Texas Centennial Exposition the bride appeared as a dancer-model in Billy Rose's show. This is her first marriage and the second for the UA prexy, who was widowed two years ago.

A reception was held at the Ambassador hotel following the ceremony, and the couple will fly east on Tuesday to NY, where they will make their home.

BLUM DEFENDS FRENCH PIX DEAL

Paris, June 23.—Leon Blum Friday defended vigorously the much-criticized film pact between France and the United States, declaring he would have sacrificed the entire French industry, if necessary, to negotiate the loan. He said the U.S. made considerable concession in renouncing the 1936 agreement, allowing France to keep 30 per cent production time for French pictures. He said competition outside the 30 per cent would be entirely free and not restricted to American pictures alone.

' JUST FOR VARIETY '

THE GRAPEVINE: There's a story behind Harry Richman's current engagement at the Florentine Gardens—and his increased salary. When Richman played there two years ago, he got $2000 a week. Frank Bruni, however, charged against his salary the cover for any of Richman's guests. Harry burned but said nothing to Bruni. Came an offer to return, and Richman said the price now is $3000 a week, the extra one grand being for the cover charges, and 33 1/3 per cent of the gross above $25,000 a week for good will. And that's what he's getting now . . . "The Beginning or the End" is getting the rush act at Metro. Studio wants to get the atomic bomb feature into theatres while discussion is hypoed by the Bikini tests and United Nations' attempts to devise controls for atomic power . . . Frank Borzage has decided against allowing his discovery, Catherine McLeod, to make another picture before release of "I've Always Loved You." Borzage and Republic, which shares her contract with the director-producer, have turned down a number of offers from other lots. Borzage wants her introduced to the public in his picture and won't take a chance on another producer jumping the gun on him . . . Metro would like Madeleine Carroll for the role of Kay in "The Hucksters" . . . Jules Furthman will produce "Winter Kill," the Steve Fisher story, at Warners . . . Looks like Columbia vs. Sir Alexander Korda over "Carmen." Studio had announced Rita Hayworth in the musical, now Korda comes along with plans for his own "Carmen" with Paulette Goddard in the title role . . . Cynical note amid the orange blossoms and church bells and June brides is conveyed by Herman Millakowsky. He's re-titling "Fear" to "With This Ring."

HOLLYWOOD CAROUSEL: William Eythe, who arrived in England June 8 to star in "Meet Me at Dawn," writes: "You can imagine my amazement when all of a sudden I saw the skies light up with searchlights, mock buzz-bombs, fireworks and droves of airplanes. I really turned green. But as I headed back toward Hyde Park I saw the thousands of merry-makers on the streets and soon learned the Germans weren't attacking again." Seems he arrived in London in the midst of the V-E Day celegration . . . William Desmond recalled his first experience with that monster, Sound, 20 years ago. They planted the mike in a phony mug of beer, Desmond explained, "and when an overenthusiastic actor tried to blow the froth off, it darn near wrecked the sound man's ears!" . . . The Van Heflin infant is now expected to arrive July 14 instead of July 4 . . . Commencement address at the Pasadena Playhouse was given by Howard Lindsay . . . Character billing himself as "Ex-GI" has been parading Hollywood Boulevard with a sandwich-board proclaiming, "I will walk Hollywood Boulevard until I get a part in a picture" . . . OFF THE LOTS: Natalie Schafer and John McClain at Billingsley's. Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan attending the wedding anniversary lunch for the Ted Sissons at Lucey's. Bob Hutton lunching at the Beverly Hills Club with Arlene Dahl, Jane Harker, Suzi Crandall. Mark and Annelle Stevens, Patricia Knight and Cornel Wilde, at The Kings. Vivian Blaine and Manny Frank at The Players. Marjorie Jackson and Jimmy Alexander at Biltmore Bowl.

CALL SHEET: PEGGY CUMMINS, learning to iceskate for her role in "The Late George Apley" at the Westwood Rink, took a nasty spill over the weekend. Suffered ice burns so serious she won't be able to resume her lessons for another week . . . EVE ARDEN has grabbed a plum role in Metro's "The Arnelle Affair" . . . BARBARA STANWYCK will work all but two days during the shooting schedule of "Cry Wolf" . . . JIM WARREN, the RKO western star, was slated to appear at a theatre in his hometown, Marietta, O., for the opening of "Badmen's Territory," at which he was to conduct a pony raffle. His father filled in, and won a pony himself . . . JOHN GOULD FLETCHER, poet who won the 1938 Pulitzer Prize, visited RKO's "Beat the Band" set to catch Frances Langford's version of rhyme and rhythm . . . KATHARINE HEPBURN gave an impromptu party on the "Sea of Grass" set for five wounded vets from Birmingham hospital . . . GREER GARSON returns today from Monterey where she's been resting during a short layoff from "Sacred and Profane" . . . PAUL HENREID'S scenes in "Deception" are being rushed at Warners so he can attend the NY preem of "Of Human Bondage."

ON THE SOUNDTRACK: Vaude acts are getting stranger and stranger, according to Bill McElwain, who books the Million Dollar and Lincoln theatres. Latest act offered is eight-year-old Coleen Alpaugh, touted by her agent as doing a rope-twirling act with 50-foot lariat and using as a partner in her act a seven-foot snake . . . Proud father dept.: Cecil Kellaway's son Peter has been awarded the Sir William Oslar award for the best paper on the history of medicine submitted by a Canadian or American student. His other son, Brian, is a reader for David O. Selznick but plans to start an acting career with appearances in summer stock in August . . . Royalty note: Bing Crosby and Barney Dean, his gag writer, are sleeping in the beds used by the King and Queen of England at Jasper Park Lodge in 1940 . . . Ella Mae Morse is setting a new record at Billy Gray's Band Box, according to manager Max Gold . . . Mona Freeman is talking about asking for her release from Paramount, since she's been on loanout since signing and has never made a film on her home lot. Currently she's in "That Brennan Girl" at Republic . . . Bob Hope wired his pals—"I'm appearing in places so large that your voice comes back to you three days later."—D.D.T.

SILVER DRAMATICS LIGHT FARE AS 'OZZIE' SUB

No newcomer to CBS, the dramatic display of Silver Theatre has been eased back into its old Sunday niche, this time as custodian of the "Ozzie and Harriet" time segment for the seersucker period. It's pretty much as it has always been, a faint carbon of Lux, Screen Guild Players and a half dozen others and with Conrad Nagel's silken tones fitted to the narration although he is billed as director. Ted Bliss and Sterling Tracy competently discharge that duty.

Given a bright, sparkling script by True Boardman bearing the title of "Romance, Inc.," it proved a glove-like fit for the talents of Virginia Bruce, Elliott Lewis, Herb Vigran and assorted AFRA supporters. Dialog was crisp and breezy and many of the situation laughs along the belly line. A note of static was the bellowing newspaper editor. Boardman should know there are still a few of the better news chiefs around who don't snort and shriek every time they give an order.

It's an old device of bringing back the star for a curtain call and while most use it it might not be a bad idea to try a new piece of business. Of course it's another way of sneaking in a commercial from the star's own lips, but isn't the public hep by now? Next week Dane Clark is the cast topper in another Boardman original, "Return of Tomorrow."

"Silver" will carry its weight on the summer scale but it won't tip it too far audience-wise. Just a modest little summer sub, no more, no less.

George Nokes Upped

George Nokes, 9-year-old screen veteran, has been boosted to featured credit line in cast of Hal Roach's "Curley."

LITVAK WRAPS UP 'COUP DE GRACE'

New York City, June 23.—Anatole Litvak, just returned from several weeks' trip to England and France, where he wrapped up a deal for the film rights to "Coup de Grace," French novel he'll produce for Enterprise. He also set British release for "Snakepit," but it is not definite whether the latter will be made for Enterprise or RKO. He wants a French star for femme lead in "Coup" and interviewed several. However, he is indefinite on which one he will use. Location shooting may also take place in France for the film. Litvak is planning to return to the Coast Tuesday, following huddles with RKO home office chiefs.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

There's a feud a'brewin' between two of the soap giants, or rather their agencies, and unless an understanding is reached on ethics and other considerations it may reach the shootin' stage. In the contending camps are J. Walter Thompson, representing Lever Bros., and Pedlar & Ryan, carrying the ball (and the billing) for Procter & Gamble's Camay. It is charged and corroborated that the Camay chowd, in lining up talent and properties of big indie producers for the new dramatic series to be emceed by Hedda Hopper, have falsely misrepresented that Luz Radio Theatre uses no indie properties and therefore there could be no conflict. This is flatly denied by JWT's Cornwell Jackson, who cites that eight indie pictures were dramatized on Lux this past season. They are Hunt Stromberg's "Guest in the House;" Cagney's "Blood on the Sun;" Skirball Productions' "Guest Wife;" Vanguard's "I'll Be Seeing You;" Goldwyn's "Wonder Man;" Seymour Nebenzal's "Whistle Stop;" International's "Tomorrow Is Forever," and Mutual's "Pardon My Past."

Lux is not looking for a fight nor does it want one but allows that the tactics of its competitor are not of exemplary character. Ted Sisson, radio head of Pedlar & Ryan, denies that any misrepresentations were made in swinging the indies into line and that all dealings are clean and above board. According to Jackson, reps of three indie producers, contacted by Sisson or others identified with the Camay setup, have gotten word to him of the alleged misrepresentations. Lux has no bone to pick with Camay over the fact that it will get the properties for nothing while JWT pays a maximum of $1,000 per script, nor does it fear Camay's reported entry into the testimonial field. Camay first proposed the radio tieup to Society of Independent Producers but failing there due to the objections of David O. Selznick and others, made contact with individual producers. Gil Ralston, night time radio head of P & G, stated that properties and players are sufficient to last out the first 44 weeks. P & G is still shopping around for fall time to spot its half carbon of Lux, which closes out its season tonight.

Jackie Coogan is being dropped around Aug. 1 by Emerson Drug for "Inner Sanctum," which was scuttled by Lipton tea. Client conceded that "Forever Ernest" was improving fast but high rating show was needed for the summer when Bromo Seltzer sales are at peak. Iced Lipton tea is also sipped in hot weather yet they dropped the highly regarded "Sanctum" for the orphaned "Vox Pop."

Chain breaks . . . Saturday niters wallowed in a sea of minuses and nary a fractional rise shows in the Hooper advance. "Can You Top This" took a 3.4 drop to 9.1; Academy Award Theatre sunk to 3.7 on a 1.6 skid; Judy Canova was off 2.9 for 10.5; "Mayor of the Town" 6.8, off 2.2; Ralph Edwards 10.3, off .7; Hit Parade 9.1, off 3.4. Others were not available. It was also slough season for the Sunday matinee crowd. "Electric Hour" lost more than it has, skidding 3.4 to 2.4. Westinghouse was off .1 to 6.3; "One Man's Family" 7.6, up .6; "Darts for Dough 3.9, up .1.2 . . . Edward R. Murrow, CBS veepee in charge of public affairs, due in July 1 for series of sessions with department heads . . . Eddie Cantor and his party of 12 trained in Friday from Denver on the UP's new Transcon . . . Dick Compton red as a beet from Mexican vacation and telling about the 250-pound tarpon hooked by the missus. His got away . . . Bill Burch relinquishing directorship of "Truth or Consequences" at season's end July 6 and next fall will be at the helm of the Gene Autry show for Ruthrauff & Ryan. He will continue, however, to contribute ideas to T or C . . . Tol Ware Avery, late of Radio Tokyo for Uncle Sam, back to his kilocycle trade of acting . . . Don Bernard's secession from the Abbott and Costello menagerie still leaves him in a supervisory capacity for the Esty agency, of which he is Coast radio director . . . Edna Best, director of "Meet Corliss Archer," couldn't resist the siren call of pictures and will be back before the cameras in 20th's "The Late George Apley."

There being no subject of livelier interest to the trade than Freddy Wake-man's "The Hucksters," we feel safe in assuming then that you would get a walloping yock out of the text of the one-minute transcription used on N.Y. stations to stimulate sale of the book outside the narrow confines of the profession. That the publishers would use the medium Wakeman so ruthlessly rakes over the hot coals to peddle the tome is a wacky bit of irony in itself. Copy writer of the spot was instructed to "include all the worst features of radio commercials" and this is how he complied:

Voice: Love dat book.

Chorus: Tune of "Reuben, Reuben."

Announcer: Freddie Wakeman who wrote "Shore Leave" has another book today. Advertising folks should read it. Learn what Wakeman has to say.

Voice: Um-um! Love dat book.

Announcer: I'm talking about "The Hucksters," that new novel by Frederic Wakeman that is just about the creamiest, crunchiest literary dish ever served up between the covers of a book. Yes, folks, read "The Hucksters," and no matter what ails you you'll feel better instantly. "The Hucksters" is about the radio business and all those bright people who entertain you from dawn to dark and from dark to dawn, or do they?

Voice: Love dat book.

Chorus: Every listener should read it. Learn what Wakeman has to say.

Announcer: Ask your bookseller today for that mild, mellow, chocolate-coated bombshell, "The Hucksters." It's the Book-of-the-Month Club choice for June and published by Rinehart & Co. who are paying through the nose for this commercial.

Falsetto aside: Aren't they foolish!

FIGHT BROADCAST RACKS UP 67.2 SUPER-HOOPER

Highest Hooperating for a commercial program in the history of radio was chalked up by the Louis-Conn fight on both the ABC network and KECA, the latter posting a super terrific 70.1. The national figure was 67.2. Only President Roosevelt's 79 and 78.1 were higher and those broadcasts were carried by all four networks. The big busteroo in Yankee Stadium sponsored by Gillette used ABC exclusively and for competition had Kay Kyser, "Great Moments in Music," "Holiday For Music," "Spotlight Bands" and "Real Stories."

Winners in ABC's guessing contest were Jimmy Fritz, Boyd Co., Inc., 69.6; John Hurley, Daily Variety, 69; Kenneth Stevener, Pacific Press, 68.7; Fred Graham, 68, and Marguerite Higgins, Northrop Aircraft, 68.3. Lowest guess was one and highest 87. Other KECA statistics: 950 calls were made by Hooper interviewers; fight pulled 97.8 of the audience, with 71.7 of the sets in use; 1,100 cards were mailed out in Jack O'Mara's promotional guessing contest—of which 532 were returned. Special Hooper survey for KECA was conducted on the customary basis of random sampling.

NEWSPAPER GUILD NAMES AGENTS TO PEDDLE AIR SHOW

Newspaper Guild has authorized Robert D. Andrews and Daniel M. Winkler to try to peddle a radio program package idea tabbed "The Newspaper Guild of the Air—The Story Behind the Front Page." Andrews and Winkler concocted the idea and will produce it.

Program will dramatize newspapermen heroes and their deeds, and tied in will be stunt of making weekly cash awards for outstanding journalistic feats, selections being made by national committee of Guild members. Membership in Guild will not be necessary for a newsman to nab a reward, according to Andrews and Winkler, who made the tie-up with Guild through its toppers and got idea approved by unanimous vote of delegates convening at Guild convention being held at Scranton, Penna.

Hall Will Co-Star In 'Last Mohicans'

Jon Hall, via loanout route from Samuel Goldwyn, has been set by Sam Katzman to co-star with Michael O'Shea in "The Last of the Mohicans," which Kay Pictures will produce for Columbia release.

Greene Medal

Richard Greene, 20th-Fox player, will receive a citation at the Vancouver, B.C. Diamond Jubilee for his outstanding war record in the British Tank Corps. He will attend the Jubilee starting July 9 and return here for start of his role in Gene Markey's "No Wedding Ring" in August.

INDIES ASK VOICE IN ANTI-TRUST

was reached at the exhibs conclave held here in connection with the 27th annual convention of the New Jersey Allied and eastern regional Allied.

Exhibs will probably work through the Department of Justice in getting in recommendations on the decree provisions. Decision on the move followed interpretation of the court's findings by Jesse Stern, CIEA chairman, and George Gold, of Allied. Stern said two weeks ago that the decision had many favorable points for indies but it didn't go far enough, particularly in the need of amplification of the issues concerned with clearance.

Greater cleavage between indie and affiliated operations is seen by both Stern and Gold as a result of the court's decision. They declared that some points formerly in favor of the affiliated circuits are now changed to favor the indie, and insisted that it is now more important than ever for the indies to stand up against the affiliated.

Theatremen, in a closed session, also went into 16m competition. They were advised by Allied leaders that wherever possible they should go into narrow-gauge exhibition themselves to prevent someone else coming along in opposition.

Three-day convention closed Friday night with Paramount hosting a cocktail party and testimonial to Harry Lowenstein, retiring president.

9 Points of Law

Warners announced over weekend that final tag for "The Secret," Joan Crawford-Van Heflin co-starrer, would be "Possessed." Metro in 1931 put out Joan Crawford starrer with same single-word title.

PATHE WINS PRIZE ON COVERAGE OF GROMYKO 'WALK'

Atlantic City, June 23.—National Headliners Club has made award to Pathe for the year's leading newsreel job. Honor was for cutting and editing on the clip of Gromyko's walkout from the United Nations Security Council meeting.

Inasmuch as all the best newsreel coverage of the year, including the Gromyko incident, was pooled, it was decided to use cutting and editing as a basis for the annual award rather than news coverage itself, in which there was little competition. Walton Ament of Pathe accepted the presentation.

In radio, Tom Slater of Mutual took kudoes for coverage of radar contact with the moon; Raymond Swing, ABC, for atomic bomb series, and Max Jordan, NBC, for the exclusive on the Jap surrender.

Murphy Aquaretta Shows Promise

New York, June 23.—Elliott Murphy last night preemed his Aquaretta on the NY World Fair site where Billy Rose cleaned up with his Aquacade during the Fair. This new two-act water spectacle, "Mr. Winkle's Holiday," looks likely to lure copious coin inasmuch as the production has many elements calculated to lure paying customers out to Flushing Meadows. There's an array of water nymphs, fancy and comic divers and a book-show patterned on nursery rhymes.

Lawrence Tierney 'Devil Thumbs' Star

Lawrence Tierney set by RKO over the weekend in starring role in "The Devil Thumbs a Ride." Felix Feist will direct the film and Herman Schlom will produce under the executive supervision of Sid Rogell.

FIRE IN 'RAMROD' BARN SCORCHES McCREA, DeFORE

Zion National Park, Utah, June 23.—A purposely planned fire, used in sequence of Enterprise Productions' "Ramrod," which is lensing here on location, got out of control Saturday and endangered half a dozen lives, including Joel McCrea and Don DeFore.

Sequence called for a barn to burn, and structure was stuffed with oil-soaked hay and lighted. Unanticipatedly, a stiff wind blew up, carrying flames across set to ranch house. McCrea and other actors in scene were driven from area by heat and blaze, but all hands pitched in and finally brought fire under control. McCrea's hands and arms were singed. Film crewman Fred Parkerhouse suffered a broken ankle when he tripped and tumbled into a chuckhole while running from the path of fire. Still photog Charles Welbourne's hands were burned. Veronica Lake, co-starring with McCrea in the Harry Sherman production, viewed conflagration, but was well out of danger as she was not scheduled to work in the scene.

BROADWAY GROUP RALLIES 'ROUND PRICE CONTROL

Washington, June 23. — Large group of show business personalities will come here from New York tomorrow to take part in an 11th hour rally to save the price control program. Among those slated to make the trip are Canada Lee, Morton Gould, Ruth McArthur, Judy Holiday, Louise Horton, Helen Marcy, Rosette Lenoir, Lis Wheeler, Susy Reed, Thelma Schnee, Stella Adler, Paula Lawrence, Pete Johnston, Lee Hayes, Orson Welles, etc.

While Broadwayites are expected to kick up considerable fuss, there is no indication that they will affect the decision of the House-Senate Conference Committee now completing a bill which will result in increases in most prices.

Maxie Sets Stars

Ben Blue with Patti Moore and Ben Lessy will star in the new show opening at Slapsy Maxie's the first week in July. Theatre-restaurant is being redecorated and will reopen after a month's darkness.

Harry Joe Brown and Randolph Scott have formed producing partnership to be known as Producers-Actors Corp., and will release first picture, Zane Grey's "Twin Sombreros," through Columbia. Production, to star Scott and be produced by Brown, will start first week in September and be filmed in Cinecolor.

Allen LeMay, set to write script, is in on deal and will be associated in production with Brown throughout picture. LeMay will be groomed for direction, and probably will handle directorial reins on company's second film, untitled novel by LeMay. Picture will be shot mostly on location in Monument Valley and Sedona, Ariz. Brown and Scott previously were associated on two pictures, "Western Union" at 20th-Fox and "Desperadoes" at Columbia.

SORRELL PLEDGES SUPPORT TO MACHINISTS

Herbert K. Sorrell, CSU prexy, told workers that "if the studios want a strike we know how. If we have to strike we will pick up where we left off last year at Warners, and you know we were moving on Metro next at that time." Sorrell said this week will be the proving ground for whatever action is to be taken and announced a second mass meeting to be held next Sunday. There is also a possibility that a special mass meeting will be called for the middle of the week, he said.

Sorrell gave an account of wage and contract negotiations with the majors stressing that studios have failed to come through with anything satisfactory to date. He declared that [illegible] are not likely to settle for [illegible] but a 36 hour week. In [illegible] to major negotiations, Sor[illegible] outlined a meeting held Friday with Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association. Both organizations offered interim deals much better than those put forth by majors.

Painters and carpenters will continue to refuse to work on Technicolor sets until majors abide by AFL arbitration directive awarding machinists work to the IAM union. Sorrell charged collusion by studios [illegible] some labor leaders to keep film [illegible] tured up, and declared that if [illegible] would put machinist question to arbitration, even though point has settled by AFL committee, the painters would return to work.

Jack Stehr of Lodge 1185, James Skelton, carpenters, Roy Tindall, IBEW Local 40, Ed Mussa, Set Designers and Decorators, and William Esterman, attorney, were other speakers at last night's meeting, all promising continued support of CSU in its fight to aid IAM.

Silverstone Back from Middle East

New York, June 23.—Emanuel Silverstone, special home office representative for 20th-International, has returned from a tour of the company's branches in the Middle East. He was abroad for four months, visiting Iran, Iraq, Syria, Palestine, Egypt and Greece.

BRITAIN DECORATES G'D CARPENTER

George Full, Enterprise carpenter, [illegible] planes to Washington July 9 to receive "His Majesty's Medal," Britain's second highest award, which will be presented by President Truman in White House ceremony. Full won medal for wiping out enemy machine gun nest near Landsberg, Germany, in 1945, as member of First Division. He also holds Silver Star with cluster, Purple Heart with two clusters, and ETO ribbon with five battle stars.

Cantor, Bristol-Myers Part; Eddie Joins Up With Pabst

Eddie Cantor terminated his contract with Bristol-Myers last Friday and joins up with Pabst in the fall as seasonal replacement for Danny Kaye. Parting was by mutual consent and the drug firm will move Ed Gardner's "Duffy's Tavern" into the Wednesday NBC spot. Young & Rubicam is now negotiating with a client for the Gardner-vacated Friday night time on NBC.

Cantor was under contract to Pabst for the fall of 1947 but the brewers were eager to have the starting date moved up a year. When he sought his release from B-M, the sponsor began to show an interest in Joan Davis but the latter refused to consider any but Cantor's Wednesday night time. It was then that Gardner, who was promised the Wednesday time in the event of Cantor's leave-taking, put a price of $200,000 on the time should B-M accede to the wishes of Miss Davis.

Miss Davis is still under contract to Lever Bros. (Swan soap) for another year but the client is willing to release her from the commitment if she can make a deal elsewhere. It is pointed out in the trade that the Wednesday night time may pose a hazard to Gardner if, in the opposing slot, Dinah Shore doubles up with Frank Sinatra as has been proposed and is now in negotiation.

Stan Keller, eight-piece group which has been at Astor, NY, for past two years, set for Antlers hotel, Colorado Springs, for eight weeks commencing July 12.

Lionel Hampton swelling his lineup of bookings hereabouts by getting inked into Lincoln vaudfilmer for week of Oct. 1.

Four Notes open 13-week stand at Radio Room, starting Sept. 2.

Joe Green has sold two originals, "Purple Is Purple" and "I Wouldn't Trade One of Your Kisses" to Metro. Latter will be used in score of Joe Pasternak's production, "This Time for Keeps."

"Grievin' My Heart Out for You," published by Peer International, has been recorded for Victor by the Sons of the Pioneers.

Rufe Davis, Billy Machell and Don Zelaya have been signed to follow the Duncan Sisters in Bunny Weldon's Follies in San Diego's Paris Inn.

HENREID TO PROD. 'FRANZ LISZT' AS 1ST INDIE CHORE

Paul Henreid confirmed, over the weekend, that his initial stint as producer-star will be "The Life of Franz Liszt." Actor had been anxious to do filmization of the composer's biog for some time, and at one time there were discussions between himself and Warner Bros. on the production.

Understood that since studio has nixed the deal, actor has decided to do it as his initial indie deal. Actor, whose current chore is with Bette Davis in "Deception," is dickering with Ida Lupino to co-star with him in the projected film. Actor will start his film shortly after completion of his current Warner Bros. chore.

James Elliott Buys Farce for B'way

Purchase of three-act farce, "Accidentally Yours," from Pauline Williams by James S. Elliott for fall production on Broadway was completed over the weekend. Deal was made through Ned Bergen of the George Ward agency.
